Races contested for Charlevoix City Council, mayoral elections

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The Charlevoix Courier recently asked the candidates running for Charlevoix City Council and mayor in the upcoming Nov. 6 general election as of Wednesday to respond to a series of questions. Today, Friday is the deadline to file as a write-in candidate. Current 1st Ward council member Lyle Gennett is unopposed running for re-election.

Name: Shane Cole

Office seeking: 3rd Ward city council member

Age: 50

Occupation: Retail manager

Experience (in office): Four years on planning commission and four years on city council

Why have you chosen to run for this office?

This will be my third term and during that time the council has come together as team to tackle very tough issues with the bad economy. We have been able to keep balanced budgets with no city program cut or any layoffs. I want to keep the positive momentum going and that is why I have chosen to run again

Cole

What do you view as the most important issues facing the city?

We need to stay focused on keeping people, jobs and business in the city. With the economy slow to rebound, it is important for all entities to work together to make Charlevoix a place to live and work. One example on how the city council, working together, has created new jobs in town was through passing the tax abatement for a local industry which resulted in the creation of six to 10 new jobs.

What is the city doing well and/or what could it do better?

With reduced revenues from state and property taxes, the city has done an outstanding job keeping people employed, keeping the budget balanced without cutting programs all while increasing the general fund. Our marina has been a great asset to our community during the summer months, we should continue to work on making Charlevoix a year-round destination for both tourism and business.

Name: Shirley Gibson

Office seeking: 3rd Ward city council member

Age: 65

Occupation: Retired

Experience: Previously elected to city council. Served from 2001-07, also previously served on the city planning commission from 1994-2000.

Why have you chosen to run for election?

I have chosen to run for city council again, one, because I want to; and two, (because) I think it is disgraceful that no present city council member from any ward has had a challenger for five years. The voters need a choice and the 3rd Ward has a choice for the first time in a few years.

Gibson

What do you view as the most important issues facing the city?

I think the city will always have challenges with budgetary issues, but at this time, the city has a very qualified staff and they are able to address monetary issues in a very positive manner without wasting taxpayer money. I also believe it is very important to protect our parks, beaches and marina areas from any sort of development (big or small). So, it would be prudent for the city to develop a strict policy to address this issue.

What is the city doing right and/or what could it do better?

I would like to see the city allocate

Police chief: New ordinance keeps swimmers at bay

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

A new ordinance approved earlier this year that dramatically increased the sanctions — including the possibility of jail time — for swimming in the Pine River Channel appears to have had exactly the effect city officials were seeking.

City of Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan told the Courier earlier this week that the instances of people — usually teens and young adults — was down dramatically this past summer from recent years.

Doan attributes the marked drop off in channel swimming to a new ordinance the city council passed this past spring making it a misdemeanor crime now punishable by up to a $500 fine and/or up to 90 days in jail.

The city council first enacted the ban on swimming in the channel in 2007 amid concerns about boat traffic and dangerous currents.

That ordinance prohibited swimming or wading in the channel from just east of the drawbridge to the north and south pierheads extending into Lake Michigan. Violators faced a municipal civil infraction punishable by Crews from Holiday Lighting Services from Manchester, Mich. install lights on trees along Bridge Street near Park Street Wednesday.

Bridge Street lights set to glow anew by Friday

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

If Mother Nature cooperates and no unforeseen problems crop up, by Friday night the trees along Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix will be newly aglow, this time in a warm white light.

Crews from Holiday Lighting Service of Manchester, Mich., began installing 28,600 new lights in the trees on Wednesday after city officials approved the project last month.

The new lights will replace the current lights that were originally put up in 2007. Those lights, Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority Executive Director Keith Carey said, had been problematic from the start.

Woman injured, home damaged in Sunday fire

STEVE ZUCKER

One person was injured in a fire that caused extensive damage to a house in Charlevoix Sunday.

City of Charlevoix Fire Chief Paul Ivan identified the injured woman as Marie McSawby, 80. Ivan said McSawby was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital with what he described as non-life threatening injuries. However he said she was admitted to the hospital overnight.

According to Ivan, firefighters were called to a rental home at 601 Sheridan St. shortly before 5 p.m. to a report of a fire in the building.

When the first fire crews arrived, the fire involved about half the house and McSawby was found sitting in the front yard.

All other occupants of the house were already out at that time, Ivan said.

With the assistance of crews from the Charlevoix Township Fire Department, firefighters were able to put out the fire, which was concentrated on the first floor of the house. Ivan said the first floor of the house sustained extensive damage and some damage extended to the second floor, attic and basement.

The home was not inhabitable after the fire. Fire officials contacted the American Red Cross to provide assistance to the displaced family, Ivan said. Ivan said he does not know if the family had renter's insurance, but the building's owner — listed on county tax records as Jane Lawson of Charlevoix — did have insurance on the house.

One firefighter was also taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital by ambulance to be treated for fatigue and released a couple hours later.

Fire crews were on the scene for about two and a half hours, Ivan said. He said the fire is being treated as accidental in nature.

The Charlevoix Police Department and Charlevoix County Sheriff's office also assisted at the scene with traffic control.

Funding on track for first phase of recreational trail

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

A $300,000 grant from the Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund, if accepted by Charlevoix County, would mean phase one of the construction of a recreational pathway from Boyne City to Charlevoix is fully funded by grants and contributions.

The commission unanimously voted to table accepting the grant at their Wednesday meeting so that its wording can be reviewed by county attorney Brian Graham.

"It appears to create extensive obligations" such as a requirement that the first phase of the project be finished by 2014, said commissioner Richard Gillepsie, "We need to have our affairs in order before moving forward."

Richard Clem, a Charlevoix resident running for a seat on the county board of commissioners this November, addressed the board on the subject and suggested that rather than creating a recreational pathway separate from the road between the two cities, it could be less expensive for the county to create a large shoulder on the road, five feet on either side, for bicycles.

"It's insane that we're talking about spending $3 million, $4 million for a bike path," said Clem.

"It would have cost about $90,000, he said, to add space to the edge of the highway along a three mile stretch if it had been performed when work was done on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road over the past year.

"I think it's a great thing for the county. I just want to make sure we don't overspend on this stuff," said Clem.

But, said retired county planning director Larry Sullivan, also running for the board this fall. "The Natural Resources Trust Fund definitely would not fund that." The county would likely be on its own funding expanded shoulders, he said.

Sullivan

The $300,000 grant from the Department of Natural Resources would pay for about a third of the cost of phase one of the pathway. The section would run 3.2 miles from West Michigan Avenue in Boyne City to the Evangeline/Bay Township Line and cost a total of close to $1 million.

The county would pay for the $300,000 up front and the state would reimburse it for that cost soon after. Charlevoix County has also been conditionally approved for a $565,900 grant from the Michigan Department of Transportation for phase one of the path and has been offered funds equalling about $90,000 from the city of Boyne City, Evangeline Township, Top-of-Michigan Trails Council and Charlevoix Community Foundation. In all, the reimbursements, contributions and grants cover the full cost of the first phase of the project.

The county has until Saturday, Nov. 24, to decide whether they will accept the natural resources grant.

"The people that promoted the bike trail wanted it off the road," said board chair Joel Evans. "Typically when they build bike trails now it's always off the highway."

The consensus of a steering committee of about 100 people, along with public input, said commissioner Shirlene Tripp, was that a trail off of the roadway was desired.

"I thought it was already a go," she said.

"I'd like more protection for those people out there," she said, questioning the safety of having children ride bicycles on the side of the road.

Evans

Commissioner Ron Reinhardt expressed concern that the local sources of funds might not come through and the county would be responsible for paying a larger portion of the cost of the project.

Tripp

"All of these entities have committed funds," replied commissioner Chris Chistensen, leaving no reason to believe they would back out.

Reinhardt

Christensen

Phase two of the project runs about six miles from U.S. 31 to the old Camp Sea-Gull, a couple miles west of Horton Bay. It is estimated to cost about $3 million. A federal transportation enhancement grant the county applied for earlier this year was not approved for that phase of the project, necessitating the county to reapply for the grant or for funds to be raised locally.

Pool to host 'Spook Swim' this Saturday

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool will host a "Spook Swim" from 6-9 p.m on Saturday, Oct. 27.

The event will include pumpking carving and treats in the lobby, and scary music and "glow lights" on the pool deck. Also find out if pumpkins float and the winner of the Name Our Giant Inflatable Polar Bear contest will be announced. The winner will receive a private pool party with the polar bear and 20 guests.

Admission to the event is $3.50 for adults and $2 for students. The pool is located just north of Charlevoix at 11905 U.S. 31.

Dentist offers candy buy-back

One area dentist is redefining the phrase "put your money where your mouth is."

This Halloween, trick-or-treaters can bring their excess candy to Beacon Dental Center in Charlevoix, and receive $1 per pound. In addition all candy collected will be used to fill care packages for the deployed soldiers.

Dr. Michael Sullivan is leading this anti-decay movement by giving away dollars in exchange for cavity-provoking candy.

"Visiting your dentist twice a year and brushing daily are great preventative measures, but doing away with excess sweets altogether would really give your teeth a healthy boost," Sullivan said.

Last year Beacon Dental Center collected more than 250 pounds of candy and the staff hopes to collect more this year.

Candy will be collected at Beacon Dental Center the day after Halloween from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. The candy must be unopened.

For more information regarding the Candy Buy Back, contact Crystal Jewell at (231) 547-9141 or www.beacondentalcenter.com.

Charlevoix County approves storm water agreement 4-1

Charlevoix County will enforce storm water regulations recently enacted by several of its municipalities, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners decided in a 4-1 vote Wednesday.

Commissioner Richard Gillespie voted against the measure and commissioner Bob Diebenstedt was absent.

The goal of the storm water ordinance, is to prevent excessive run off into streams, lakes and onto neighbors' properties during construction.

The uniform legislation was developed in cooperation with municipalities in the county as well as the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council.

"I think that it's important to make a distinction here," said commissioner Chris Christensen, "We're not enacting a resolution ... We're doing nothing more than enabling the townships the ability to enforce their own ordinance."

The county soil erosion officer will be responsible for the enforcement of municipalities' ordinances.

"If the public has an issue with this, they should take it up with their township or village," said Christensen.

Gillespie, the lone commissioner voting against accepting an agreement to enforce the ordinance, said he thinks the regulation is overkill.

"More rules over more rules concern me," he said.

"If you don't have something like this in your township or county, you can't get those grants," said commissioner Shirlene Tripp of several recent grants secured in the county by the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council. "Down the road, I think this is going to make a big difference for our county."

The county's three cities, so far have chosen not to sign on to the ordinance. Some Charlevoix city officials have expressed concern about the ordinance usurping local control over development matters within the city.

Halloween happenings

Official Trick-or-Treating hours for Charlevoix will be 6-8 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 31.

Students from Charlevoix Elementary School will again be taking their annual Halloween Parade through downtown Charlevoix on Wednesday Oct. 31. The students will leave the school around 1:15 p.m. and make the rounds through downtown. The school will also be hosting a Family Halloween Costume Dance from 6-8 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 26 in the school's gym. Cost is $10 per family and proceeds benefit the fourth grade trip to Beaver Island.

LIGHTS

happy with the lights' bluish or "cool white" color, and Carey said, because of the way the lights were installed, the strands became prone to breakage from tree growth and wind. That made the display difficult and expensive to maintain.

Carey explained to the city council last month that the authority's board had placed the light replacement on the back burner until sufficient funds were available, but that all changed recently when some downtown merchants and others began a fundraising effort to help pay for the light replacement.

With pledges and $4,500 in authority funds that had been budgeted for light maintenance, the city council agreed to chip in $10,000 from the city's electric fund to move the project forward.

And this time, the lights will be a "warmer" color.

Since then all of the pledges — and then some — have come in pushing the amount on hand well past the original $22,000.

Carey said earlier that the extra funds will likely be divided between expanding the display a short distance north of the bridge and setting some money aside for future maintenance.

Anyone interested in contributing to the lighting project should mail or drop off their donations at Charlevoix City Hall, 210 State St.

Beneficial bacteria: Some germs are good for you

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

A few months ago I wrote about the importance of germs or bacteria. A whole new area of human medicine is developing as we learn more about the importance of "good" bacteria to our health. The time may come in future years when medical prescriptions could include injections of particular forms of bacteria to enhance our health.

History is important. Until 1982, the general consensus in medical practice was that no bacteria could live or thrive in the corrosive acidic environment of the human stomach. A pair of Australian doctors established that a bacterium named helicobacter pylori was a common inhabitant of the human stomach, and that in some people that organism was the cause of gastric and peptic ulcers. I was one of those people and had been hospitalized a few times with intestinal bleeding. It was a relief to discover that my recurrent ulcers could possibly be cured by a simple course of antibiotics. I did not receive such treatment for 15 years. The medical community is appropriately cautious about new treatments.

The study of helicobacter has led medicine to some interesting new ideas. Not only can the bacterium cause ulcers, it also most likely prevents the development of obesity and even asthma in young people. So we know that the same germ can be both troublesome and beneficial, depending on age, inheritance and a variety of environmental factors. The practice of medicine is about to become much more complicated.

Each of us harbors hundreds of different kinds of bacteria, viruses, yeasts and molds. The great majority of them are benign. Many are beneficial in preventing the establishment of more dangerous sorts of germs. The paltry few thousand genes that we inherited from our parents form a tiny fraction of the hundreds of thousands of genes that reside in our own bacteria, viruses and molds. Those bacterial genes are busy churning out a wonderful variety of chemicals that can serve to protect us as well as make us sick. Medicine is only beginning to understand how important our resident germs are. They are a vital part of what we are.

Dr. Martin Blaser from New York University Medical School is a leader in this new wave of medical ideas. He will be presenting a talk titled, "The Menace of Antibiotics" to a gathering of infectious disease experts. How can those valuable antibiotics be a menace? They not only kill the bacteria causing a disease or condition, but many of the beneficial ones as well. Should we abandon antibiotics? Of course not. But we should be more careful and thoughtful about their use.

What is emerging might be called an ecological approach to human medicine. As one commentator suggested, managing human health is more like managing a complex park than it is like keeping your lawn free of weeds. Each of us is a complicated community of many organisms living together. Good health is in part the result of managing our beneficial companions, not keeping ourselves germ-free.

We are all home to a community of untold numbers of microscopic organisms. Most of them are necessary for our continued good health.

Anyone who would like more information, more eloquently presented, is directed to the Oct. 22 issue of the New Yorker magazine.

Roger Knutson is a professor emeritus of biology from Luther College in Decorah, Iowa, where he taught for 30 years. He holds master's degree and a doctorate from the botany department at Michigan State University.

LOOKING BACK…

The lower channel from Round Lake to Lake Michigan was cut through in the fall of 1869 and the first piers were constructed in the early 1870s.Then the channel was gradually widened to its present width which it achieved in 1882, as a result of which more and larger vessels began to arrive in Charlevoix. At first, fishermen strung lanterns and flags along the end and inner side of the south pier to guide navigation after dark and in fog. But this was almost totally inadequate for the increased amount of maritime commerce the town was now attracting. So the city erected this lighthouse, about 20 feet tall, on the end of the south pier in May of 1880, little more than a scaffold supporting a box that encased a lantern at the top. Even this proved to be only a stopgap measure. Charlevoix finally received a fully functional lighthouse, built at the end of the north pier, in the summer of 1885.

National Friends of Libraries week

Editor:

Oct. 21-27, 2012, is the sixth annual celebration of National Friends of Libraries week making it a good time to publicly thank the Friends of the Charlevoix Library who contribute so much of their time and expertise to significantly enhance our services. Our Friends group re-organized in 2001 and over the course of the past 10 years they have donated more than $125,000 to cover the costs of children's programming and collections through their ongoing and annual book sale. The Friends have also donated more than $100,000 in other funds for specific projects and exhibits. Not only do our Friends help financially, they are also generous with their time, volunteering more than 2,200 hours every year.

I know that the Charlevoix Public Library is a source of pride for our community. Our Friends group is a source of pride as well as they embody all that we stand for. I hope this week everyone will call or visit the library to find out how they can join and support this outstanding group: www.charlevoixlibrary.org/about/friends or call (231) 547-2651.

Vote Jim Rudolph for Hayes Township trustee

Editor:

I first met Jim Rudolph when I became involved in Hayes Township governance in 2005 (Planning Commission and Board of Review). He quickly became a mentor and friend. Jim has always stood up for what he believes: to make Hayes Township a place where everyone can enjoy the beauty and bounty of the land while allowing people from many different walks of life to live side by side. He helped to fashion one of the best zoning ordinances in the state of Michigan to protect Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan from over development, while allowing people to create their own havens on the lake in an environmentally responsible fashion.

Jim was a leader in the effort to acquire Camp Sea-Gull to provide lake access and pleasure for Hayes Township residents and others. This beautiful piece of shoreline is one of the last remaining undeveloped stretches of lakeshore on Lake Charlevoix. If not for the economic downturn in 2008, it likely would have been purchased by a developer and turned into as many as 11 parcels with houses and docks. Now there is the opportunity to reserve this treasure for future generations of residents and friends to appreciate and enjoy. Jim is the only person currently running for Hayes Township Trustee who supports the acquisition of Camp Sea-Gull. Of the other two, one is in opposition and the other is uncommitted.

Jim is also a supporter of the proposed non-motorized trail along the Boyne City-Charlevoix Rd, which will help bring more tourists to our area.

By re-electing Jim Rudolph to the Hayes Township Board of Trustees, we will be ensuring that Hayes Township remains a place where all residents can live, work and enjoy life in the future.

Flu season is back

RACHEL BROUGHAM
Northern Michigan Review

With the first cases of influenza of the season confirmed in Michigan, health officials are urging many to get vaccinated and for everyone to be sure to wash your hands regularly to avoid the virus.

While influenza A and B viruses have been confirmed in Michigan, it is too early to tell what influenza viruses will circulate during this influenza season or how severe the influenza season may be.

"As with every flu season, we begin seeing cases in the fall just as we have this year," said James K. Haveman, director of the Michigan Department of Community Health. "We know that the flu vaccine is the single best way to protect against getting the flu.

Now that we've confirmed the first cases this season, this is an excellent time to remind Michigan residents to get the flu vaccine."

Despite confirmed cases, the Centers for Disease control and Prevention currently reports Michigan flu activity as "sporadic" the lowest of four influenza activity categories the federal government tracks. Sporadic flu cases are often seen in Michigan in the fall.

Activity typically peaks in late January through February, but can sometimes peak earlier or later, depending on the strain of flu and severity of the season.

The CDC recommends an annual flu vaccine as the best way to protect against influenza and will protect residents during the duration of flu season. The 2012-2013 flu vaccine will protect against influenza A (H1N1) 2009 virus, influenza A (H3N2) virus, and influenza B virus.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan, which covers Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties, is working with area communities, local schools and community partners to provide flu shot clinics throughout the area.

"Flu is unpredictable, but it's likely that H3N2, H1N1 and regular seasonal viruses will cause illness in the United States this flu season," said Linda Yaroch, health officer for the department.

The CDC recommends that everyone 6 months of age and older receive an annual flu vaccine.

Vaccination is especially important for those at high-risk for serious flu complications, including older people, pregnant women, children who are 6 months and older, people with certain health conditions, as well as contacts of high risk individuals such as new parents, health care professionals, household members, and caregivers.

Yaroch adds that even healthy people should get vaccinated against influenza, this year and every year.

The Health Department has vaccine in stock, and appointments are available for flu shots and other vaccines at its offices in Bellaire, Mancelona, Charlevoix, Petoskey/Harbor Springs and Gaylord, as well as at local schools and businesses, including several in Elk Rapids, Gaylord, East Jordan and Petoskey.

Cost for seasonal flu vaccination is $25. Medicaid and Medicare are accepted, as well as private insurance, or clients may pay by cash or check.

Call the Health Department at (800) 432-4121 to schedule an appointment. You can also visit www.nwhealth.org or www.facebook.com/nwhealthdepartment for details on flu clinics being offered at a school or business in your area.

The flu is a contagious respiratory illness caused by influenza viruses. It can cause mild to severe illness, and at times can lead to death. Between 1976 and 2007, national estimates of flu-associated deaths ranged from a low of about 3,000 to a high of about 49,000 people. The flu is more serious than the common cold but can be easily prevented and usually comes on suddenly. People who have the flu often feel some or all of these symptoms:

- Fever
- Cough
- Sore throat
- Runny or stuffy nose
- Muscle or body aches
- Headaches
- Fatigue

Some people may have vomiting and diarrhea, though this is more common in children than adults.

Meredith Manor receives $500,000 grant

The Federal Home Loan Bank of Indianapolis recently announced Meredith Manor was awarded a $500,000 grant from its Affordable Housing Program. The grant will help with the construction of 10 units of low-income senior housing in East Jordan.

Jane MacKenzie, executive director of Northern Homes Community Development Corporation and sponsor of Meredith Manor said, "There is a lot of need for affordable housing in Charlevoix County. The East Jordan Housing Commission has been a great help in purchasing the land for Meredith Manor and supporting the applications for funding."

To obtain the grant, Northern Homes CDC teamed with Charlevoix State Bank to submit an application to The Federal Home Loan Bank of Indianapolis. The application was part of an annual competition which encourages green building standards, services to promote successful aging in place, and leveraging of other funding sources, among other factors.

Tim LaBlance, vice president at Charlevoix State Bank said, "We're very happy to be involved in this much needed community project, especially because of the jobs it will bring to northern Michigan. It's the first time we've applied for Federal Home Loan Bank of Indianapolis grant funds and this is the last piece of funding needed for Meredith Manor. We're committed to East Jordan and its economic vitality. We invested in its downtown with the rehabilitation of an older building into our bank's offices as well as retail space."

The Federal Home Loan Bank of Indianapolis dedicates 10 percent of its annual net income to fund the Affordable Housing Program. It is privately funded and receives no taxpayer assistance.

Meredith Manor will be constructed on a site adjacent to the East Jordan Housing Commission's Lakeview Manor, an existing apartment community for seniors. The 10 one-bedroom apartments will be constructed with a HUD Section 202 capital award and rental assistance to assure its affordability to senior households. All the apartments will be in a single story building with a community room, office and laundry. Construction is scheduled to commence next spring, with completion by the end of 2013.

funds on a regular yearly basis to the Shade Tree Commission in order to start replacing trees in areas where the city has had to remove dead and/or diseased trees.

What qualities do you possess that make you a good candidate for the position you are seeking?

I have no special interests, no conflict of interest and stand to gain nothing from any decisions made at council meetings, and I will not support a cause that benefits a few at the expense of the many others who will be left footing the bills. I believe the citizens of the 3rd Ward will benefit from an open-minded candidate who will make decisions to preserve and protect our natural resources, spend taxpayer funds wisely and listen to the needs and desires of the community collectively.

Name: Greg Stevens

Office seeking: 2nd Ward city council member (incumbent)

Age: 56

Occupation: Semi-retired, board member at Third Day Fellowship and Outreach

Experience: Six years as city council member

Stevens

Why have you chosen to run for election?

I have served on the Airport Terminal Design Committee since its inception. I would like to see it through to completion and get plan approval. I enjoy working with the city manager and staff preparing the budget.

What do you view as the most important issues facing the city?

The city began operating and managing the airport last year. Since the takeover, the airport has operated with a positive balance, but there is still work to be done. The airport is the city's connection to the world and we are just starting to tap into this opportunity. With the proper management and new terminal building we can continue to draw more people into the city through our airport, for both pleasure and business.

The planning commission is currently working on a new zoning ordinance. In a few months this ordinance will be presented to council for approval. As a former planning commission member and current council member, I look forward to reviewing and implementing this progressive tool as it will help shape the city in coming years.

What is the city doing right and/or could it do better?

We were recently complemented by our auditors for being a fiscally solid city. Charlevoix ranked higher than most of the cities audited. They credited our city manager, city treasurer, and city council for their conservative mindset and willingness to adhere to the budget. Due to the watchful eye of the supervisor of the electric department, council recently purchased power 12 years into the future in an attempt to keep the electric cost as low as possible in the coming years for city residents.

One of the biggest issues and ongoing problems I see in the city is the flow of traffic downtown and pedestrian safety. We have looked at different ideas to alleviate the problem, but MDOT governs what we can change. Most communities our size don't have a U.S. highway running directly through them and have local control over their main by-ways.

What qualities do you posses that make you a good candidate for the position you seek?

In the past, I served the city residents for two years by serving on the housing commission and planning commission before being elected to council. While sitting on both these commissions; and also serving on the board of review since being on council. I have taken as many classes and training seminars as possible in an attempt to serve the citizens of Charlevoix with more knowledge and expertise.

I have given back to my community most of adult life. I have always believed you only get back from a community what you are willing to put into it. This is one of the reasons my wife and I opened Third Day Fellowship & Outreach; to help the people of this beautiful city.

Name: Leon Perron

Occupation: Owner of Celeste Murdick's Fudge

Why have you chosen to run for election?

The recent controversy involving the proposed fireplace in East Park sparked my interest. This is a very important position as it involves all areas and functions of local government. As a lifetime resident of Charlevoix, I feel it is time for me to become more involved in the community. I look forward to both the challenges and rewards of serving my fellow citizens.

What are the most important issues facing the city?

Financial stability and keeping taxes as low as possible. The city is currently in excellent financial condition and I commend the current elected officials and appointees for a job well done. I also will keep in mind where every dollar comes from; the taxpayers.

What is the city doing right and/or what could it do better?

Charlevoix was blessed with natural beauty. Our beaches, parks and recreational areas are of first class caliber. These public areas are the definition of community. I feel procedures need to be adopted to ensure the public has ample time and information to respond to proposed development in these most important properties.

What qualities do you possess that make you a good candidate for the position you are seeking?

My life experiences, including four years in the U.S. Army, more than 20 years in manufacturing (many as a supervisor), and 13 years as a small business owner dealing with the public every day have enabled me to develop a very good quality: the ability to listen. I realize many voices often are not singing the same tune, but I guarantee they will be heard.

Name: Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr.

Office seeking: Mayor (incumbent)

Age: 47

Occupation: Teacher, Charlevoix High School; owner, Carlson's Home Improvements

Experience: One term 1st Ward city council member, eight years (2004-present) as mayor

Carlson

Why have you chosen to run for election?

I feel that the current city council and administration have done an excellent job thriving through the tough economic times we have endured the past few years. I am proud to have been a part of a balanced budget with the continuation of great services we have provided. I want to help Charlevoix continue this practice into the future.

What are the most important issues facing the city?

With the cut backs in state funding, it is always a concern on how we can continue to provide services to our citizens. The rising costs of providing electricity, fuel prices at a high level and the costs of goods all impact how and what we can do to serve the citizens at the status quo. Our department heads and administration have done a great job looking into the future and planning accordingly. It is our job as council to provide them with all of the resources they need to accomplish this successfully.

What is the city doing right and/or what can it do better?

I believe the council has done an excellent job of working together. As some of our recent decisions have shown, we do not always agree on all of the issues, but the council always respects each other and listens to the viewpoints of their colleagues and their constituents before making their final decision. There are no hidden agendas or vendettas. It is always what they feel is best for the city of Charlevoix. In the end, even if they do not agree, they still have a deep respect for their decisions and work together very well.

We could do a better job of publicizing the information council acts upon to the public. We have addressed this and have started posting all agendas and minutes on the city's website.

What qualities do you possess that make you a good candidate for the position you are seeking?

I have experience that helps me understand the process city council operates under. I have always listened and have been honored to participate in events such as the Fourth of July parades, Venetian events, dedications and other events celebrating Charlevoix.

Name: Gabe Campbell

Office seeking: Mayor (write-in candidate)

Age: 79

Occupation: Retired

Experience: two years as mayor, 10 years on city council

Why have you chosen to run for election?

Because it is apparent that no one is listening to the people.

Campbell

What do you view as the most important issues facing the city?

Right now it is removing the fireplace structure from the park. Nobody wants to pay $7,000 to burn gas over the next 100 years.

What qualities do you possess that make you a good candidate for the position you are seeking?

I will listen. I believe that the mayor and council made a bad decision. The people want a recall, but I'm hoping that when the mayor and council see how angry the people are, that they will reconsider.

Reminder

a fine of $50 for the first offense, $75 for the second in two years and $100 for the third or subsequent offense in two years.

However, the ordinance did little to dissuade people from jumping from the piers on hot summer days. Often the situation turned into a game of cat-and-mouse between channel swimmers and police responding to calls and trying to catch them in the act.

After four years, a close call between the Beaver Island ferry, The Emerald Isle, and a swimmer in the channel last summer prompted the council (at the behest of council member Jill Picha) to take a look at upping the ante on the swimming ordinance.

Picha's (and eventually the rest of the council's) theory was that the $50 fine simply wasn't enough to make the swimmers (or their parents) take notice.

The revised ordinance added to the prior prohibition on "swimming or wading in the Pine River Channel:"

— Swim or wade within 15 feet of a (Pine River Channel) pier

— Dive from a (channel) pier

— Access the Pine River or Lake Michigan from a pier for the purpose of swimming or wading, or diving.

Doan said several large signs placed on or near both piers putting would-be swimmers on notice of the ordinance, also likely helped.

He said officers responded to very few reports of swimmers in the channel this summer and no one was arrested or charged under the new ordinance.

Doan said, for safety's sake, he's hopeful the trend will continue in years to come, but added that if people want to try their luck, he and his officers have no reservations about enforcing the ordinance.

JV FOOTBALL

JV rolls past East Jordan to finish strong season 7-2

The Charlevoix Rayder junior varsity football team wrapped up a strong season in stellar style on Thursday, Oct. 18, with a 41-0 win over East Jordan at Boswell Stadium.

The win lifts the Rayder JV's season record to 7-2 and leaves coaches in the football program excited for what's to come in the years ahead.

The Rayders scored 28 unanswered points in the first quarter and never looked back.

Charlevoix opened up the scoring on a 62-yard run by Justin Adkins just 1:20 into the game. Hunter Cox ran the ball in for the two-point conversion.

Charlevoix's next score came with 7:53 remaining in the first quarter on a Sam Hovie eight-yard TD run. Cox kicked the point after putting the Rayders up 15-0.

With 3:20 remaining in the first quarter, the Rayders scored again, this time on a two-yard plunge by Will Telgenhof. The point after attempt was no good.

Ben Boss wrapped up the first quarter scoring on a 13-yard run with 15 seconds left in the quarter. Cox kicked the point after to put the Rayders up 28-0.

The Rayders tacked on one more before halftime, when Turner Havens scored on a two-yard run. Cox again kicked the point after.

The final score of the night came with 1:40 remaining in the third quarter when Andrew Michaud scored on a six-yard run. The point after was no good.

Hovie led the Rayders' offense, picking up 78 yards on nine carries. Atkins had 62 yards on one carry, Telgenhof picked up 54 yards on five carries. Andrew Michaud had 22 yards on six carries, Boss had 19 yards on three carries, Havens had 18 yards on six carries, Spencer Stewart had 14 yards on five carries and Adam Michaud had nine yards on four carries.

In passing, quarterback Austin Putman went 3-for-3 for 29 yards. Hovie, Miles Windon and Telgenhof caught one pass each for 18, 9 and 2 yards respectively.

Putman led the Rayders on defense with four tackles (including two sacks) and one assist. Justin Atkins and Forrest Noirot had three tackles each and Telgenhof hauled in an interception.

"This was a total team win," Charlevoix coach Todd Klinger said. "The team controlled both sides of the ball for the whole game."

Klinger noted that East Jordan only managed to get two first downs and never crossed into Rayder territory.

He said the game also allowed everyone on the team to get "significant playing time." He said the coaches were also able to move some players around to try a new position.

"A few of the linemen who never get a chance to carry the football were able to play some running back. This was a very positive way to end a great season," Klinger said.

"The team finished our season with a 7-2 record that included three games that came right down to the last plays. It was a very exciting year for all, Coach Havens and I enjoyed coaching these young men and would like to thank them for all the time and hard work that they put in this year. This group has great potential to be a strong team in the future but they will need to put the time in the off-season to achieve that greatness. Therefore, all of the coaches look forward to working out with them and getting ready for a strong 2013 season."

YOUTH SOCCER

U12 youth soccer wraps up season with two wins

The Charlevoix U12 girls soccer team traveled to Alpena on Saturday for games against Harbor Springs and Alpena.

The Rayders defeated Harbor Springs by a score of 3-1 and defeated Alpena 7-2.

Scoring for the Rayders against Harbor was Megan Scholten with two goals and Elise Stuck added the third.

Against Alpena, Baby Hang scored two, Megan Scholten three and Elise Stuck and Emily Hinkley each had one.

The Rayders' defense led by Elise Stuck, Lilly Curtis, Caroline Jarema, Rylynn Sladek and Abby Paramo, shut down both opponents' scoring opportunities, coach Pete Scholten said.

He said strong efforts were made in the keeper position by Jillian Edwards, Emily Hinkley and Lily Curtis.

"Jillian Edwards made a tremendous stop in goal on an Alpena penalty kick," Scholten said.

He noted that The Rayders' mid-field kept the pressure on both teams by setting up many scoring opportunities.

The mid-field was led by Emma Buday, Emily Hinkley, Payton Novotny, Jillian Edwards, Abby Cunningham and Baby Hang.

The two wins were the teams' last games of the season. The girls ended the season with a record of 10-2.

Rayder alum takes over JV volleyball coaching

OLIVIA STORM
Charlevoix High School student

After 12 years of coaching varsity volleyball at Charlevoix High School, coach Elizabeth Shaw decided to take a year off this year because of the birth of her second child. Audra Randall, JV volleyball coach for the past eight years has now been moved up to the varsity level to coach for one year. Charlevoix had an opening for the JV coaching position and 23-year-old Bethany Pearson took the job.

Pearson started her volleyball career as a freshman playing at Charlevoix High School on the JV volleyball team. During the next three years of high school she moved up to varsity playing as a middle hitter. Pearson set the school record for 480 blocks. After graduating in 2007, she began coaching the seventh-grade volleyball team. She coached the seventh-grade volleyball team for two years, before moving up to the JV position.

"Going from coaching the seventh grade volleyball team to the JV volleyball team was a big change, but it went well," Pearson said. "I love the JV level, it's not too serious but enough to keep me busy with the team."

The freshman girls at Charlevoix High School, who made the JV volleyball team this year also had Pearson as their coach during their seventh grade volleyball season.

"It's amazing how even the coaching can change," said Yogi Hang, Charlevoix freshman JV volleyball player. "Bethany was a great coach in seventh grade, but she can show us so much more at the higher level."

The girls on the team said they look forward to spending time with Bethany.

"Bethany always puts us in better moods. She is always making us laugh and making us forget about all of our problems from school and home. She truly makes the perfect coach," Charlevoix JV volleyball player Kylee Scholten said.

Since Pearson ended her volleyball career her senior year, she knew she wanted to come back and get involved with the volleyball program again.

"The opportunity arrived and there was no way I was turning it down," Pearson said. "I absolutely love coaching and I plan on coaching the rest of my life."

Olivia Storm is a sophomore at Charlevoix High School and is the daughter of Debra and David Storm.

In Petoskey, the Charlevoix Bucs held on to defeat the Petoskey Junior Northmen 21-20, finishing the season at 5-2.

The Bucs were paced offensively by Walker Fogle, who scored two touchdowns. Tyler Ostrum also added a touchdown and kicked an extra point, which proved to be the difference in the score. Jarrin Kelly set up a couple of scores with big first down runs.

Defensively, the Bucs were led by Ostrum, Fogle and a game saving tackle by Hank Simmons to end regulation. Coaches also pointed to Will Glass, Dmitri Bell and Jake Beaudoin as having defensive impact in the game.

In Mancelona, The Charlevoix Pirates' bid for an undefeated season came up short against a skilled team from Mancelona, 6-0. No individual results were available for the Pirates, who finished with a record of 6-1.

In Midget Division action, Charlevoix's game ended the same way as the MSU-UM game ended later in the day — on a last-second a 35-yard field goal. Unfortunately, for Charlevoix, they were on the MSU end of the field goal and dropped their season-ending game 11-10 to Elk Rapids in Mancelona.

Charlevoix scored its lone touchdown on a pass from Colin Smith to Camden Musilek. The extra points were added by Smith with a perfect kick, coach Boogie Carlson said.

"We had great play all day by both the offense and defense," Carlson said noting that the defense scored a safety to take the lead early in the fourth quarter only to lose with the field goal with little time left.

Fireplace sparks bid to recall council member

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

A controversy over building a community fireplace in Charlevoix's East Park has already found its way into next week's city council and mayoral elections, and now it has prompted a city resident to initiate recall proceedings against another council member who is not up for re-election this year.

On Monday, Charlevoix 3rd Ward resident Julee Roth filed paperwork with the Charlevoix County Clerk's office seeking approval for a recall petition against 3rd Ward Charlevoix City Council member Jill Picha.

Picha

In a news release about her filing emailed to the Courier late Monday night, Roth cites Picha's support for the fireplace project as the sole reason for her recall effort.

"I started this recall petition because our elected officials in Charlevoix are, once again, not listening to their residents," Roth writes. "If we can't have clean streets and pretty flowers, how can we be asked to spend money on something so offensive that we do not want? We don't want visitors to see how insensitive that fireplace is to the park, the view and the pocket books of the residents."

"I'm troubled that once winter sets in, the city council will vote to continue building the fireplace even though the majority of voting residents are against it," Roth added. "How can she vote for something that has no community benefit and will cost close to $7,000 a year to operate?"

Roth said she is not alone in her feelings, pointing to 220 members of a Facebook group of users, most of whom are opposed to the project, she said.

The background

In July, city resident John Winn came to the council with an offer from an anonymous donor who wished to pay for the bulk of the cost of constructing a community fireplace on the western edge of East Park near the east side of Bridge Street between Mason and Clinton streets. The design called for the fireplace to be eight feet wide, seven feet tall and then be topped by a chimney that tapers to four feet wide for a total structure height of about 20 feet. The city's only cost for the project was

Trio of Boulder Park Terrace residents celebrate their 79-year class reunion

STEVE ZUCKER

October is not the time of year most people think of high school graduations or class reunions. But both of those things happened recently in the most unlikely of places — Charlevoix's Boulder Park Terrace.

On Oct. 17 the entire surviving Charlevoix High School class of 1933 gathered at the Charlevoix nursing home to celebrate their 79-year class reunion.

The surviving members of the originally 55-member class are Hazel Potter Trimble, Gertrude Clark Curtis and Mary Helen Fotchman Riggle and all three of them just happen to be residents of Boulder Park Terrace.

Charlevoix County woman's death linked to meningitis outbreak

RACHEL BROUGHAM
Northern Michigan Review

Health officials reported Tuesday that two more Michigan residents have died, including an 81-year-old Charlevoix County woman, as a result of the national meningitis outbreak.

The Michigan Department of Community Health said the outbreak has resulted in 62 Michigan cases, including eight deaths. Of those cases, health officials also report one stroke, four joint infections and 27 abscesses.

The name of the Charlevoix County woman has not been released.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, as of Wednesday, Oct. 31, there have been 363 meningitis cases reported in 19 states, including 28 deaths.

The outbreak has been linked to an epidural steroid shot used for spine pain, which was produced by the New England Compounding Center, a drug manufacturer in Massachusetts.

The steroid injection was not used at Charlevoix Area Hospital or McLaren Northern Michigan. Harborside Spine and Sports Center in Petoskey, which also offers steroid injections, does not use the compound.

Four Michigan facilities received the compound, including the Michigan Neurological Institute of Grand Blanc, Michigan Pain Specialists in Brighton, the Neurological and Rehabilitation in Traverse City and Southeast Michigan Surgical Hospital in Warren.

Meningitis is an inflammation of the lining of the brain and spinal cord. This particular form of meningitis is not contagious.

The injections were given starting in May of this year.

Symptoms of meningitis include, fever, new or worsening headache, neck stiffness, sensitivity to light, new weakness or numbness, increasing pain and/or redness or swelling of the injection site. Infected patients have developed a variety of symptoms approximately one to four weeks following their injection.

A spokesperson for the CDC said each facility that carried the steroid should have contacted anyone who may have received an injection.

Patients who feel ill and are concerned about whether they received the steroid injection in question should contact their physicians.

A full list of the health care providers that received the suspect medicine can be found at www.cdc.gov.

Two of six commission races contested Nov. 6

All six seats on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners are to be decided during the general election Nov. 6. Two of the races are contested and the other four candidates for the board are running unopposed. All terms last two years.

In District 6, a new district this year encompassing the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township, voters will choose either Republican nominee Larry Sullivan or Richard Clem, an independent, to serve on the board.

In District 5, encompassing Beaver Island and Norwood, Marion and Eveline townships, incumbent Republican Richard Gillespie will face off against Democrat Nancy Ferguson.

Candidates running for the board unopposed this November include Republicans George Lasater, 1st District; Chris Christensen, 2nd District incumbent; Ron Reinhardt, 3rd District incumbent and Joel Evans, 4th District incumbent.

Richard Clem

"The number one issue facing Charlevoix County is the lack of opportunities for young people to be successful," said Clem.

Clem, 65, is retired from the United States Air Force and says his background in sales and marketing will be an asset when looking for ways to attract residents and businesses to the county.

"Being able to identify the market and getting the right message to them will be the key to success," he said. "We need to identify and promote our natural advantages, develop and promote the things that make Charlevoix County attractive to others and make it easy to manage a business here."

Another issue Clem believes needs attention is the county government itself. "I believe that it is time for the county to hire a manager for day-to-day operations," he said.

Larry Sullivan

Sullivan, 57, agrees that promoting the area is an important task of county government.

"We can improve our economy by expanding our recreational facilities, including additional non-motorized trails to assist in extending our tourism season by three to four months a year," he said. "Another solution is to actively promote Charlevoix County as a visitor destination throughout the Midwest."

Sullivan is retired after serving as the Charlevoix County planning director for 31 years. He says he has a good grasp of how the county operates after working there three decades.

"I am not pleased with the way the county is currently being run," he said. Problems include what he calls a "lack of openness" leading to costly lawsuits for public information and preventable personnel lawsuits.

"I believe that as a county board, we can do better in running the county," he said.

Nancy Ferguson

Ferguson, 65, is a retired teacher and currently serves as a member of the Charlevoix County Planning Commission.

"The board needs to revisit and enact a farmland preservation ordinance," she said.

Such an ordinance would attempt to stem encroachment of development on existing farmland.

"The growth and popularity of farmers markets and the renewed interest in fresh produce and naturally raised beef, poultry and pork has infused new creativity in what restaurants serve and in what consumers buy for their own tables," she said.

Other changes Ferguson would like to see include increasing recreational facilities in the county and improving roads.

"Bike trails, water sports, scenic viewing, skiing, snowshoeing, snowmobiling, fishing and hunting are amenities that attract people to our area," she said. "I will support the growth of the non-motorized trail system while protecting our natural resources."

She would support continued maintenance and updating of the road system, she said, which would help promote the county.

Richard Gillespie

"It is in total evidence that we need someone to administrate board decisions," said Gillespie of his hope to hire a county administrator, if reelected. Such a staff member would "work to maintain harmony between elected officials and all departments and committees of the county board," he said.

Gillespie, 57, is a builder, realtor, welder, fabricator and excavator based on Beaver Island. He has been a county commissioner from 1992 to 1996 and 2010 to present.

Another major goal of Gillespie, if reelected, is installing a hydraulic drive on the Ironton Ferry.

Eliminating a cumbersome drive system with a state-of-the-art propulsion system and new wheel house, he said, would make it easier for vehicles to roll on and off the ferry.

"Beyond that I want to work to improve communication in all departments and streamline our processes," he said of the county government.

Non-homestead millage renewal request on ballot

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

When voters in the Charlevoix Public School district go to the polls on Tuesday, Nov. 6, they will see a request from the district to renew its 18 mill non-homestead operating millage. The millage is set to expire with the 2013 tax levy.

One mil equals one dollar in tax for ever $1,000 in a property's taxable value.

The two-year millage, which does not apply to properties that serve as a principal residence, would raise about $7.2 million in its first year (2014).

Non-homestead millages figure largely in most school district budgets because state officials assume that a district collects the full 18 mills allowed by law and only pay districts from the school aid fund the difference between the district's per pupil foundation grant and the amount collected through the non-homestead millage.

Current school board members Nancy Allison and Valerie Snyder are also on the ballot running unopposed for their respective four-year seats on the board.

Polls open from 7 a.m.-8 p.m. on Election Day

The polls for this year's General Election will be open from 7 a.m.-8 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Voters in the City of Charlevoix will vote at the Charlevoix City Hall, 210 State St. Township voters will vote at their respective township halls.

In addition to national, state and county races, voters in the City of Charlevoix will be choosing who will fill three city council seats and the mayor's post.

In the First Ward, council member Lyle Gennett is running unopposed.

In the Second Ward, write-in candidate Leon Perron is challenging current council member Greg Stevens.

In the Third Ward, Shirley Gibson is challenging current council member Shane Cole.

In the mayor's race, write-in candidate Gabe Campbell is challenging current mayor Norman "Boogie Carlson Jr.

Charlevoix City Clerk Carol Ochs noted that results of the contested city council and mayor's races could be delayed on election night because the write-in votes will need to be hand-counted. She noted that if the election is close, a winner may not be clear until the county board of canvassers meets to certify the votes.

Results of these an all the other races will be posted at www.charlevoixcourier.com when they are available on election night.

County board postpones pending appointments until after election

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners voted Wednesday, Oct. 24, to postpone making 21 appointments to various entities in the county such as the planning commission, fair board, commission on aging, road commission and Northern Lakes Economic Alliance, at the advice of county civil attorney Brian Graham.

The action was approved in a 4-1 vote, with commissioner Chris Christensen the lone opponent.

"I was concerned that the old board was going to make appointments for the new board. It's unusual," said Graham.

Tuesday, Nov. 6, Charlevoix County voters will choose which commissioners will continue to serve on the board and which will be ousted. Two candidates new to the board are running and could be elected.

"Do you want, for lack of a better word, a lame duck board to make appointments to committees serving the community for a period of years," asked Graham. "It's my opinion you should wait. It makes the election more meaningful."

The committee terms range in length from two to six years, some lasting longer than the board of commissioner terms themselves.

"I'm adamantly opposed to this," said Christensen of postponing the appointments until January. In the past, he said, the commissioners have made appointments on the way out of office.

"The argument could be made that you don't want a new board electing all their friends and buddies on these boards so they can increase the chance to get whatever they need done," he said.

Christensen also suggested that the board should interview committee candidates that will serve for longer terms.

"I would suggest you interview all candidates after Jan. 1 with the new board," responded Graham.

Dec. 31 will be the end of the current committee terms, he said, but by state law, those committee members are required to stay in office until a replacement is found.

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

If we are what we eat then I must be sweet because I love chocolate. With focus in the news regarding the food we eat and its ensuing effect on our bodies — from obesity to diabetes — it's good to pay attention. We, as a nation, are already taxing the system with health problems that are self-inflicted.

"More people die today because of the way they eat than by tobacco use, accidents or any other lifestyle or environmental factor." This is a direct quote from "The China Study."

I grew up in the 50s where meat at every dinner meant money in the bank, but what we didn't know were the health problems that would follow. Both of my parents working in the medical field made my family a bit different in that we ate a salad with every dinner and a good heaping of vegetables on the side. Mom and dad had viewed the insides of one too many patients and saw the result, so food in our home was fairly healthy.

Even so, meat in small amounts was a mainstay for our family as well as the usual Catholic fish fry on Fridays. Recently a fellow 60-year-old handed me a book to read that reminded me that a meal is absolutely complete without meat being the main contender. While we vacationed in Europe I couldn't help but notice that meat was more of a side dish and vegetables played the main role. It is similar to the thinking that people in Europe love life and not necessarily live to work, and dinner time is a time to socialize; while in the United States we focus on work, money and meals that are quick.

Often we make our meal selections from items that have been splashed across the TV screen or in magazines. Marketing and various unions make their living selling products that are not good for us. The groups pushing their food groups are vocal and organized and met with indifference when suggesting we look at making this country a bit healthier. It's easier and profitable to focus on medications and vitamin supplements. I remember listing the number of vitamins I was taking and dad, in his wise age of 80, looked up at me and said, "Really… all those and you are literally flushing them down the toilet, why not eat better and get the real thing?" Bragging that I read we don't get enough nutrients and we need to add to our diet dad suggested, "You know, most of that will go through you and not stay in you and you'll be spending a lot of money on something you don't need.

If your body is deficient in something let a nutritionist or doctor tell you and not some magazine ad." Gosh darn he was right when I was growing up and he was still right about foods even into his 90s.

Meat taxes our body and if we just had one meatless meal a week and replaced it with a vegetarian dish or even breakfast for dinner we would be helping our body in one small way and the environment as well. I am not going all Oprah Winfrey on you as I saw what happened when she spoke openly about eating meat, its environmental impact and health implications. Just baby steps, or at least be open to another viewpoint about foods and their impact on our health. Our environment is much more toxic than it was in the 50s. There is an overuse of cleaning agents, more pesticides in our lawns and additives in our food. It would be hard not to believe that cancer, heart attacks and stroke are not brought on by more than genetics. Drinking water and physical and mental exercise are proven to improve your immune system but a plant based diet or at least beginning a diet with more fruits and vegetables will keep what life you have left a healthier one. I like my doctor, but dad was right when he'd say, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away."

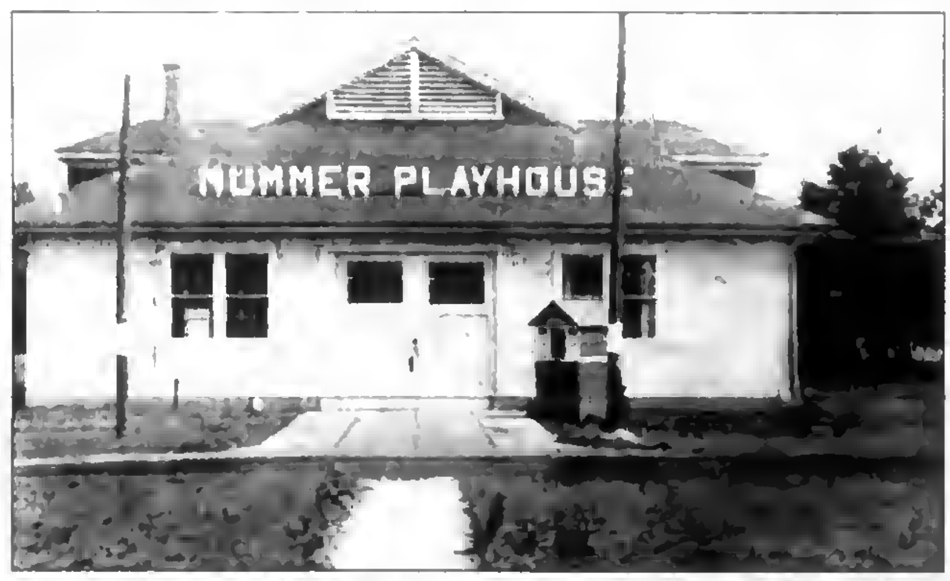
CHARLEVOIX

Bridging our past with our future

LOOKING BACK…



COURTESY PHOTO/CHARLEVOIX HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Inn hotel at the far east end of Dixon Avenue closed its doors in late 1940, having gone under because of the lingering effects of the Great Depression and the fact the railroad passenger-oriented business could provide very little area for parking. It had erected a vehicle garage a few blocks west on Elm Street near Meech, but that hardly solved the problem. So in 1941, the renowned Mummer theater company of Chicago came north to the vacated garage to set up what was intended to become one of the finest summer stock playhouses in the country. Local residents were recruited to fill in minor cast roles and work the stage. Audrey Totter, later to gain fame as one of Hollywood's tough blondes, was part of the company. The six-week season was such a success that two more weeks were added. Great plans were formulated for the 1942 return visit, but Pearl Harbor intervened in December. With the nation now at war, Charlevoix's dream as a summer theater destination went up in smoke. The Elm Street townhouses now occupy the site.

LETTERS to the editor

Elect Nancy Ferguson

Editor:

By my own admission, I do not know the incumbent 6th District Charlevoix County Commissioner and do not wish to criticize his voting record. I am, however, acquainted with his opponent in the upcoming election, Mrs. Nancy Ferguson.

In addition to her occupational experience she has offered substantial community service in the past. She displays a positive and progressive attitude toward problem solving and the accomplishment of beneficial goals like recycling and bicycle trail development. Her moderate and pragmatic willingness to work with others is a refreshing change from the toxic bipolar political world we see today in Washington.

If you reside in this district I believe she merits your careful consideration and support.

We need Nancy Ferguson on the county commmission

Editor:

Nancy Ferguson's candidacy for Charlevoix County Commissioner gives us all hope that things may turn around in that group if she is elected. She is forward thinking, progressive, tuned in to the needs and desires of her community and a long time steward of our beautiful environment. These are all things that her opponent, Richard Gillespie is not. The latest example of his baffling lack of good judgment is voting against the measure to enforce storm water regulations. This is a measure that will cost the county nothing and was supported by all the other commissioners.

Mr. Gillespie's politics of yesterday approach is the reason that our county keeps getting sued and having scandals.

We need change on our county commission. We need a county controller. We need someone who knows the importance of taking care of our land, water and air. Nancy Ferguson is a long time advocate of good planning, having served on both township and county planning commissions and on the recycling committee.

We need Nancy Ferguson on the county commission. I urge you to vote for her.

Vote for Rudolph

Editor:

Dear residents of Hayes Township.

I'm writing this letter in support of Jim Rudolph's reelection as trustee of Hayes Township. Jim has served the township well in the past. He is open minded, listens to all sides, is fair and wants what is best for the township. Jim has practiced fiscal responsibility with the taxpayers money. He believes in maintenance of roads and is concerned about Charlevoix County. Jim promotes smart development by balancing private property rights and rights of neighbors. He promotes recreation for residents as well as tourists. He is also interested and has worked hard for zoning and protecting our water quality. He is able to attend meetings which affect this area. Because he is semi-retired/self-employed, has resided in the township for 25 years along with his wife of 40 years.

Jim is good for Hayes Township so please vote for him Nov. 6.

Generosity keeps Rainbow Shoppe going strong

Editor:

One of the many responsibilities of the board of directors of the Rainbow Shoppe is to make decisions of financial requests from needy individuals and nonprofit organizations.

In 2011, more than $33,000 was extended to these requests, to name a few: $1,000 each to B.A.S.E.S., Charlevoix Food Pantry and Colorado Challenge, $17,000 to the Charlevoix Ministerial Association Benevolence Fund and $1,500 to Northern Michigan Hospital Chaplaincy. The needy also received funds: $500 each to a family of 8 children who lost their mother to cancer, an individual who had incurred traveling expenses before and after his kidney transplant and a family who needed a deposit for a house rental. There was also a variety of clothing and household items donated to individuals.

Recently, they were humbled by receiving the ownership of a house that a very generous woman, Virginia Rountree, bequeathed to the Rainbow Shoppe. To honor Mrs. Rountree's memory, they were able to use the majority of the money to pay on their building loan and add to their outreach fund. As of this year they have extended financial assistance to Joppa House, high school scholarships, Charlevoix Ministerial Benevolence Fund, Safe Haven Breakfast, Community Food Pantry and many more recipients totaling $21,132.

If the Rainbow Shoppe continues to have generous donors, on going patrons, dedicated volunteers, loyal employees, faithful board of directors and of course God's blessings, they will be able to reach out to many more in the community.

Four more years

Editor:

Rod Benson, a person I respect, asks how anyone with intellectual honesty would want to support another four years with President Obama?

"Let me count the ways!"

1. The economy in Michigan has grown since 2010. Our car industry is thriving after help from this administration, not just General Motors and Chrysler, but the small parts companies feeding the larger companies.

2. Two wars started during the previous administration are ending. One is over and the other closing down and our solders are at last coming home.

3. Legislation has been signed lifting up the rights of women for equal pay. (Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act)

4. The Affordable Care Act: government reforms to bring reliable health care to millions of uninsured Americans.

5. The scaling down of wasteful military spending on weapons, ships and planes that the Pentagon has stated many times that it does not want or need.

These are only five reasons but I have only 300 words.

In addition, I get more than a little nervous when I think of the advisors to a possible Mitt Romney administration. Foreign policy "head" advisor is Dan Senor whose only foreign policy experience was 15 months as "senior advisor" to Paul Bremer's failed occupation government; Cofer Black, who was vice-chair of Blackwater, the company which came to symbolize American brutality in Iraq, and John Bolton, who indicated he might be Secretary of State in a Romney administration. Heaven help us!

Yes Rod, I consider myself an intelligent, thinking person and I am casting my vote for Barack Obama and ask critical thinking and intelligently honest citizens to join me.

Plans to build, open Catholic school met with support

RACHEL BROUGHAM
Northern Michigan Review

A preliminary plan to build and open a regional Catholic High School in Petoskey has been met with overwhelming support, according to committee members.

On Sunday, the regional Catholic High School committee presented its preliminary assessment to a crowd of about 50 people, including residents from Alanson, Boyne City, Charlevoix, Indian River, Pellston and Petoskey.

The plan calls for construction of a 75,000 square foot facility that would educate up to 350 7-12th graders. The committee anticipates the reopening of a Catholic high school in Petoskey would draw students from as far away as East Jordan and Mackinaw City.

St. Francis Xavier School in Petoskey used to have a high school. During its peak enrollment in 1965, there were 999 students enrolled in the K-12 school — 292 in the high school alone.

The school closed in 1971.

Today, St. Francis Xavier School has a staff of 32, and provides a variety of services including infant care, day care, before and after school care, pre-kindergarten classes and K-8 academics. There is a set tuition fee of $2,488 and the school has an enrollment of about 200 students, however, with all the additional programs, 271 children are involved with the school.

Deborah Gagnon, co-chair of the committee said the school would fill a needed opportunity to integrate the morals and the faith of the Catholic Church with academics including some AP classes, leadership, fine arts, athletics, technology and extra curricular activities.

"Catholic schools continue to provide excellent academic achievement while forming young adults with a solid, moral foundation based on the teachings of the Catholic Church," she said.

The committee has presented to a number of councils and area parishes, including more than 20 parish priests throughout the Diocese of Gaylord. The committee and the diocese have conducted three surveys of parents and parishioners which have shown tremendous support for the building of the school.

The Diocese of Gaylord already has four high schools in the area.

"Based on our market analysis, the regional demographics can more than support a school of this size," said Jeff Bacigalupi, committee co-chair. "In the 1960s, St. Francis Xavier School in Petoskey educated nearly 1,000 students K-12. The population since then has nearly doubled. Additionally, as of 2009, Emmet County ranked fifth in the state in population growth, and sixth in the state in per capita income (out of 83 counties). The statistics are similarly positive for Charlevoix County."

"The need for an environment of discipline, emphasis on lifelong character building ideas about ethics and morals, are major areas of concern for parents and other adults, for all children, no matter their religious beliefs, ethnicity or economic backgrounds. We're all children of God," said John Laursen, a Boyne City resident who attended the meeting.

"It's time to ignite the inner embers of our faith and let the fire of enthusiasm for it spread to all of our young people," he added. "It's cool to be a dedicated follower and disciple of the teachings of Christ."

The regional Catholic High School committee is now moving beyond the exploratory stage to a more formal process which includes a capital campaign feasibility study, which it hopes to complete over the next three to four months. The committee is looking toward starting 9th and 10th grades at the existing St. Francis Xavier School in the coming years while the new facility is being built.

To learn more about the planning, read the committee's market analysis and for future presentation dates, visit www.RegionalCatholicHighSchool.com.

Officials remind drivers to watch for deer

Law enforcement agencies and the Michigan Department of Transportation are reminding drivers that with the hunting season under way, deer populations will be on the move. This activity heightens the chances for car/deer accidents.

According the Michigan Department of Transportation, on average 146 vehicle/deer crashes occur every day in Michigan. According to the Michigan State Police Criminal Justice Information Center, there were a total of 53,592 reported crashes in 2011, resulting in 1,464 injuries and eight deaths. In 2010, there were 55,867 crashes. Many crashes go unreported, so actual crash numbers are estimated to be much higher, officials said.

The Michigan Deer Crash Coalition says motorists can help avoid dangerous encounters with deer by following these tips:

— Watch for deer, especially at dawn and dusk.

— If you see one deer, approach cautiously. There may be more out of sight.

— Deer often travel single file, so if you see one cross a road, chances are more are nearby waiting to cross, too. When startled by an approaching vehicle, they can panic and dart out from any direction without warning.

— Be alert all year long, especially on two-lane roads. Watch for deer warning signs. They are placed at known deer-crossing areas and serve as a first alert that deer may be near.

— Slow down when traveling through areas heavily populated by deer.

"It's important to understand that it's safer to come to a controlled stop whenever a deer is in your path than to swerve and go off the road," said State Transportation Director Kirk T. Steudle. "Don't veer for deer or swerve to avoid an animal because it can be more dangerous and even deadly."

The coalition is a broad affiliation of groups representing law enforcement, traffic safety, the insurance industry, natural resources, higher education, and strategic regional planning in the public and private sectors. The coalition seeks to increase awareness of vehicle-deer crashes and reduce the number of deaths and injuries occurring each year on state roads.

For more information, visit the organization's web site at www.michigandeercrash.org or follow them on Facebook.

Wednesday, Nov. 7 will mark the 15th year that Charlevoix's Villager Pub has hosted an all-you-can-eat spaghetti dinner for the Charlevoix Historical Society. Society members will serve as greeters and wait staff, while the Pub oversees the evening and contributes all proceeds from the spaghetti orders plus all tips toward patronage support of the society. During the past 14 years, the fundraiser has helped raise more than $20,000 for the society's general operating fund. In gratitude for providing this fundraising opportunity, the society recently presented the Pub with a framed photo of the huge Great Lakes passenger liner Milwaukee Clipper whose one and only visit to Charlevoix took place on June 24, 1943. Shown presenting the photo, at far right, is Historical Society President Denise Fata. Accepting the photo are, from left, pub staff members Caitlin Cole and Debbie Drew, and pub owner Terry Left.

Army Corps: Great lakes near record low levels

Officials say climate, not dredging to blame

MORGAN SHERBURNE
Northern Michigan Review

During the month of October, lakes Michigan and Huron were within an inch of kissing the all-time record low for the month, said the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers during a press call Wednesday.

The lakes are considered two lobes of one body of water, connected at the Straits of Mackinac. Currently, Lake Michigan's level stands at 576.6 feet, expressed in feet above sea level, said Keith Kompoltowicz, chief of watershed hydrology for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Detroit. The lowest the body of water has ever been recorded was in March of 1964, when the lake stood 576 feet above sea level.

That means that Lake Michigan-Huron has to drop just 6 inches to hit the low, something that's a possibility through the late fall and winter months, said Kompoltowicz.

"Lake Michigan will likely continue its seasonal decline through the rest of fall and into the winter," he said. "It reaches its peak level during June or July, then the lake begins to decline as evaporation becomes larger than the inflow of rain and run-off."

During the press call, the Corps reiterated that the combination of evaporation and a long slog of below-average precipitation is behind the low lake levels rather than dredging projects that took place on the St. Clair River through the 1960s.

The channel-deepening projects, which were done for shipping, did cause lakes Michigan and Huron to lower between 10 and 16 inches, said John Allis, chief of hydraulics and hydrology for the Army Corps in Detroit.

Erosion of the channel between the early 1960s and the early 2000s accounts for another 3 to 5 inches lost from the Lake Michigan-Huron levels, said John Nevin during the press call. He's the public information officer for the International Joint Commission, an organization created by the United States and Canada to assess lake and river systems along the U.S.-Canada border. The commission examined whether dredging was behind recent low lake levels in a study called "The International Upper Great Lakes Study."

The study largely found that climate rather than dredging is behind the Great Lakes' variation in levels, though dredging and subsequent erosion is ultimately responsible for lowering Lake Michigan-Huron between 13 and 19 inches. The last dredging project took place in 1967, said Allis, and since, the Great Lakes saw levels well above the long-term average in the mid 1970s and late 1980s and 1990s. Since 2000, said Nevin, there has not been evidence that the channel has been eroding more.

Too, Allis said he is asked whether the reversal of the Chicago River's flow at Chicago has lowered the lake level, but that impact is about 2 inches, and is balanced by inflows in Lake Superior, "which more than compensate for Chicago," he said.

The last time the lakes threatened record lows was in 2007, when Lake Superior did set its record low. Then, said Kompoltowicz, the region saw similar conditions: several months of very dry weather followed by several months of very wet weather.

"Since then, we've had a very variable climate, and that's kind of what the driving factor is," said Kompoltowicz. "If we were to see another winter like the winter of 2011-2012, then lake levels, come next spring, will likely to continue to remain low."

Kompoltowicz and Allis said recent rain from the long stretch of rainy weather during the middle of October and precipitation from Superstorm Sandy have given the lakes a boost, but it won't be enough.

"It will take several months and seasons in a row (of wet weather) to get us back to the long-term average," said Kompoltowicz.

Garden club talks to youth at St. Mary School

Eight members of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club's Youth Education Committee recently presented two poster contests to a total of 24 classes at Charlevoix Elementary and St. Mary schools. The Smokey Bear/Woodsy Owl contest is co-sponsored by the National Garden Club and the U.S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service and is open to students in grades 1-5. Students have the opportunity to demonstrate through original drawings of Smokey Bear and Woodsy Owl their understanding of wildfire prevention and basic environmental conservation practices. The second contest is sponsored by the garden club and asks students to create a poster using the club's theme, "It's a Garden Party" and includes kindergarten students. The posters will be judged in December and winning Smokey/Woodsy posters will be sent to the Michigan Garden Club for judging at the state level. Local first through third place place winners and honorable mentions will be honored, in May 2013, at a club sponsored recognition tea.

Next zoning ordinance hearing set for Nov. 7

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The Charlevoix Planning Commission is set to take the next step in its effort to extensively overhaul the city's zoning ordinance when it hosts its third public hearing on the matter at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 7, in the city council chambers at the Charlevoix City Hall.

City planning director Mike Spencer said the work now taking place is the home stretch of a more than two-year process that will mark the first major re-work of the ordinance since 1978.

The first draft of the new ordinance was unveiled in mid-August and has been available for inspection at city hall or download from the city's website, www.cityofcharlevoix.org.

Spencer said the draft ordinance is intended to carry out the goals and objectives of the 2010 Land Use Master Plan.

"The zoning ordinance is intended to guide responsible future growth and development, protect public health and safety, provide for efficient transportation, preserve and protect neighborhood character, to prevent over-congestion of structures, protect water quality, and encourage redevelopment of existing outdated structures," Spencer wrote in his introduction of the ordinance.

He said the new ordinance is better organized and has much clearer language complemented by graphics to better define specific requirements; complies with all Michigan laws pertaining to planning and zoning, specifically the Zoning Enabling Act; and addresses unclear or missing language that has been discovered in administering specific requirements in the past.

Through input received to date, including at its first two public hearings on the ordinance, Spencer said the commission has already made a list of some possible changes to the draft ordinance. At next week's hearing, however, the commission is especially hoping to get feedback from the owners of property proposed to be re-zoned under the new ordinance.

"These are proposed to accommodate changes in land use that have occurred since 1978, address economic changes, guide future development toward appropriate locations, encourage mixed-use developments, and promote higher density in appropriate locations," Spencer wrote.

Recently owners of these parcels were sent letters notifying them of the proposed rezoning of their property and of the upcoming public hearing.

He said any owners of property proposed to be rezoned will be notified by the city by mail.

"There is logic and specific rationale behind all proposed zone changes. City staff and officials want to fully involve property owners in this process," he added.

Spencer estimated that about 40-50 parcels are proposed to be re-zoned and said he expects in many cases the changes won't meet with much objection from the owners. He gave one example of several properties in the area of Andy's Market on West Garfield Street. He said several properties in that area are zoned industrial, dating back to the days when other businesses were located there. Today, given the residential nature of the neighborhood, an industrial zoning doesn't make sense for those properties, which is why a special commercial zoning is proposed there.

Spencer said after Wednesday's public hearing, the commission will take all of the input it has received and factor that into devising a second draft of the ordinance. Once the planning commission has signed off on the ordinance sometime in the coming months, it will go before the city council for its consideration.

Other highlights of the new zoning ordinance include:

— A reduction in the number of zoning districts.

— Less restrictive setback requirements in residential zoning districts.

— Regulations to address solar panels and wind energy systems.

— New regulations on swimming pools and athletic courts in residential areas.

— Clear regulations on boathouses.

— New regulations for mineral extraction.

— New regulations for cell towers.

— Clear language on temporary buildings, uses, and special events.

— Changes to landscaping requirements for commercial and industrial zoned properties.

— Changes to parking requirements. Less restrictive parking requirements and the ability to do shared parking lots.

— Minor changes to sign regulations.

— Streamlined development plan review procedures.

— Changes to special land use review procedures.

— New planned unit development (PUD) review procedures and standards allowing for flexibility in zoning if specific community benefits can be achieved.

— New language on nonconforming lots, uses and structures.

— New regulations on sexually oriented businesses.

— Changes to Zoning Board of Appeals review procedures and standards.

Vandals damage church door at St. Mary School

Charlevoix police officials are investigating a vandalism incident that took place late Wednesday or early Thursday.

City of Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan said sometime between 6 p.m. Wednesday and 6:30 a.m. Thursday someone threw a cigarette butt receptacle through the glass in an exterior door at St. Mary School. The damage was discovered when school staff arrived Thursday morning. Doan said no other damage took place and it does not appear that the vandals entered the school.

Police are asking anyone with information on the incident to contact the Charlevoix Police Department at (231) 547-3258.

3 candidates vie for 2 seats on East Jordan school board

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

EAST JORDAN — Three candidates are running for two seats on the East Jordan Public Schools Board of Education Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Kevin Shepard, Becky Rowbotham and Scott Nachazel are vying for two four-year terms.

Nachazel

Nachazel, 42, is currently president of the board of education and has served on the board four years.

"I have a vested interest in the schools," he said.

Nachazel has two sons enrolled in the district and his wife is the elementary school secretary.

"I feel confident in our current administration in building a positive future for our kids," said Nachazel.

He believes in the new superintendent's vision and goals, he said, of increasing educational offerings and services to families.

Shepard

Shepard, 44, has been a member of the board of education since April. He participated in the process of hiring a new superintendent and says he would like to be part of the board for the implementation of more plans to turn around the district.

His two major goals, if re-elected are to increase enrollment and maintain fiscal responsibility.

"We need to keep the kids that are already here from leaving," he said of enrollment levels.

Shepard and his wife, Sheri, have two sons, both of whom attend East Jordan Public Schools.

Rowbotham

Rowbotham, 41, is a manager at Airgas in Petoskey and says she wanted to run for the board because two of her daughters attend the school.

"I want the school to be the best it can be for my kids," she said.

Rowbotham began attending board meetings a few years ago, she said, and wasn't happy with what she saw.

"You can't complain if you're not involved in making a change," she explained.

She is excited about the changes brought on by the new superintendent. "He's been phenomenal so far," she said.

Rowbotham and her husband, Mark, have three daughters.

RECALL

to be about $300 for the installation of a natural gas supply line and the cost of the gas to be burned in the fireplace, estimated to be about $6,800 per year. Little or no public comments were received at the three meetings (two regularly scheduled and one special) at which the proposal was discussed, and the council ultimately approved the project by a 5-0 vote. (Council member Shane Cole abstained from the vote because his wife works for DTE Energy, the company that would supply the gas for the fireplace.)

The public outcry against the fireplace began when crews removed a tree to make room for the fireplace and site work began for the foundation. The most common among the objections were that the fireplace would block views of Round Lake and the park from Bridge Street. Other complaints included the cost of the gas and the impact on the environment.

Winn later explained that he was the one who suggested the idea of the fireplace to the donor, who had originally wanted to donate to the park's interactive water fountain — a project that has been completed. Winn said he got the idea from a similar fireplace in Holland, Mich., that has been a popular gathering spot in that city's downtown.

After hearing a chorus of complaints from full-house audiences at two council meetings, the council ultimately voted 4-1 to put the project on hold until spring to allow city officials to work with members of the community and the architect who designed the buildings in East Park to try to find alternatives to the proposal that might be more agreeable to more people. In that vote, council member Lyle Gennett cast the dissenting vote, noting that at this point, he thinks the project should simply be scrapped.

In next week's election, council members Gennett's, Cole's and Greg Stevens' seats are up for re-election as is that of mayor Carlson. Prior to the fireplace proposal, the only challenger in the election was Shirley Gibson, who filed in May to run against Cole in the 3rd Ward. However in October, downtown business owner Leon Perron filed to run as a write-in candidate against Stevens in the 2nd Ward and former council member and mayor Gabe Campbell filed to run as a write-in candidate for mayor. Both men said that the fireplace issue is what prompted them to run for election.

Why just Picha?

Although in her news release, Roth singles out Picha for her support of the fireplace, she told the Courier in a follow-up email that if she could, she'd seek the recall of the entire council. However, by law Picha is the only member of the council that she could seek to recall. First, a person can file a recall petition for an elected official only in his or her district, in this case the 3rd Ward — that narrows the field to Cole, Picha and Carlson (because the mayor is elected by the entire city). However, the law does not allow a recall petition to be filed against an elected official in the or first or last six months of his or her term, which eliminates Cole and Carlson.

So, now what?

State law governs the process for recalling an elected official such as a city council member. Now that Roth has filed her paperwork, the county's election commission — comprised of county clerk Cheri Browe, probate judge Fred Mulhauser, and county treasurer Marilyn Cousineau must meet to determine if proposed language for the ballot is clear. That is if "each reason for the recall stated in the petition is of sufficient clarity to enable (Picha and the 3rd Ward voters) to identify the course of conduct that is the basis for the recall." A meeting to consider the petition language is set for 1:30 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 12, in the commissioners room at the Charlevoix County Building. At the meeting both Roth and Picha are permitted to argue for or against the clarity finding. The commission's ruling can be appealed to the circuit court by either Roth or Picha within 10 days of the ruling.

On the proposed recall election petition, Roth seeks to recall Picha for "violating the democratic process, mismanagement of city property and her willful support of resolutions against her ward's written and vocal objections."

If the election commission approves the petition language, Roth could then start gathering signatures on the petition. How many? The law requires the number of signatures to be at least 25 percent of the number of people from the 3rd Ward who voted in the last gubernatorial election — in this case 365. Some quick math puts the number of signatures from registered 3rd Ward voters needed at 92. Once she collects enough signatures and turns them in to the county clerk's office, they must be verified. If all that happens, the clerk then must schedule a recall election on the next regular election date that is not less than 95 days after the date the petition is filed.

Elections can take place only on one of four days each year — one each in February, May, August and November.

Speaking to the Courier Thursday morning, Picha said she was surprised she was singled out by those opposing the fireplace and thinks Roth's claims against her are unfair.

"They need to stop this stuff that we aren't listening to them," Picha said. "It's not true."

Picha said she feels the claims in the proposed petition language are untrue. In fact, she points out that she was the one who made the motion to put the project on hold.

"I don't know where they are pointing the finger at me that I've got my 'heels dug in.'"

Picha added that she feels bad that the fireplace project has cause such a stir in the community, especially in light of the current council's accomplishments.

"This is a good working council. We've gotten a lot of complements on how well we work together. We've accomplished so much, for instance we balanced the budget. We've kept people working and nobody's laid off. We've raised the reserve fund, all through some really hard times."

Boulder Park Terrace staff member Annette Grams who was talking with Gertrude one day when Gertrude mentioned that she and the other two ladies were in the same class in high school.

The gathering became a little extra-special when, as she was planning the event, Grams learned that Hazel never actually graduated those many years ago. So, Grams contacted the school district, which prompted superintendent Robert Gendron to attend the festivities to present Hazel with an honorary diploma.

Hazel and Gertrude sat down with the Courier Tuesday to share some of their memories about their years together in high school. (Mary Helen wasn't feeling up to chatting Tuesday.)

Hazel and Gertrude said they knew each other growing up and actually lived near each other and walked together the roughly mile to and from school each day. They said Mary Helen moved to town from Petoskey during their freshman year. Both said they enjoyed all kinds of activities in school and recalled fond memories of school dances, roller skating, and ice skating, tobogganing down the south hill on Bridge Street in the winter time, working babysitting and weeding in the summer time.

They also recalled their class trip at the end of their senior year was a day spent on Mackinac Island. Gertrude said all the girls packed lunches and the boys drove to Mackinaw City where they caught a ferry to the island.

After high school the ladies went their separate ways. All three got married. Mary Helen went to college. Hazel stayed in the Charlevoix area and Gertrude moved to the Detroit area with her husband.

But, ultimately, their paths brought them back together, living under the same roof. Today the ladies try to get together to chat when they can, but sometimes their health gets in the way. But they still check up on each other when they can.

Gertrude and Hazel said they were both surprised and very grateful for the party the staff hosted in their honor.

"It's was a beautiful party," Gertrude said. "The Lord's been good to us."

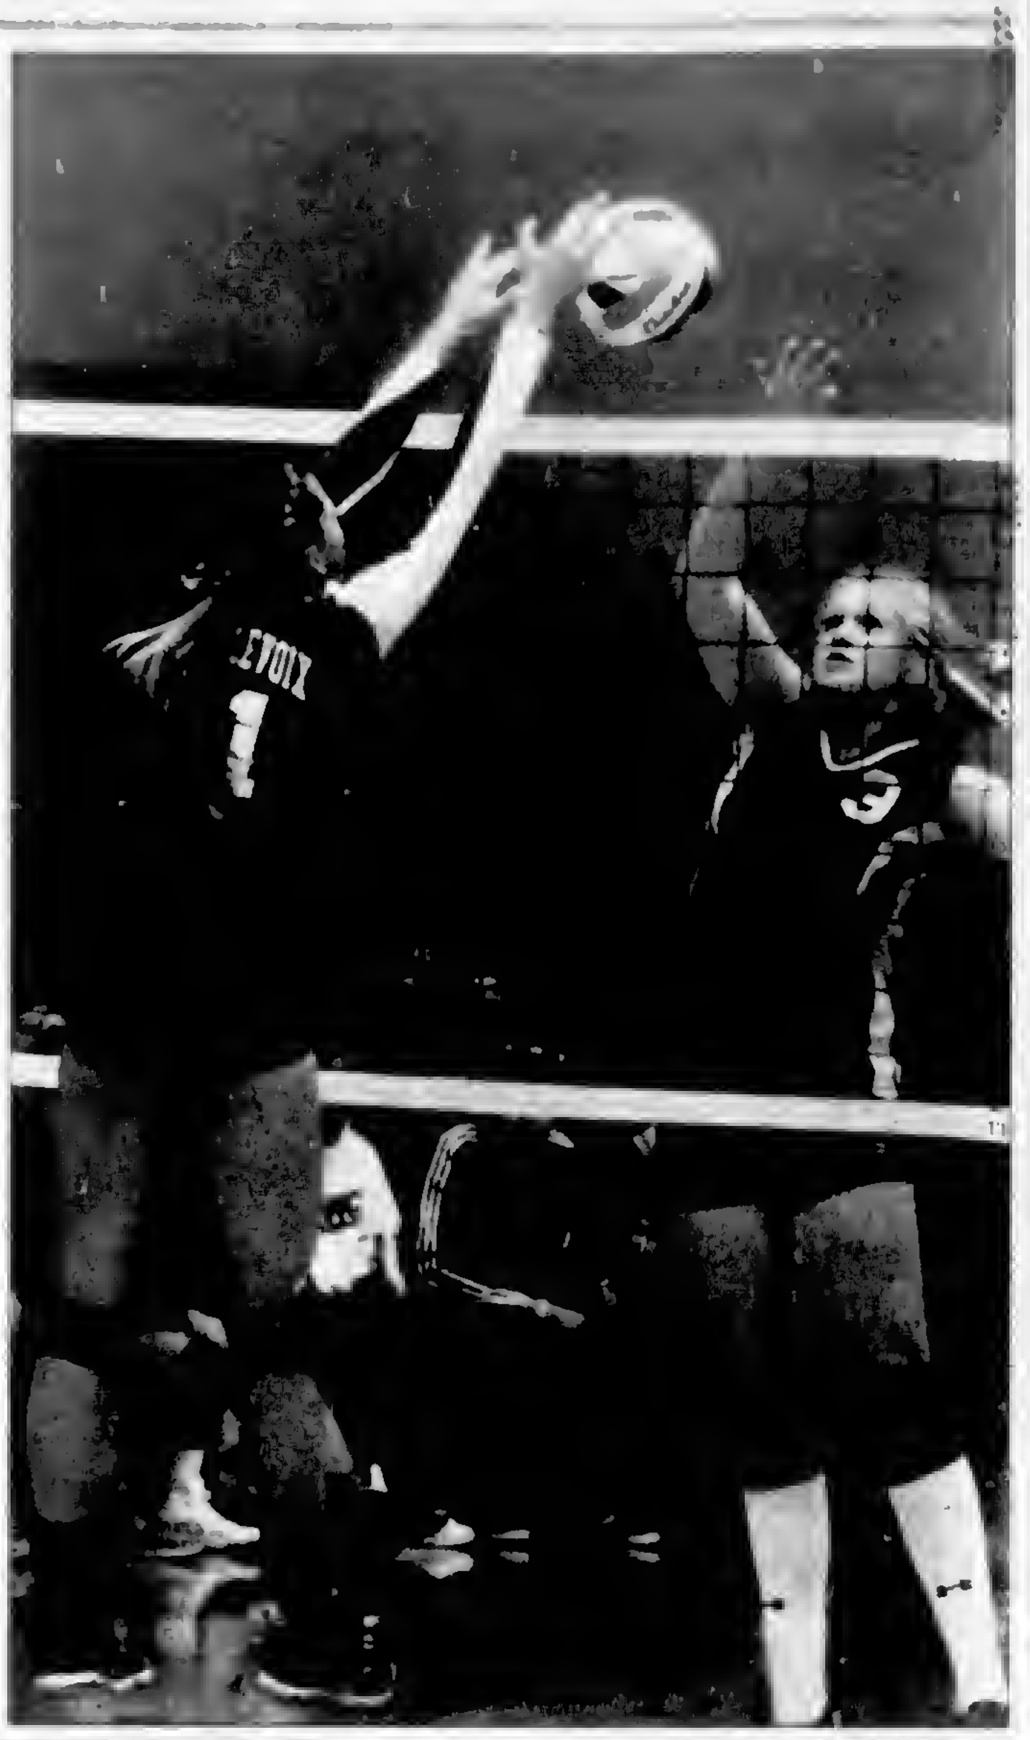
VOLLEYBALL

Rayders tie for second in conference, play for District crown Nov. 1



KURT GRANGOOD/ NEWS-REVIEW

The Charlevoix Rayder varsity volleyball team wrapped up its season strong and was one win away from a Class C District championship at press time Thursday.

On Thursday, Oct. 25, Gloria Greene and Kelsey Pischner had nine aces apiece and finished 36-of-37 from the serving line as Charlevoix defeated Kalkaska on the Blazers' home court 25-14, 25-12, 25-13 in a Lake Michigan Conference match.

With the win, the Rayders closed the regular season at 26-15-6 overall, 11-3 league, and finished tied for second in the Lake Michigan Conference with Boyne City.

"I am always very proud of a team win," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "The girls continue to become a stronger team physically, mentally and emotionally. They really want to extend their season far into the tournament play."

Also for the Rayders, Greene finished with 23 assists and Madi Carey had four assists. Karley Pearsall had 13 kills and four solo blocks, while Madeline Boss added six kills. Katie Paramo, Jennaca Holecheck and Greene had six digs apiece.

Cassidy Peebles, Alyssa Chomiczewski and Jessica Paramo all led the Rayders defensively.

Last year the Rayders advanced all the way to the Class C state semifinals.

On Monday, they opened their bid to repeat or exceed that mark with a convincing 25-13, 25-14, 25-16 win over East Jordan in a Class C district match.

Madeline Boss had 18 kills, eight digs, three aces and a solo block while Karley Pearsall added 11 kills, eight digs and six blocks.

"We had some girls missing tonight and also a player a bit injured, but that didn't stop our girls from stepping up and moving on to the next level of districts," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said.

"I'm very proud of the girls and their ability to adapt to line-up changes and playing through adversity.

"I believe our momentum is building with each match."

Also for the Rayders, Gloria Greene had 20 assists and eight digs, while Jessica Paramo added 11 digs and five assists.

Olivia Storm made her varsity debut and added six assists.

Kelsey Pischner chipped in with three aces and two kills, while Anna Way added four kills and three blocks. Jennaca Holecheck had 13 digs, two blocks and two kills while Katie Paramo was perfect from the serving line.

"This was a wonderful effort by every team member," Randall said. "We have work ahead of us and plan on preparing ourselves for Harbor Springs with anticipation for a district final match with Boyne City or Inland Lakes."

The win moved Charlevoix to a semifinal matchup with Harbor Springs on Wednesday, where the Rayders' momentum continued as they defeated the Rams in 3 games, 25-8, 25-17, 25-20.

"Our girls were really excited for tonite and really got pumped up. Everyone played and played well, Randall said.

Karley Pearsall led the Rayders with 17 kills, two blocks, 100 percent serve receive, and 12 digs. Madeline Boss had 13 kills, four aces, 90 percent serve recieve, and six digs.

Randall noted that Gloria Greene worked "very hard" for her offensive line and had 24 assists, two aces and four digs. Cassidy Peebles had five aces, two blocks and Jessica Paramo had three aces and five digs.

The win sets the Rayders up for a rematch in the District final against Boyne City at 6 p.m. Nov. 1 in Boyne City.

A long camera exposure combined with the taillights of a passing car create a streak of red light down Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix Wednesday evening. The streetside trees in the downtown were recently re-illuminated with new, warmer colored lights through a cooperative effort among the city, downtown development authority, and business and individual donors.

Incumbents win in Charlevoix city races

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

All three incumbents in the contested Charlevoix City Council and mayoral race elections retained their seats in Tuesday's general election.

Cole

In the two more contentious races, the margin of victory was the greatest.

In the race for the mayor's seat, incumbent Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr. defeated challenger Gabe Cambell, who ran as a write-in candidate, 852-303.

In the race for one of the two 2nd Ward city council seats incumbent Greg Stevens defeated challenger Leon Perron, who also ran as a write in candidate, 276 to 76.

In the race for one of the two 3rd Ward city council seats, incumbent Shane Cole defeated challenger Shirley Gibson, 218 to 191.

The races in the 2nd Ward and for the mayor's seat were almost entirely about a controversial proposal to build a community fireplace in the city's downtown East Park.

In July an anonymous donor came forward offering to pay most of the cost to build the gas-fired fireplace to serve as a gathering place and attraction to the downtown. After hearing little or no opposition to the project at three public meetings, the council approved the project in early August by a 5-0 vote. (Cole has abstained from the discussion and vote on the fireplace issue because his wife works for DTE Energy, which would supply the gas for the fireplace if it is built.)

However, when a streetside tree came down at the site and foundation preparation work began days later, a chorus of objections arose opposing the project. Among the primary objections were that the fireplace would block views of the park and Round Lake and that its estimated $6,800 per year cost of operation.

In September, after hearing many objections at packed-house meetings, the council voted to put the project on hold until spring to allow city officials to work with community members, an architect and the donor to see if a compromise can be found.

Both Campbell and Perron filed to run as write-in candidates just weeks before the election and both said the fireplace issue and their view that the current council is not listening to the City ready to look at fireplace options

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Fresh on the heels of Tuesday's election that saw unsuccessful attempts to unseat the mayor and a city council member over a controversial proposal to build a community fireplace in East Park, the council is poised to revisit the hot-button topic at its next regular meeting at 7 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 19.

Charlevoix City Manager Rob Straebel said architect Mark Buday is expected to be in attendance at the meeting to begin discussions about options for the fireplace proposal. Buday, the architect who designed the buildings that grace East Park, has offered — at no charge — to help city leaders come up with design and location options for the proposed fireplace that might ruffle fewer feathers in the community.

The proposal first came to the council in July when an anonymous donor came forward offering to pay for the construction of a community fireplace on the eastern edge of East Park between Clinton and Mason streets. The gas-fired fireplace, intended to serve as a down-

Weathervane seeks partners for Neighbors in Need annual program

STAFFORD'S
THE WEATHERVANE
A CHARLEVOIX LANDMARK SINCE 1871

A popular giving program, Neighbors In Need, is spreading through the Northern Michigan community. The employees of Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant will be collecting donations to supply local families with Thanksgiving meals.

The staff at Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant will work with local health and human service agencies such as the Salvation Army, local churches, Manna Food Project, Charlevoix Area Food Pantry and the Women's Resource Center to identify families in need. They are also working closely with Charlevoix's teachers to seek families who would not request aid, but are grateful to be recipients. Last year, 46 families enjoyed a traditional Thanksgiving dinner, thanks to the generosity of Stafford's Weathervane staff and guests.

"In this difficult economic time, we are hoping to make Thanksgiving a truly memorable one for each and every family in Charlevoix County," Jeff Spreckself, general manager of Stafford's Weathervane said. "With the generous contributions of our neighbors and Stafford's Hospitality, I know that the possibilities are endless. Thank you for your support."

As part of the program, Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant employees and other volunteers will raise funds for dinners, prepare and package them in the restaurant kitchen and deliver the meals to area families.

"Our staff wants to make this Thanksgiving special for everyone, "said Spreckself.

To make a monetary or time donation, please contact Jennifer Donker of Jeff Spreckself at (231) 547-4311.

Stafford's Hospitality own and operate six northern Michigan properties: Stafford's Crooked River Lodge & Suites in Alanson, The Pier Restaurant in Harbor Springs, The Perry Hotel, Bay View Inn and Stafford's Gallery in Petoskey and The Weathervane Restaurant in Charlevoix. Sullivan, Gillespie win county board seats

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

Voter turnout was overwhelming in Charlevoix County Tuesday during the general election, with 65 percent of registered voters showing up to cast their ballot, and voters in the county consistently choosing Republican candidates over their opponents.

Republicans Richard Gillespie and Larry Sullivan were victorious in the two contested races for seats on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

Also, several township races were decided Tuesday night in Charlevoix County and three road millage proposals passed.

Sullivan secured the title of 6th District representative on the board in a landslide with 80 percent of votes against opponent Richard Clem, who ran unaffiliated to a political party. Sullivan received 1,700 of the 2,100 votes in the district encompassing Charlevoix Township and the city of Charlevoix.

"I'd like to thank all the people that supported and helped my campaign and everyone that voted for me," said Sullivan. "I won't just be working for those who voted for me. I'll be working for all the constituents in my district."

Gillespie

Finding an "efficient and experienced" county administrator will be a priority, he said, as well as working to improve the economy in the county and taking a close look at county finances.

"I'm really looking forward to talking to my constituents on topics that come up and working with my fellow commissioners," he said.

Gillespie, the 5th District incumbent, beat out Democrat Nancy Ferguson, securing 57 percent of votes and winning about 400 votes more than his opponent.

Gillespie won in each of the five townships the district encompasses including Marion, Norwood, Eveline, Peaine and St. James.

"I'm delighted to be reelected," said Gillespie. "There are many projects I would like to complete."

Hiring an administrator for the county is a priority for him as well.

Sullivan

"I do hope we can get an administrative person in place to keep things from falling through the cracks," he said.

He disagrees with Ferguson's views on the environment, commented Gillespie after winning.

"I'm for the environment, but I think we've been lulled into thinking that we're hurting it when what we've done over the last 40 years is protect it. I think people are getting a little carried away," he said.

Eveline Township and Bay Township both passed road millage proposals with the support of 62 percent of voters. Boyne Valley Township passed a millage amendment proposal, with 67 percent of votes, to allow proceeds from the previously approved transfer station tax levy to also be used for improving Addis Road near the waste transfer station.

In Boyne Valley Township, a contested township supervisor race saw Republican Sue Hobbs win 53 percent of votes over Democrat Bernard Kondrat.

In Hayes Township, three candidates competed to fill two trustee seats. Republicans Rich Burnett and Douglas Kuehler secured the two seats with 34 percent and 38 percent of the votes, respectively, and Democrat Jim Rudolph was defeated.

Peaine Township voters decided four contested races on a township level.

Republican Colleen Martin will be the township clerk, having won about 63 percent of votes over Democrat Krys Lyle.

Five candidates vied for two township trustee seats. Winners were Paul Welke, not affiliated to a party, and Republican Peter Lodico. Those defeated included Republican Mike Scripps and Democrats Ernest Martin and Bradford Grassmick.

The township supervisor will be Republican William Kohls, who successfully defeated Democrat John Gallagher.

Peaine Township voters chose Democrat Larry Kubic as treasurer over Republican candidate Christina Morgan.

City weighs sale of land to resident

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

A city resident is offering to spruce up a section of currently city-owned streetside land next to his home at no cost to the city, but now the city and the resident must hammer out the legal details.

Resident Todd Wyett, who lives at the corner of Mercer and Dixon on the city's north side wants to landscape a .068-acre triangular piece of city-owned land on the corner of his property.

Actually Wyett used to own the land in question.

Back in 2008, as part of a project to reconfigure Mercer Boulevard, he swapped the triangular piece of property that he now seeks to landscape for a same-size swath of land where a portion of the street used to be.

Wyett would now like to landscape the area, which to a passer-by, appears to be part of his land, and has offered to buy the parcel from the city.

While the city's planning commission has given its blessing to Wyett's landscaping plan. The problem lies in the fact that under the ground on the property there are two 8-inch forced sewer mains that city manger Rob Straebel explained are an important part of the city's north side sewer infrastructure.

With this in mind, Straebel said be believes it is not in the city's best interest to sell the land, but instead recommended the city grant Wyett a revocable license to landscape the property.

The agreement would give Wyett permission to do the approved landscaping improvements, but would allow the city to revoke the agreement, should it need to do something with its infrastructure or wish to use it for some other purpose.

Straebel said, since it's impossible to foresee what needs the city might have for the property in the future, he feels it would be best not to "tie the hands" of future councils

At the council's regular semimonthly meeting Monday, Wyett renewed his preference to purchase the property instead of have the revokable agreement. Wyett offered to give the city a blanket easement to do whatever it wants with the property. He even offered that, in the event the city needed to disturb or damage the landscaping to make repairs or improvements to its utilities, he would foot the bill to repair the damage.

Wyett said he prefers to own the property and give the city an essentially carte blanche easement because he feels if he's going to spend many thousands on the landscaping, the ownership option offers him a bit more protection.

"Its important, if I'm going to spend that kind of money, that I own it," Wyett told the council.

City attorney Jim Young said historically, councils have chosen to use the revokable agreements in these circumstances and noted that, if they chose to sell the property to Wyett they should understand that it could be viewed as precedent-setting.

Ultimately, the consensus of the council was to direct Young to draft a sale agreement with the broad easement language as proposed by Wyett for their consideration at a later meeting. Council member Lyle Gennett voiced his preference to go with the revocable agreement.

In other business the council:

— Added another year to the two-year lease it has with Keweenaw Excursions for docking the Keweenaw Star at the former U.S. Coast Guard dock. The original lease was for $10,000 per year for the years 2012-13. The agreement now goes through 2014 with the cost going up $500 for the 2014 season.

— Approved an agreement with Fresh Air Aviation that will allow it to continue to use a section of roadway at the airport to taxi its aircraft to and from its hangar, but will protect the city from a suit should some kind of accident or injury result from the practice.

— Approved a contract with Performance Engineering for engineering work for the city's planned major infrastructure projects for 2013. Those projects include Clinton Street from Grant to Park, Lewis Street including adjacent alleyways and West Garfield Street from U.S. 31 to State Street at a cost of $101,516.

Elks seek pledges

The Charlevoix Elks Thanksgiving Day swim began in 2001 as a "friendly wager" to honor Elks member John McNabb's brother Doug. This is the 11th year of the Thanksgiving Day Swim and the "friendly wager" has raised thousands for area veterans, charities and families since it began.

This year's event is again slated for 11 a.m. sharp on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 22 at Michigan Beach.

Douglas Meredith McNabb graduated from Traverse City High school class of 1965 and continued his education at Northwestern Michigan College. He showed great promise as an artist under the direction of Paul Welch. Doug married Karen Neal in 1967 and they had one son – Christopher Heath McNabb.

When Doug went to Vietnam, he was a squad leader continuously on search and destroy missions. Doug was killed in action near Ngoc Tri February 25, 1968 – just six months shy of his 21st birthday.

Organizers are hoping the community will again chip in to help area charities and honor McNabb by pledging 25 cents per swimmer or by purchasing a Christmas dinner basket for a family of four.

Organizer hope to raise $6,000 for area veterans, charities and families.

Anyone interested in pledging donations toward the event or seeking additional information may call the Elks lodge at at (231) 237-0200 or Ed Rogalla at (616) 915 8435.

Smart growth, clustered development, bike paths, conservation, mixed-use zoning. What do these things have in common? They are all, allegedly, part of a United Nations plot to steal basic liberties from everyday citizens right here in Northern Michigan.

On Oct. 24, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners voted unanimously — commissioner Bob Drebenstedt was absent — to adopt a resolution opposing a 20-year-old United Nations document and agreed to reject its "radical policies and ... any grant monies attached to it."

The document is called UN Agenda 21 and it has gotten a good deal of national attention recently. Earlier this year, Alabama state legislators passed a law opposing the document and Michigan state representative Greg MacMaster, R-Kewadin, introduced a bill in the state this July that would prohibit local governmental entities from using the planning and zoning strategies proposed by Agenda 21.

Opponents of the document, which was initially signed onto by the U.S. in 1992 by George H. Bush, say it imposes a world view presented by the United Nations onto American citizens and limits personal property rights and other freedoms.

Others say the recent, public opposition to this decades-old non-binding document stems from a deeper resistance to long-standing planning and conservation efforts.

Key topics in Agenda 21 include sustainable development, biodiversity and social justice, issues that are addressed through suggested strategies such as creating multi-use developments, building compact and walkable downtowns and encouraging environmental stewardship.

What specific stand has the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners taken on this currently controversial document?

The resolution the board passed calls the agenda "extreme environmentalism, social engineering and global political control." The resolution goes on to say Agenda 21 is being "covertly pushed into local communities throughout the United State (sic) of America — through local 'sustainable development' policies."

Bay Township resident Roger Conaway presented the board with the resolution at their meeting at the end of October and it was approved at his suggestion after little discussion.

"It was a statement opposing more control from the UN," said board chair Joel Evans.

When asked whether he was familiar with Agenda 21, Evans responded, "I read what the gentleman brought in. That's what I read. I didn't go out and do any research."

Commissioner Shirlene Tripp said she felt similarly ill-prepared to comment on Agenda 21.

"I'd have liked to see the pros and cons," she said. "We don't do any research. We don't bring anybody in to educate us."

She would have preferred to hold off on passing the resolution until the board had more time to look it over, she said.

Animals among us

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

It has been a continuing pleasure for the nearly 20 years we have lived year-round in Charlevoix to regularly see what is commonly called wildlife right at our doorstep.

The local deer herd, many of which we recognize as individuals, has eaten our Halloween pumpkins each year. Deer are not dentally equipped to readily eat pumpkins, but they manage to break off and scrape out both seeds and pumpkin flesh over the course of a few nights. They have not bothered the pumpkins when they are displayed before Halloween eve, but afterwards, everything but the hard stem winds up as deer food. The deer also eat our shrubs and pick the buds off the roses, but we think it's worth it to have them so close.

What we still call our bird feeder supplies food for much else: turkeys, squirrels, deer, of course, in addition to the sought creatures. This year we have already had more variety of birds than many previous winters. We have seen a sharp-tailed Grouse only once.

The bird highlight of recent months was an immature red-shouldered hawk, which snatched a young squirrel from the ground and waited long enough for us to watch it, with the squirrel clamped in one set of talons. Eventually the hawk managed to fly to a nearby tree with its prize. The sidewalk under that tree was littered with bits of black squirrel hair for days. Life may, at some level, be cruel, but it IS interesting. Maybe if we stay here long enough we will get to see a wolf or mountain lion take down a deer in our front yard.

The long-term animal list includes skunks, foxes, and even a porcupine that climbed our big maple tree and posed for photographs.

Our summer resident chipmunk, the one who would accept peanuts from my hand and even climb up my clothes to get them, disappeared in August. We think maybe it fed an owl. We hear, but have not yet seen the neighborhood owl or owls.

I have begun feeding the park's flock of ducks again. I am pretty sure one of them, an old drake, recognizes me from last winter. That suggests that the duck's memory may be better than we ordinarily give them credit for. Their eyesight is amazing. They can recognize and respond to a barely exposed cob of corn from a block away. This winter I plan to try training them to follow me to the 7-eleven and carry my newspaper part way home.

Encouraging our wildlife may even enhance the tourist business. We most certainly need our wild animals as much as we need a fireplace.

This was written before the Tuesday elections. May all of your favorite candidates win.

Submariners memorial a fitting tribute

Editor:

How gratifying it was to see the Charlevoix Courier's fine photo coverage of the East Park tribute given in honor of the 3,606 submariners lost in action during World War II. The Michigan Submarine Veterans, their families and friends return to Charlevoix each mid-October. They Gather at the USS Escolar memorial to pay tribute to their fellow submariner heros who will forever be on patrol. This is the appropriate kind of memorial to be place in East Park. Perhaps another memorial structure could be placed close to the Pine River Channel in honor of our fishing industry, Coast Guardsmen and our own Great Lakes sailors.

Sincerely,
Dorothy Allers Evans

Hospice care and palliative care helps patients and families focus on living

Editor:

Every November Hospice of Northwest Michigan reaches out to our community to raise awareness about the compassionate care that hospice and palliative care provide patients and families coping with serious and life-limiting illness. This month of awareness provides an opportunity for us to remind people that hospice care and palliative care helps patients and families focus on living.

This surprises some people.

Those of us who have worked in the field have seen firsthand how hospice and palliative care can improve the quality of life. And research shows that families report a better quality of life under hospice and palliative care. To further the surprise, there's a growing body of research showing that hospice and palliative care may prolong the lives of some people who receive care.

The hospice team provides expert medical care to keep patients comfortable and able to enjoy time with loved ones. The hospice team answers questions, offers advice on what to expect, and helps families with the duties of being a caregiver. The team also provides emotional and spiritual support for the entire family.

With the help of hospice, patients and families alike can focus on what's most important — enjoying life together and living as fully as possible.

This important message lasts beyond the month of November and is important all year-round.

If you or a loved one is facing a serious or life-limiting illness, the time to find out more about hospice and palliative care is right now. There is more that can be done. For information, please call (231) 547-6092 or (800) 551-4140.

National Homelessness Awareness Week

Editor:

National Homelessness Awareness Week, Nov. 10-18, is a time to increase awareness about this ongoing crisis affecting more than 636,000 people in the U.S. every day. One way we can reduce our nation's homelessness is to help end domestic violence.

Significant percentages of homeless women report domestic violence was the immediate cause of their homelessness. Many survivors are in highly controlled relationships and lack resources to leave the home they share with an abuser. Without access to money, transportation or a support system, they must choose between staying in an abusive relationship and living on the streets. Homeless shelters are not a safe option for many domestic abuse survivors who are escaping a dangerous relationship. Daily, in the U.S., 37,000 domestic abuse survivors and their children reside in a shelter or transitional housing program. Locally, the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan provides support, counseling and safe shelter to survivors at the Safe Home. Last year, 664 survivors and their children utilized Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan domestic abuse services; 135 of whom sought safety at the agency's Safe Home and 68 made use of transitional supportive housing.

If homelessness is considered an ignored epidemic, domestic violence is an invisible one. It occurs in intimate relationships behind closed doors, leading us to think of it as a private matter. Domestic violence is not a private matter, it is a crime. It is a serious national problem that affects us all — in every community, work place and school.

You can help end domestic abuse! Support, listen to and believe survivors, and speak out against domestic abuse. Volunteer at the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan's Safe Home. Help others become informed by inviting the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan to speak to your organization, group, school or workplace. Be a role model by practicing respectful, healthy, non-violent relationships. Working together as a community, we can make a positive impact on ending domestic violence and homelessness.

In 1867, Messrs. Redington, Nelson & Co. tried to buy land for a lumber mill where the city dock is now but couldn't agree on terms. They turned to pioneer John Dixon instead, and made a bargain with him for a few acres of his land, his original homestead, north across the neck of the channel. By spring of 1868, mill machinery and supplies arrived and a building went up. Two years later, George Easterly bought and ran the business which supplied lumber to Chicago after the Great Fire of 1871, and later much more lumber that helped build structures across the Midwest. In1876, Easterly sold to John Nicholls, who gave the business its final name, the Charlevoix Lumber Company. Over its lifetime the company shipped untold millions of board feet of Northern Michigan lumber to destinations across the nation, and mattress frames as far away as London. The last remnants of the building came out in 1987 to make way for the Edgewater complex beside the bridge.

News-Review names Brougham news editor

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

Rachel Brougham, 34, began work as the Petoskey News-Review's new news editor Monday, Oct. 22, after the departure of long-time wire editor, Neil Stilwell.

Brougham

Brougham has served the newspaper for three years as a reporter covering health, education, arts, entertainment, food, feature stories, investigations and also writes a weekly column and serves on the paper's editorial board.

"I like the fact that we all live here. Being able to write about things that impact me is something I enjoy," said Brougham of working for a community newspaper.

"It felt like a natural fit," she said about applying for the news editor position.

Before coming to the News-Review, Brougham worked as an executive producer for a Northern Michigan television station for five years and worked as a freelance writer.

In her new position she will help reporters develop stories and complete investigations, serve on the paper's editorial board, edit the opinion page and continue to write a weekly column and cover health-related stories.

"Rachel's incredible journalistic talents make her an excellent choice to help lead our newsroom," said executive editor Jeremy McBain. "I look forward to working with her to further enhance our content."

Brougham, an Eastern Michigan University graduate, lives just north of Petoskey with her husband Colin and 3-year-old son Thom. In her free time, she enjoys reading classic literature, running and spending time outside.

The Petoskey News-Review is a sister publication to the Charlevoix Courier. Both are a part of Northern Michigan Review, a division of Schurz Communications.

Health advisory lifted along Bay Harbor shoreline

BAY HARBOR — The Health Department of Northwest Michigan announced Wednesday that it has lifted the last in a series of health advisories relating to shoreline contamination along the Bay Harbor corridor.

Dangerous pH levels — similar to those of a strong bleach solution — first prompted the department to issue a public health advisory when the problem was detected in waters along the Bay Harbor shoreline in 2004. In subsequent years, five more health advisories were issued for areas at East Park and the Bay Harbor development.

But this fall, following eight years of intensive clean-up and monitoring, the Health Department has lifted Bay Harbor's last remaining health advisory.

"Our removal of the final advisory is a major milestone in a long, difficult journey," said Scott Kendzierski, the health department's director of environmental health.

The high alkaline levels were the result of leachate from cement kiln dust, left behind when the former Penn Dixie cement plant ceased operations at the site in the late 1980s. CMS Land Company, a subsidiary of CMS Energy and a partner in the redevelopment of the old plant site in the 1990s, accepted responsibility for the environmental cleanup. The company has been working with the Environmental Protection Agency and Michigan Department of Environmental Quality ever since a pre-treatment plant failure caused leachate to enter Little Traverse Bay in 2004.

Though the final advisory has been lifted, Kendzierski added that the leachate continues to be collected, and that other engineering controls have been installed to prevent leachate entering Little Traverse Bay.

"Ongoing monitoring is critical to assuring the effectiveness of capture, and the safety of public waters," he said.

Michigan Department of Community Health toxicologist Linda Dykema said she is "very pleased that monitored pH values in Bay Harbor continue to remain safe for human exposure."

"The Michigan Department of Community Health supports the decision of the Health Department of Northwest Michigan to lift the remaining public health advisory for Bay Harbor," she added.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego counties. For more information on Bay Harbor advisories and related documents visit the Programs and Services page of the Health Department of Northwest Michigan's Web site, www.nwhealth.org.

The November Back Porch Music Series will be take place at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 10, at the Charlevoix Senior Center building. The evening will begin with a feature performance by "Finding Eden." Sisters Jessica Dominic and Sarah Sheaffer blend their voices in 'sisterly harmony,' accompanying themselves on guitar and mandolin. Their song selections include originals as well as a variety of music to lift your heart and move your spirit.

The featured performers will share music from 7-8:30 p.m., followed by a circle jam session with musicians and poets. Suggested donations are $5/person, $10 per family; all donations are for the scheduled performers. Light refreshments available at no charge.

The Charlevoix Senior Center Building is located near the Corner of West Carpenter and Norwood Road.

It was his impression the resolution was a simple assertion of support for personal property rights, said commissioner Richard Gillespie, although the words "property rights" are not mentioned in the resolution.

Gillespie admitted to not knowing much about the document he voted to oppose.

"Has there ever been more evidence that we need an administrative assistant for our board," he asked.

"Have I studied it? No," said commissioner Ron Reinhardt. But he does believe he has enough information to strongly oppose the policy.

"Any country or other that tries to influence the way this country is run, or even suggests it, I'm against it," he asserted.

In addition to planning and zoning strategies offered by the United Nations, Reinhardt said that multicultural educational programs, such as the International Baccalaureate are harmful to our country.

"I don't like any other country telling us what to do," he repeated.

Conaway, the man who brought the resolution before the board, is more familiar with Agenda 21. He first heard about it four years ago, he said, from a booklet he received in the mail, from an organization called Freedom 21, now Freedom Advocates.

He expressed his fear of the document and how he believes it could seriously damage freedom of choice in America.

The county's recently passed storm water ordinance agreement, where the county agreed to enforce municipalities' storm water ordinances, Conaway says, is one example of the overreach of policies endorsed by the UN.

"Storm water and rain, it all has to be controlled," he complained.

Conaway said his ultimate fear is that these policies could lead to an Orwellian society in America where freedom of choice is non existent.

"It will end up like Russia. High rises with concrete all around," he said.

Choice, said Steve Schnell, community development director for Cheboygan County, is one thing that sustainable development, an idea espoused by the United Nations as well as planners across the United States, can offer.

Schnell sits on the board of directors of the Michigan Association of Planning, and says he agrees with the sentiment of those in opposition to Agenda 21, but says state law already protects the power of local governments to make decisions regarding planning and zoning, regardless of suggestions from outside entities.

He said it's important to not write off effective planning strategies simply because they're included in a document affiliated with the UN.

"We share a common concern that planning should be done at a local level," he said of those who oppose Agenda 21, but added, those liberties are already protected by state and national laws."

Some sustainable development strategies, he said, actually offer more choices for property owners and residents.

"In a mixed-use development, you're actually adding more choices and more flexibility," he said. "It does not limit a building to just one use. Instead, we can build vibrant downtowns where people live and work."

But, it's up to each individual community to make these decisions, he said. That's why the recently-introduced legislation concerns the planner.

"When the state enacts a law requiring local government to do or not do something, that worries me," he said. "This bill is telling local governments what they can or cannot do."

Drew YoungeDyke, policy and communications specialist for the Michigan League of Conservation Voters, grew up in Antrim County.

"This is a red herring issue," he said. "At a local level, what it really does is it drives a false narrative. It becomes dangerous when it weakens support for real conservation projects."

YoungeDyke works for and with several Michigan conservation groups.

"There is no secret plot to take away people's property rights," He said. "As a substantive thing, it's a non-issue. The conservation organizations in Michigan have our roots in the ideals of Teddy Roosevelt, Aldo Leopold and P.S. Lovejoy."

wishes of the community was their reason for running.

Speaking to the Charlevoix Courier late Tuesday, both Stevens and Carlson acknowledged that the margins might have been closer if their opponents' names had been on the ballot, but both said they viewed the outcome of their respective election as not necessarily a referendum on the fireplace project itself, but at least vote of confidence from the community on how they have handled the matter, and running the city in general in recent years.

Stevens said he's glad the election is over and he hopes the divisiveness that has surrounded it and the fireplace issue can be put in the past.

"Things have been all over the board so much," Stevens said. "I don't think people have truly understood the facts. I'm so disappointed in our town where we have clean water, a state-of-the-art fire department, grass clippings picked up from the curbs ... that the town would become so divided over a fireplace."

Asked what the message is he takes from the election, Stevens replied: "I think the people believe us that we are going to stand by our word and proceed as we said."

Perron said he was surprised and disappointed with the outcome, but said he plans to remain active in keeping tabs on city government and may consider another run for office in the future.

"The fireplace represents a bigger issue," Perron said.

Carlson, said he was pleased with the outcome of the election, too.

"I think that it shows that maybe (the fireplace) is not as big or as bad of an issue as [the opponents] thought," Carlson said "It is a vote of confidence ... if you look at the history of our record as being good stewards of the city."

Campbell said even though he was disappointed with the outcome, he felt he accomplished his main goal in running for the mayor's seat in highlighting the fact that many in the community are upset about the fireplace project.

Gibson's race against Cole had far less to do with the fireplace issue. Gibson filed her petition to run against Cole long before there was any talk of the fireplace and Cole has not participated in the discussion or votes on the matter.

Cole said he was pleased with the results and expected the race against Gibson — who is well known in the community and has previously served on the council — to be close.

"I feel the 3rd Ward has spoken and spoken a little louder that there is still work to do," Cole said. "I feel that the 3rd Ward still has confidence in me as their council member and I will to work with them and listen."

He added that he feels no ill-will toward Gibson for the contest.

Gibson congratulated Cole on "a job well done."

"I think he's a good guy," Gibson said.

She added that she plans to run again next year.

Clerk reports strong voter turnout Tuesday

Like most polling places around the area, state and nation, Charlevoix City Clerk Carol Ochs reported strong voter turnouts on Tuesday.

Ochs noted that about 30 people were waiting outside city hall when the doors opened at 7 a.m. and a steady stream of voters filed in throughout the day. She said people seemed to be in a good mood throughout the day.

In the 1st Ward, 562 or 63.43 percent of the ward's 886 registered voters turned out to vote.

In the 2nd Ward, 442 of 705 or 62.7 percent of the registered voters turned out.

In the 3rd Ward, 496 of 820 or 60.49 percent of the registered voters turned out.

Citywide, 1,500 of 2,411 or 62.21 percent of registered voters turned out.

Turnout in surrounding townships included:

Charlevoix Township, 65.68 percent.

Hayes Township, 68.59 percent.

Marion Township, 64.06 percent.

Norwood Township, 71.68 percent.

Eveline, 71.77 percent.

Ochs also is reminding city residents that election signs must come down in the city within three days after the election.

town attraction and meeting place, was proposed to be 8 feet wide, about 7 feet tall topped by a chimney tapering to about 4 feet wide, for a total structure height of about 20 feet. As a condition of his offer, the donor, a man in his 80s and in poor health, had asked that the fireplace be constructed in time for it to be in use for this year's Apple Festival in October. After hearing no objections to the project, the council approved its construction in early August.

Community outcry began a few days later when a tree was removed and foundation work began at the site. Of greatest concern to most was that the structure would block views of Round Lake and the Park and its estimated $6,800 annual cost of operation, among other concerns.

After hearing a chorus of objections from audience members at standing-room-only city council meetings, the matter cooled temporarily, when Buday came forward with his gratis consultation offer and the donor offered to move his construction deadline back to the spring to allow time for more options to be explored.

The council decided to take Buday up on his offer and voted to put the project on hold.

Straebel said he does not yet have any options or suggestions, but will instead be attending the Nov. 19 meeting intending to gather input for the council, staff and the community.

In early October, two community members tried to jump start the process by hosting a forum at the Charlevoix Public Library in hopes of generating some creative options for the fireplace project, however, most of the audience members who participated in forum made it clear that the only option acceptable to them is to build no fireplace at all.

The second of the two planned sessions for that forum is set for 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 14, again at the library.

In another other fireplace-related matter, the Charlevoix County Election Commission is slated to meet at 1:30 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 12, in the commissioners room at the Charlevoix County Building to consider the "clarity" of proposed language submitted by 3rd Ward city resident Julee Roth for a petition to force an election to recall 3rd Ward council member Jill Picha for her support of the fireplace project.

Way finishes fourth in state final

BROOKLYN — Charlevoix sophomore Amber Way capped a solid season with a solid finish Saturday at the Division III state finals at Michigan International Speedway.

Way earned a second-straight All-State medal as she finished fourth overall in 18:13.6 seconds to lead a trio of Rayder runners.

"She came up to me and was laughing after the race because she really thought she could've finished higher," Charlevoix coach Mary Plude said. "She knew she was in the wrong place after the first 800 meters. She wanted to be at least behind the first tier of runner and at the mile and a half mark was about 20th.

"She was playing catch-up and was fourth entering the stadium and was trying to close in on third."

Just ahead of Way was Manistee's Annie Fuller, the reigning 800 meter girls champion who also just edged Way in the regional at Benzie Central.

"We knew Annie Fuller had a really good kick and she set her up exactly for what she was going to do."

Fuller ended up placing third in 18:10.8, while Macomb Lutheran North's Gina Patterson won the girls Division III individual title in 17:43.4. Raquel Serna of St. Louis was second in 17:59.8.

Jackson Lumen Christi won the Division III girls' team title as they finished with 167 points, while Grandville Calvin Christian was second, 171; and Caro was third, 201.

Lumen Christi also won the boys' Division III title as they finished with 129 points. Marlette was second with 137 points, while Grandville Calvin Christian was third, 147.

Nick Raymond of Erie Mason won the boys race in 15:05.1.

Plude said the first 800-1000 meters is typically where the race is usually set.

"I thought Amber ran a really good last two miles," Plude said. "I really can't be disappointed in her. She always does exactly what you ask of her."

Also for the Rayder girls, senior Olivia Certa capped her career with a 52nd place finish as she finished in 19:51.6. After transferring to Charlevoix from Ellsworth, Certa earned All-State honors last season and was running in her fourth-straight Division III final.

"She overcame some struggles this year and from the conference meet on ran some great races," Plude said. "She's had a great career and I know she's BOYNE CITY — After jumping out to an early two-set lead, the Charlevoix Rayder volleyball team couldn't hold off a comeback bid from perennial conference rival Boyne City in a Class C District final match in Boyne City Thursday, Nov. 1.

The Ramblers topped the Rayders, 16-25, 24-26, 25-23, 25-13, 15-10, putting an early end to the Rayders' hope of repeating their run deep into the playoffs last year and giving Boyne City its first Class C district title since 2008.

Kylie Hicks had 24 kills, 22 digs and six blocks while setter Heather Nichols added 38 assists and five aces as the Ramblers knocked off the defending district champion and last season's Class C state semifinalists.

With the win, the Ramblers, 33-13-5, advance to regional play beginning Tuesday, Nov. 6, in Traverse City against the Maple City Glen Lake district winner.

"We struggled again with serve receive the first and second game," Boyne City coach Casie Parker said. "I was unsure if we would be able to come back mentally. We had to refocus and concentrate on our strengths again."

Charlevoix took a lead in the third set until Boyne City rallied back to an 18-17 advantage before eventually taking the all-important set, 25-23.

"We made team adjustments during the third set," Parker said. "I told the girls and pointed at each one and told them they were not playing to

Boyne City falls to TC St. Francis after defeating Rayders in District finals

TRAVERSE CITY Traverse City St. Francis rallied to top Boyne City, 27-25, 25-22, 25-21, in a Class C regional semifinal Tuesday.

With the win, St. Francis, 39-7-3, advances to Thursday's regional final against Johannesburg-Lewiston. Johannesburg-Lewiston advanced to the final with a 25-27, 12-25, 25-22, 25-20, 15-12 win over McBain.

Boyne City, which won its first district title since the 2008 season when it defeated Charlevoix on Thursday, Nov. 1, closes a 33-14-5 season.

"We were up all three games, but just couldn't pull it off," Boyne City coach Casie Parker said. "All three games were very close."

St. Francis trailed 23-21 in the first game and 17-12 in the second and third games before coming back.

"It was exciting, nerve-wracking," St. Francis coach Rita Jones told the Traverse City Record-Eagle. "We've been pretty darn good at finishing all year."

In the first set, St. Francis' Bridget Bussell — who finished with 14 kills, six digs and four aces, had a kill to pull the Glads within a point, 23-22, and then served a pair of aces.

The Ramblers tied the match at 25-all before the Gladiators closed out the first set with a Bussell kill.

Boyne City led in the second game, 21-20, before the Glads again responded. In the third set, the Ramblers led 21-17 before St. Francis scored the final eight points. Madeline Rysztak, who finished with 10 kills, five digs and two block, had two kills to end the match.

"They were exciting games," Parker said. "It's just too bad we did not come out on top. Traverse City is known for their tough serving. I thought we passed better against them this game than we have in the past."

For the Ramblers, Heather Nichols finished with 26 assists and 14 digs, while Kylie Hicks added 20 kills, 14 digs and three blocks. Also for Boyne, Rainy McCune had four aces, while Hicks, Nichols, McCune, Erin Baker, Paige Hombeck and Courtney Weldon were all perfect from the serving line.

"When their top player jump served we put our setter Heather Nichols passing," Parker said. "She seemed to handle her serves the best."

Parked added Hicks played well for the Ramblers, but the team struggled when she went to the back row in the rotation.

"All in all it has been a great season for us," Parker said. "We are going to miss our two seniors (Dani Matthew and Mary Myers). They were great leaders."

their strengths. It was a team thing."

Also for the Ramblers, Erin Baker had 28 digs, while Rainy McCune added 15 digs and eight kills. Hicks also was perfect from the service line.

"The girls were able to pull in together," Parker said. "We got the momentum at the end of the second game and seemed to keep it from there on out. We started playing smarter and doing things we planned to do."

Parker lauded the efforts of both Hicks and Baker.

"Kylie was a big factor for us with hitting," Parker said. "She hit very well all night, we just didn't get her the ball enough in the first two games. Erin Baker played great defense tonight and stepped it up the last three games."

For Charlevoix, Madeline Boss had a team-high 21 kills and 19 digs, while Karley Pearsall added 16 kills and seven digs. Also for the Rayders, Gloria Greene had 27 assists and 14 digs, while Cassidy Peebles had 11 digs and three aces.

Anna Way added four kills, while Kelsey Pischner had eight digs and six aces and Jennaca Holecheck had nine digs.

"This was a very tough loss for the girls," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "The girls played with control and poise and the third set was very possible for us to take that, tieing it up 15-15 and 20-20. I give credit to Boyne and their coach, Casie Parker, for not giving up."

Charlevoix will graduate five seniors in Way, Peebles, Pearsall, Katie Paramo and Paige Poirier.

"It was a great experience this year with this group of awesome girls," Randall said. "Our team-unity by the end of the season was very stable and I give credit to the girls for realizing that our team unit came first."

"Hopefully she'll get four more years to run."

Junior Caroline Boss finished 77th in 20:13.8.

"Caroline has dropped about a minute 15 from last year," Plude said. "She's really become a contender and she's spent most of the season in the water rehabbing an injury. To be All-Conference, All-Region and finish the year at the state meet, that's something.

"She outkicked about 10 people in the final 100 meters."

Also in the girls race, East Jordan sophomore Kayla Keane was 88th overall in 20:19.7.

In the boys race, East Jordan junior Josh Wojan was 32nd in 16:37.3 and narrowly missed an All-State top 30 finish, while Charlevoix's Jackson Buday was 81st in 17:08.8.

Wojan was 60th in last year's state meet, while Buday was 129th.

"I'd say Jackson ran a good race except for the last 800," Charlevoix coach Ken Plude said. "A few guys passed him and he ran out of gas in the end."

Michigan voters reject all six ballot proposals

DAVID N. GOODMAN
Associated Press

DETROIT — Battered by incessant TV ads funded by $100 million in ballot issue campaign spending, Michigan voters soundly rejected five proposals to amend the state constitution to deal with issues ranging from collective bargaining to building a new bridge to Canada.

In a blow to Gov. Rick Snyder, they also rejected by a narrower margin a proposal that would have retained an emergency managers law he championed that gave state-appointed managers sweeping authority to cancel union contracts and oust elected officials overseeing insolvent local governments.

"They take the power too far," attorney Michelle Harrell, 46, said while voting against the proposal in Grosse Pointe Woods on Tuesday. "To suddenly say, 'I'm going to stop paying you,' is undemocratic."

Altogether, supporters and opponents of the ballot proposals reported they spent at least $105 million on the campaigns through Oct. 26. The rejected constitutional amendments included labor-backed Proposal 2 to guarantee collective bargaining rights, another to give bargaining rights to home health workers, and an anti-tax proposal to require a two-thirds legislative vote to raise state taxes.

Collective bargaining advocates "were unable to overcome the flood of corporate special interest money spent on ads riddled with lies, distortions and scare tactics meant to mislead voters," said Dan Lijana, a spokesman for the Proposal 2 campaign.

The rejected proposals also included Ambassador Bridge owner Manuel "Matty" Moroun's efforts to require a public vote before any competing international crossing can be built with state money, as well as environmentalists' Proposal 3, which would have required that Michigan utilities get 25 percent of their power from renewable sources by 2025.

"It is clear the voters resisted amending the constitution," said Mickey Blashfield, a leader of the failed effort to restrict new bridge construction.

The collective bargaining measure also would have banned right-to-work laws — which limit unions' ability to collect fees from nonunion workers — and rolled back recent GOP lawmaker moves to take some public employee benefits and staffing issues off the negotiating table.

Passage would have given public and private workers in Michigan the constitutional right to organize in unions and collectively bargain contracts. The proposal states any current or future laws limiting such rights would be invalid. Opponents — including Snyder — argued that would have made union leaders more powerful than elected officials and erased state and local governments' ability to set employment terms and control budgets.

Another union-backed measure on the ballot, Proposal 4, called specifically for allowing home health care workers to unionize.

Proposal 1 asked voters to retain the sweeping law that allowed the state to appoint managers for municipalities and school districts deemed to be in fiscal emergencies. Snyder and others said the law was needed so Michigan could step in to help fix financially struggling Michigan entities. Critics argued it represented a power grab that usurps the rights of local elected officials.

The bridge proposal, Proposal 6, was one of most intensely debated ballot measures. It called for changing the constitution to require a statewide vote on plans for any new international crossing. It came in response to the proposed construction of a government-brokered Canadian-financed bridge between Detroit and Windsor, Ontario.

Moroun instead wants to build a new span of his own, and spent millions of advertising dollars to support the ballot proposal, which would not allow the state to spend money on such projects without approval from a majority of Michigan voters.

Flu shot clinic set for Nov. 14

Residents seeking flu shots and other important immunizations are encouraged to contact the Health Department of Northwest Michigan at (800) 432-4121 to schedule one of the remaining appointments during its Nov. 14 immunization clinic at Charlevoix Middle School, 108 E. Garfield Ave. in Charlevoix.

"The single best way to prevent getting the flu is to get vaccinated every year," said Dr. Joshua Meyerson, medical director for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan. "That's why the Health Department offers these immunization clinics throughout the four-county health district."

Pat Fralick, the Health Department's Director of Family and Community Health, says the charge for a flu vaccine is $25, and charges for additional vaccines vary.

"We can also bill Medicare, Medicaid, and several private health insurance companies for immunizations," Fralick added, noting that the Health Department does not turn away anyone age 18 or younger who is uninsured and unable to pay for immunizations required for school. Anyone under age 18 must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Fralick recommends making appointments at the Community Immunization Clinics. "We do quite a lot of preparation to make sure people can get in and out as quickly as possible," she said. "When we know how many are coming, we can bring plenty of vaccine and have adequate nursing staff. We can also identify any other vaccines individuals may need by checking Michigan Care Improvement Registry in advance, and we can administer them during that same appointment."

Health officials said influenza viruses are spread when someone who is sick with the flu coughs, sneezes or speaks, releasing viruses into the air for other people to breathe. When these viruses enter the nose, throat, or lungs, they begin to multiply, causing disease. The viruses can also be spread when a person touches a surface with flu viruses on it and then touches his or her nose or mouth.

MacMaster cruises to win in 105th

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

MacMaster

As expected, incumbent Greg MacMaster, R-Kewadin, cruised to victory in Michigan's 105th State Representative District, carrying more than 65 percent of the vote.

MacMaster defeated democratic challenger Bill Wieske in all five counties represented in the 105th — Antrim, Charlevoix, Montmorency, Otsego and Oscoda.

"I am very excited to get to work and to build upon the things we have started during the past two years," MacMaster said.

In Antrim County, MacMaster carried 68 percent of the vote. In Charlevoix and Otsego counties, he carried 67 percent in vote. In Montmorency County, he garnered 66 percent, and in Oscoda County, he garnered 61 percent.

The seat is a 2-year term. MacMaster defeated democrat Greg Dean to earn his seat.

MacMaster said one of the key things he aims to do is grow the economy.

"We want to give businesses the opportunity to not only come here, but also give them the opportunity to stay here for a long amount of time," he said. "We want to provide them the environment to grow the economy and create jobs."

Benishek declared the winner in 1st Congressional race

BRANDON HUBBARD
Northern Michigan Review

Benishek

Congressman Dan Benishek will serve another two-year term in the U.S. House of Representatives, the Associated Press announced based on its own tabulations Wednesday.

Benishek defeated his opponent former state Rep. Gary McDowell, D-Rudyard, by 2,297 unofficially according to the AP and the Michigan Secretary of State's vote count, which represents a less than 1 percent victory margin, 166,833 to 164,536.

Benishek declared victory early, but for the McDowell campaign the race was too close to call immediately.

Wednesday afternoon, Democrats shifted their attention to whether there were mistakes made in the counting and whether a recount is a possibility.

Counties have until Nov. 20 to verify their elections through bipartisan boards of canvassers, before the State Board of Canvassers will certify the numbers on Nov. 26.

Emmet County canvassed its vote Wednesday afternoon.

"I don't expect any major changes," said Gail Martin, Emmet County Clerk, adding that she thinks counties with closer vote totals would be the target of a recount.

A McDowell campaign staffer, she said, was on hand to verify that all the ballots had been properly sealed from tampering and listen to the outcome.

Having campaign workers following the canvassing is a standard practice to determine whether a recount is a possibility.

Because of the large costs associated with a recount — especially in the 1st Congressional District where there are 32 counties — only problematic voting precincts would be targeted to have their numbers checked.

McDowell's campaign issued a statement Wednesday afternoon, saying it was "working together" with the candidate to verify all absentee, provisional and military ballots are counted during the canvassing process today.

A hay farmer and retired United Postal Service driver, McDowell also thanked his supporters.

"I am so proud of the grassroots campaign we built to fight for hard-working middle class families in Northern Michigan," he said.

"We owe it to them and our overseas military to let the process continue and make sure that all absentee and provisional ballots are counted."

In his victory statement early Wednesday morning, Benishek thanked his family and supporters, but tempered his comments because of the work he sees in the future.

"For the next two years my focus will remain on bringing jobs back to Northern Michigan, reining in the spending and fighting to keep the American Dream alive for our children and grandchildren," Benishek said.

"However, none of this would have been possible without the support of the voters."

2012 voter turnout falls short of 2008 numbers

Despite long lines and early record paces in some local precincts, total voter turnout in Emmet County finished lower than 2008.

About 66 percent or 17,872 of the 26,993 registered voters in Emmet Count cast ballots Tuesday. That figure is slightly lower than the 69 percent who voted in 2008

Several precincts had turnouts more than 70 percent, but Readmond led the county with 75 percent. McKinley had the lowest percent of its electorate turnout with 48 percent.

Charlevoix County also has about a 3 percent loss in voter turnout compared to 2008.

About 65 percent, 14,204 of 21,841 registered voters, cast ballots this time, compared to 68 percent in 2008.

Peane Township had an impressive 89 percent (Only 33 voters of the 314 registered did not vote) turnout to lead Charlevoix County. Low voter turnout was East Jordan with 53 percent, despite a local school millage on the ballot.

The county totals reflect the overall trend in Michigan.

The state had 4,570,486 voters cast ballots in Michigan Tuesday, less than the last two presidential elections.

The all-time record turnout was 2008 with 5,039,080 voters in state.

0700 CARD OF THANKS

DEAR FRIENDS... Thank You
I lost my best friend, wife, and mother to my children on Tuesday, October 30th.
The response of love and support for me and my children was overwhelming.
A tribute to Shawn and the people she touched

Thank you to my friends and neighbors. My home was quickly filled with food, gifts, cards, prayers, support numbers, and tears of sadness.

Thank you teammates at the CCFD. The responding team, Bob, Bill, Dan and Willy gave it 100 percent, even with eyes full of tears. And for putting rigs and trucks in the procession, that will impact my life for ever. To my brothers of the barge, what an honor, lights flashing, stopping the town in its tracks...

Thank you to the 600 plus people that were in attendance for the visitation and service, also to Ron Winchester and staff, job well done. You followed my wishes perfectly, bringing comfort to my family.

Thank you Pastor Chip and the church staff, your kindness and willingness to follow my foggy minded plan, was top notch and the message delivered will impact lives.

Charlevoix Public Schools. Wow, I would not have thought to send kids to my home on that 1st day, but rest assured it made a difference. My kids were shown love from peers that helped clear the darkness.

I can not possibly thank everyone, I tried to keep track but could not, so please accept this as my thank you card. My life radically changed this week, but in the midst of my devastation I saw the love of a community poured out on one family, this does not exist anywhere but in towns like Charlevoix.

Thank you for honoring Shawn McCraney,
she will be missed.

Moving forward

County commits to non-motorized trail

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

Charlevoix County has committed to moving forward with the construction of a paved recreational pathway from Boyne City to the Evangeline/Bay Township line.

In a 5-1 vote, the county board of commissioners accepted a $300,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources at its meeting Wednesday to begin the 3.2 mile trail. It is the first of three phases planned for a larger trail that would eventually stretch from Boyne City to Charlevoix and be accessible to bicycles, pedestrians and those on roller blades, skateboards or in wheelchairs. Commissioner Richard Gillespie voted against accepting the grant.

"My feeling is, this is a great thing for Charlevoix County," said board chair Joel Evans.

By accepting the grant, the county committed to finishing the entire first phase of the trail, which would cost approximately $1 million, by August, 2014.

The county would pay for the $300,000 up front and the state would reimburse it for that cost soon after. Also, Boyne City has been conditionally approved for a $565,900 grant from the Michigan Department of Transportation for phase one of the path and the county has been offered funds equalling about $90,000 from the city of Boyne City, Evangeline Township, Top-of-Michigan Trails Council and Charlevoix Community Foundation. In all, the reimbursements, contributions and grants cover the full cost of the first phase of the project.

In a room filled to the brim with citizens eager to share their thoughts on the trail, there were some voices of dissent, but most public comments were supportive of the pathway.

"This is a big occasion for Charlevoix County and our region," said Boyne City City Manager Michael Cain. "There are big, positive implications for economic development" because many now see a recreational pathway as a perk when deciding where to live, work or start a business, he said.

"It really is an economic benefit," agreed Boyne City Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Jim Baumann. He gets calls often from people looking for a trail for bicycling and, he said, he has to send them elsewhere.

Fireplace fracas heating up

Recall petition tossed, council set to start work with architect

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The controversy surrounding the proposed community fireplace in Charlevoix's East Park is poised to continue heating up, even after two anti-fireplace write-in candidates were soundly defeated in the city council and mayoral elections earlier this month.

At a hearing on Monday, the Charlevoix County Election Commission ruled that proposed language for a petition to recall Charlevoix City Council member Jill Picha was not clear enough.

By a unanimous vote the commission, made up of probate judge Frederick Mulhauser, Charlevoix County Clerk Cheryl Browe and Charlevoix County Treasurer Marilyn Cousineau, ruled that language proposed for the petition filed on Oct. 29 by 3rd Ward resident Julee Roth was too vague.

Roth's proposed petition language reads that Picha should be recalled for: "violating the democratic process, mismanagement of city property and her willful support of resolutions against her ward's written and vocal objections."

Roth said in a news release about the recall effort that her main reason for seeking Picha's recall was her support of a controversial proposed project to build a community fireplace in East Park.

Before either side had a chance to speak at Monday's meeting, all three commission members said they were inclined to reject the language base on the "violating the democratic process" language.

However, when attorney Scott Beatty, speaking on behalf of Picha argued that all of the language is too vague, the board seemed willing to consider that position as well.

Beatty pointed to several Michigan Court of Appeals cases to further his position that recall language should be more specific. He said without enough specificity, those signing the petition don't know what the alleged problem is for which the recall is sought, and Picha doesn't have a fair chance to defend herself against the effort.

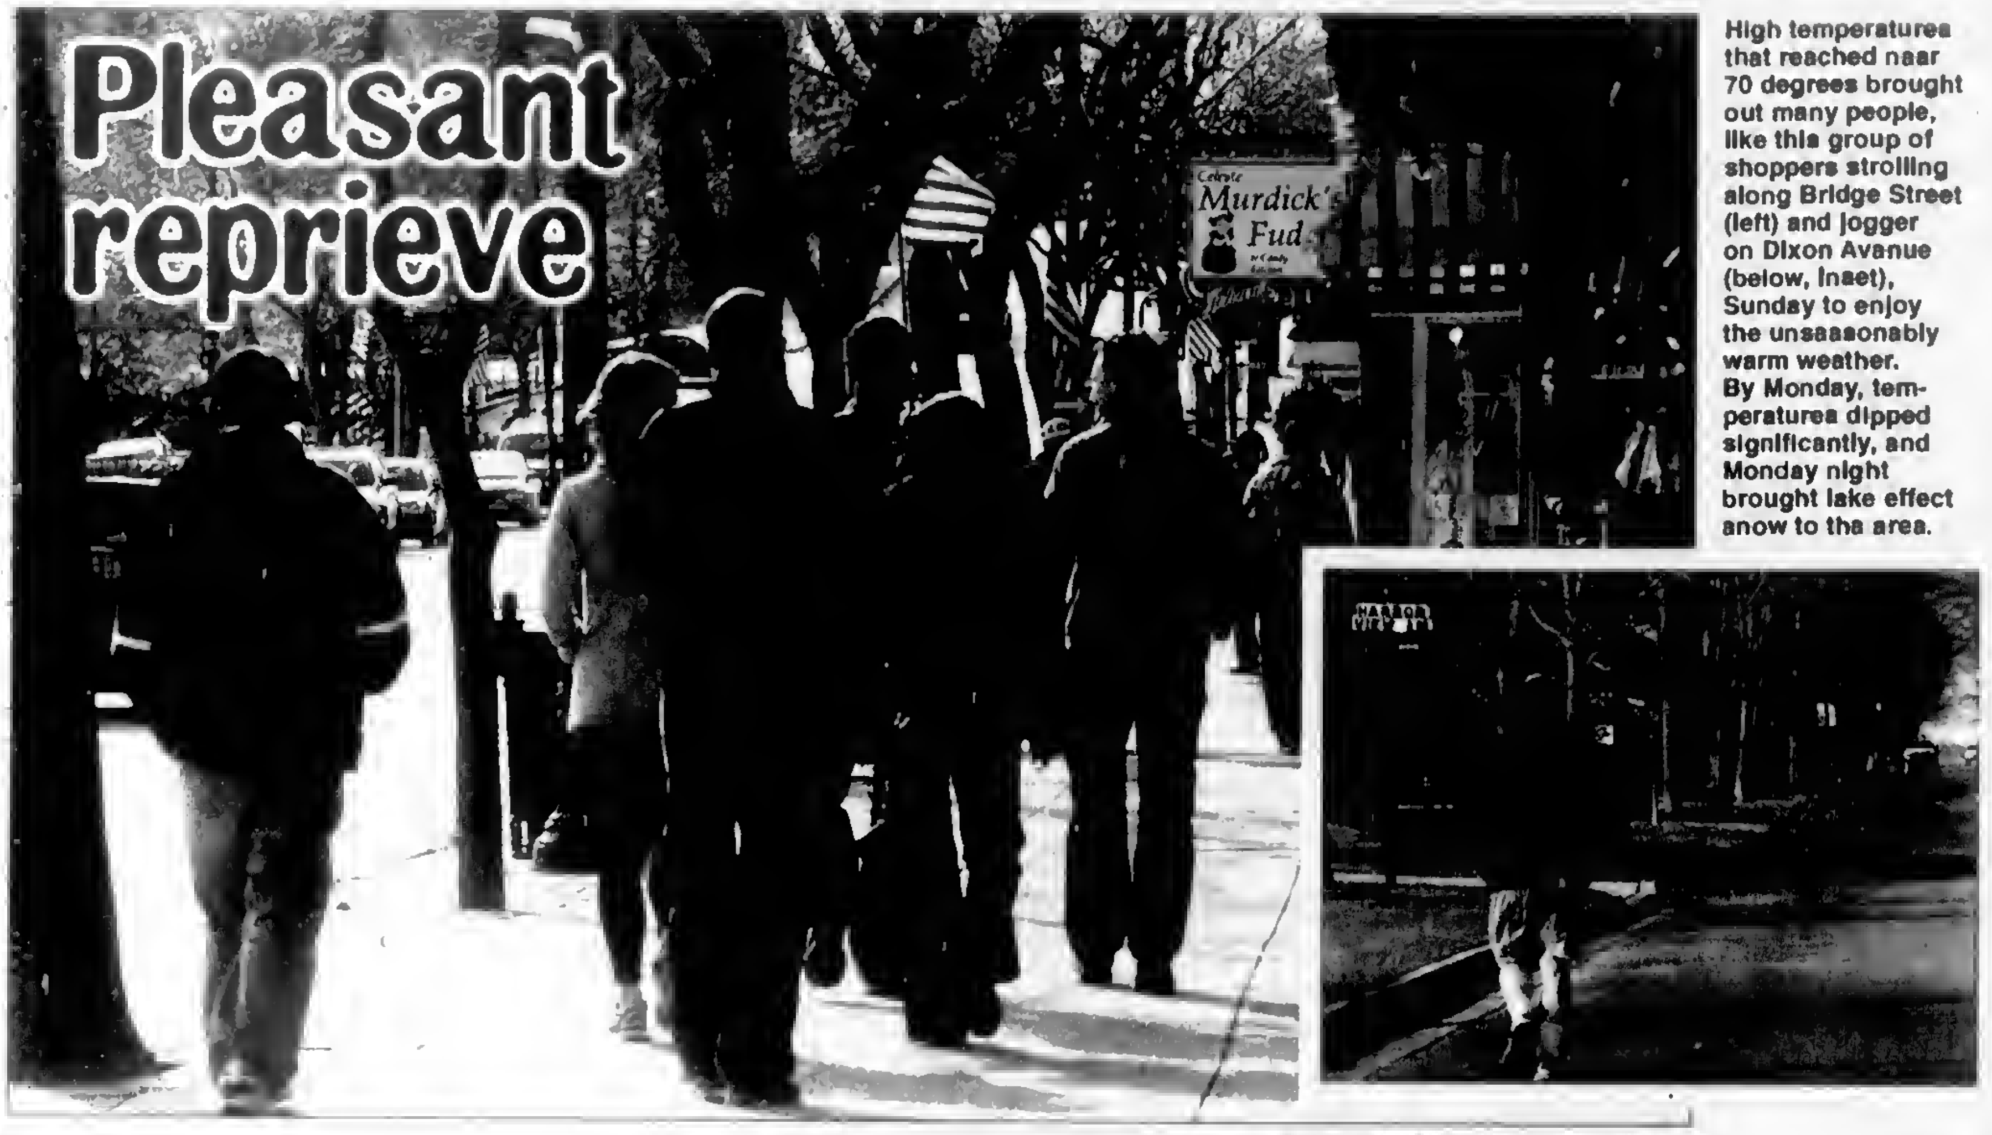
Pleasant reprieve



High temperatures that reached near 70 degrees brought out many people, like this group of shoppers strolling along Bridge Street (left) and jogger on Dixon Avenue (below, inset), Sunday to enjoy the unseasonably warm weather. By Monday, temperatures dipped significantly, and Monday night brought lake effect snow to the area.

EPA to host informational sessions on solvent contamination Nov. 19

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Officials with the Environmental Protection Agency are planning two informational sessions on Monday, Nov. 19, at the Charlevoix Public Library to share information with the community on status of a decades-old Superfund ground contamination cleanup effort.

The informational sessions will take place from 2-4 p.m. and from 5:30-7:30 p.m. in the library's community room B.

During these sessions, staff from the EPA will be available to discuss the results of recent soil sample testing in the southwest quadrant of the city and what the next steps in their process will be.

In August, staff from the EPA's Chicago office were in town with contractors drilling holes and taking soil core and groundwater samples from various areas to check on the status of cleaning solvent contamination found in the groundwater about 30 years ago.

A state of Michigan investigation later determined that the main sources of the contamination came from several dry-cleaning, laundry and tooling businesses mainly in the 200 block of Garfield and Lincoln avenues, but also the 100 block of Hurlbut and the 200 block of Newman. The state eventually set up filtering systems at three of the source sites in an effort to clean up some of the source contaminates and the city's municipal water wells were abandoned in favor of a system that draws water from Lake Michigan. By removing possible exposure through drinking water, authorities decided that the greatest threat to humans was eliminated and that the chemicals would simply be allowed to dissipate and be flushed out of the ground and groundwater by natural processes over time.

However, during testing in 2006 to see if the area was "clean" enough to release for unrestricted use, levels of one contaminant, PCE, were discovered to be too high to "release" the site.

The most recent five-year review, which was about a year ago, found that while levels of one contaminant (TCE) have been about as expected, levels of the PCE remain higher than expected at this point in the natural flushing process. The search for more detailed information on the status of the contamination is what prompted the new samples to be taken in August.

One of the main reasons officials are taking a fresh look at the status of the contamination is over concerns for something known as "vapor intrusion." Vapor intrusion is when vapors from contaminated soil or groundwater seep into buildings, exposing occupants to breathing the vapors. Long term exposure to breathing vapors from either solvent can have serious health effects, according to the EPA.

EPA remedial project manager Matt Ohl told the Courier Wednesday that several of the soil borings did find higher-than-expected levels of contamination.

Ohl said that means the next step for the EPA is to get air samples from inside homes near the sites of the contamination. He said sometime in the coming months home and business owners near the areas where the elevated levels were found will be getting a letter from the EPA asking permission to have access to their property for further testing. Ohl said testing could involve drilling a small hole in a concrete basement floor, an air sample collection canister or a mobile lab that would collect air samples using hoses and forced air.

He said exactly how many homes will be tested will depend on the initial results from the locations nearest the contamination sites. If vapor intrusion is discovered in the first tier of properties, crews would seek to take samples from the next-closest properties.

He added that the most common way to address vapor intrusion is to create a system similar to a drain tile around the base of the foundation. The tile would collect the vapor and then it would be allowed to escape through a vent pipe through the roof.

Ohl said EPA officials hope to contact nearby residents seeking permission to do testing in their homes sometime in the next month or two and that the actual testing would take place sometime in February or March.

At Monday's informational session, EPA staff will be on hand to provide data from the most recent testing and to explain the next steps in the process. Ohl said no formal presentation will be made during the event, and residents are encouraged to come and go as their schedules permit.

Safe Routes to School meeting set for Monday

Safe Routes To School organizers are hoping the program's "four E's" will earn all A's with parents, students and the entire Charlevoix community.

The Safe Routes to School Action Plan, the elements of which include education, encouragement, enforcement and engineering – will be presented during a forum at the Charlevoix Middle School in the Rayder Room from 5:30-6:30 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 19. Organizers are strongly encouraging parent involvement in the program.

Safe Routes to School is a strategy recommended by the Centers for Disease Control to encourage children to walk and bike to school, and to ensure their communities are equipped with carefully-planned routes and other resources to help them do it safely. It was made possible in Charlevoix through a grant received earlier this year from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. The purpose of the forum will be to educate the community about the program's objectives, development and implementation, according to Jim Harrington, the Building Healthy Communities consultant for the Health Department.

The forum is open to anyone.

"Charlevoix Middle School has completed its walking and biking audits," Harrington said. "The school has also completed surveys of students and parents on walking and biking behaviors and attitudes, which will be shared at the forum. Our action plan calls for us to educate the public, encourage students and parents to participate, enforce controls that will keep kids safe, and engineer new solutions to overcome obstacles to these healthy behaviors."

Charlevoix Middle School Principal Travis Garrett said the process, to date, has been lengthy but worthwhile.

"I am excited to be moving forward with our Safe Routes To School grant," Garrett said. "And to hopefully be able to provide a safer environment for kids who want to walk to and from school on a daily basis."

Garrett was the catalyst to starting the program in Charlevoix after he began having concerns about students crossing U.S. 31 (Bridge Street) while traveling to and from school. School officials are hoping to apply for grants to help pay for a crosswalk and other infrastructure to be installed near the schools to make the street crossing safer for students.

Forum attendees will be treated to refreshments and a healthy snack. For more information on the forum or the Safe Routes to School program, contact Harrington at (989) 619-4204 or j.harrington@nwhealth.org.

Gary McDowell concedes in First Congressional race

BRANDON HUBBARD
Northern Michigan Review

Democratic candidate Gary McDowell conceded a narrow defeat late Friday, Nov. 9, in Michigan's 1st Congressional district, ending speculation a recount could be possible.

McDowell called incumbent Congressman Dan Benishek, R-Crystal Falls, to congratulate him on his victory, which stands unofficially at less than a percentage point between both candidates. The race was a rematch for the candidates, who also faced off in 2010 when Benishek won by 11 percent.

The Democrat and former three-term state representative had held off conceding the race because he believed the race was "too close to call" until canvassers had totaled all the votes in the large district.

"I am proud of the campaign we ran to fight for good-paying jobs, protect Medicare and defend our Great Lakes," McDowell said in a statement. "I called Congressman Benishek tonight to congratulate him on his successful campaign and wish him luck in his next term in Congress."

Volunteers for the McDowell for Congress campaign plan to continue to monitor the vote canvassing in the district that covers the entire Upper Peninsula and about a third of the northern Lower Peninsula. Counties have until Nov. 20 to verify their elections, before sending them forward for the state to certify.

There was speculation earlier in the week that a recount could be a possibility, but the McDowell campaign staff said Friday night it anticipates the final total — 166,902 to 164,574 for Benishek — to hold steady during the verification process.

McDowell, who was expected to return to his home in Rudyard to be with his family over the weekend, thanked voters in Northern Michigan and his supporters for "taking part in this critical election."

Open House Nov. 19 to discuss the Environmental Investigation in Charlevoix, Michigan

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is hosting two open house sessions where residents can discuss a "vapor intrusion" investigation currently under way in the community. Vapor intrusion can occur when hazardous pollutants trapped underground in water or soil release gas that can seep into basements and crawl spaces of homes and buildings and contaminate indoor air. EPA staff will be available at the open house sessions Monday, Nov. 19, 2 – 4 p.m. and 5:30 – 7:30 p.m. in Community Room B of the Charlevoix Public Library, 200 Clinton St.

This August EPA did soil borings in part of the city checking for potentially hazardous vapors released from chemicals left behind by now-closed dry cleaners and industries. Several of these former facilities were located in an area from Garfield Street north to Park Street.

The EPA project manager will have charts and maps showing the investigation area and will meet one-on-one with interested residents. No formal presentation will be held so visitors can come and go as their schedule allows.

EPA to host informational sessions on solvent contamination Nov. 19

Plan for your pets during emergencies, too

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

His small frame shivers uncontrollably beneath the mats of clinging wet fur. The wind lashes at the windows breaking them with malice and bringing with it waves of salty water in an unforgiving force. What was once a tranquil place he knew as home has turned upon itself becoming a weapon rather than a safe haven. Debris is moving toward him so quickly he attempts to save himself by climbing onto furniture trying to escape the inevitable. He hides under the rafters in the cold and dark, trembling from fear and abandonment. His body clings to life wondering if he'll ever see his owners again. His owners not wanting to, left as instructed, thinking the storm would come and then quickly leave. They had thought they'd be gone for a day but now it has turned to four.

He is one of the many pets displaced by Superstorm Sandy. Fortunately, he was rescued by volunteers who brought small boats into the area and he is safe and sound in one of the city shelters that were quickly put together. Like so many other displaced pets, they are hungry for food and attention and are still in shock — not any different than the feelings their owners are now processing.

During hurricanes, tornadoes and blizzards there is an [illegible] that comes with every disaster and the worry about lost loved ones. It is sad that there is human loss but my heart also breaks for pets left behind in apartments and homes waiting for their families to return. Sadly there are some owners who have perished in the disaster and their pets are still hopeful of seeing their master's face again.

Fortuitously, organizations locally and nationally stepped in and have created housing in the bustling New York City with food and shelter to care for injured and lost animals until someone retrieves them. The same members of these groups went out in boats to rescue everything from kittens to parakeets. Some of the critters were injured by fallen trees, roofs and floating debris and sadly some did not make it out alive. It's not that the owners didn't care about their pets but they didn't plan on such a violent storm and needed to save themselves and their children. Something that may have helped would have been a disaster plan for the entire family including family pets. Whether its fire or flood there is secure feelings knowing you have a plan in place.

Here is some information that may be of help: Make certain that your pet has a collar with information that is up to date with your current phone number. Micro-chipping is always a good idea, especially if their tag comes loose or your pet doesn't wear a collar. If you need to leave a pet behind, leave a sign for emergency workers that indicates how many pets are inside or have the sign say "Please save my cat" or "My dog is still here."

Contact your local humane society to see if they have an emergency plan in place or what they might recommend. If you leave for whatever reason to find shelter from lack of heat or flooding find out which hotels or motels take pets.

So just as we are getting ready for winter with snow shovels, window scrapers, extra weight on our vehicle or snow tires, salt or kitty litter, water, candles and flashlights, we need to remember to include our pets into our planning. We never know what each new day will bring.

In 1868, pioneer business partners Amos Fox and Hiram Rose constructed the first wood building on downtown Bridge Street just southeast of the bridge. It opened in 1869 as The Mammoth Store of general merchandise which sold a little bit of everything. Fox and Rose held almost a commercial monopoly until the building boom of 1872 brought several other businesses to town. The road to what is now the city dock can be seen at far right. The first circuit court session of a newly formed Charlevoix County was held on the second floor in August that year. At lower left appears a man holding a sign proclaiming "American Express." The building held one of over 4,000 agencies for the nation's leading shipping and delivery company. Money orders (initiated in 1882) and traveler's checks (1891) could be purchased here. Several varied businesses were located on this spot until the structure was torn out in 1941 for the anticipated arrival of a new bridge. That was delayed until 1947 by the advent and aftereffects of World War II. Where was it located exactly? It was directly across Bridge Street from today's Elements gift store. Battle Those Low Rates - with Three Types of Income

If you depend on fixed-income investments for at least part of your income, you probably haven't been too happy in recent years, as interest rates have hit historic lows. Nonetheless, even in a low-rate environment, you can broaden the income-producing potential of your investment portfolio.

However, before taking action it's helpful to know what the near-term direction of interest rates may look like. The Federal Reserve has stated that it plans to keep short-term rates at their current historic lows until at least mid-2015. The Fed doesn't control long-term rates, making them somewhat less predictable, but it's still likely that these rates will rise sooner than short-term ones.

In any case, rather than worry about something you can't control - that is, interest rate movements - try to focus on those things you can accomplish. And one achievable goal is to create an investment mix that includes three types of income: variable, reliable and rising.

• Variable income investments

Some variable income investments, such as certificates of deposit (CDs), offer significant protection of principal, and the value of your investment won't change with fluctuating interest rates, provided you hold your CD until maturity. Of course, current rates are quite low, which means CDs provide you with little income today, but their rates have the potential to rise along with short-term interest rates.

• Reliable income investments

When you purchase reliable income investments, which can include individual bonds, you have the opportunity to earn more income today, and more consistent income over time, than you'd typically get from variable income investments. However, you will likely also experience greater price fluctuations as interest rates change. Specifically, as interest rates rise, the price of your existing bonds typically will fall.

• Rising income investments

– When investing for income, you'll want to keep at least one eye on inflation — because if the interest rates paid on your CDs and individual bonds are lower than the annual inflation rate, you may lose purchasing power. If this gap persists over time, it could grow into a real problem for you. Consequently, you'll want at least some of your investment income to come from rising income investments, such as dividend-paying stocks. Of course, not all stocks pay dividends, but with the help of your financial advisor, you can find companies that have paid — and even increased — their dividends for many years running. And if you don't actually need the dividends to supplement your cash flow, you can reinvest them to build your ownership stake in these stocks. Keep in mind, though, that companies can reduce or discontinue dividends at any time. Also, remember that stock prices will constantly rise and fall, so the value of your principal could decline.

As you can see, all three types of income-producing investments – variable, reliable and rising – offer some benefits, along with some risks of which you need to be aware. But putting together a mix of these investments that's appropriate for your individual needs, goals and risk tolerance may help you boost the productivity of the "income" portion of your portfolio – no matter what's happening with interest rates.

Digital editor hired at News-Review

Britton

Just in time for the night of the presidential election, the Charlevoix Courier's sister publication the Petoskey News-Review welcomed aboard its new digital editor, Zac Britton.

Britton, 40, a graduate of Northern Michigan University, took over online and digital duties on Monday, Nov. 5, and will serve as the News-Review's courts and crimes reporter.

He brings a total of 12 years of newspaper experience to the paper.

He began his reporting career as a sportswriter at The Alpena News in the mid-1990s. A love of the outdoors took Britton to Idaho Falls, where he worked at its newspaper, the Post-Register, also as a sports reporter.

After two years at the Post-Register, Britton returned to Michigan. He worked as a sports and staff writer at the Eagle Herald in Marinette-Menominee, twin towns that straddle the Wisconsin and Michigan border at the western end of the Upper Peninsula.

He worked at the Eagle Herald for five years. He then served as editor for two years at Cheboygan Daily Tribune.

"If there's a word to describe my experience, it's diverse," said Britton. "I'm comfortable covering a high school football game, a city council meeting or an accident scene and am able to write good copy on each."

Britton will also bring experience in page lay-out and photography to the News-Review, and is familiar with working with both print and getting print articles on the web.

"The increased demand and interest in newspapers' online platforms really became an interest for me over the past two years," said Britton.

He says he is happy to have come to a rest at the News-Review.

"The News-Review is a newspaper I've respected since my tenure at Alpena, almost 20 years ago," said Britton.

"Its continued emphasis on quality local coverage has not changed since that time. My hope is to add to that online and with digital upgrades as well as the police and courts reporter."

Plan for your pets during emergencies, too

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

His small frame shivers uncontrollably beneath the mats of clinging wet fur. The wind lashes at the windows breaking them with malice and bringing with it waves of salty water in an unforgiving force. What was once a tranquil place he knew as home has turned upon itself becoming a weapon rather than a safe haven. Debris is moving toward him so quickly he attempts to save himself by climbing onto furniture trying to escape the inevitable. He hides under the rafters in the cold and dark, trembling from fear and abandonment. His body clings to life wondering if he'll ever see his owners again. His owners not wanting to, left as instructed, thinking the storm would come and then quickly leave. They had thought they'd be gone for a day but now it has turned to four.

He is one of the many pets displaced by Superstorm Sandy. Fortunately, he was rescued by volunteers who brought small boats into the area and he is safe and sound in one of the city shelters that were quickly put together. Like so many other displaced pets, they are hungry for food and attention and are still in shock — not any different than the feelings their owners are now processing.

During hurricanes, tornadoes, and blizzards there is an [illegible] that comes with every disaster and the worry about lost loved ones. It is sad that there is human loss but my heart also breaks for pets left behind in apartments and homes waiting for their families to return. Sadly there are some owners who have perished in the disaster and their pets are still hopeful of seeing their master's face again.

Fortuitously, organizations locally and nationally stepped in and have created housing in the bustling New York City with food and shelter to care for injured and lost animals until someone retrieves them. The same members of these groups went out in boats to rescue everything from kittens to parakeets. Some of the critters were injured by fallen trees, roofs and floating debris and sadly some did not make it out alive. It's not that the owners didn't care about their pets but they didn't plan on such a violent storm and needed to save themselves and their children. Something that may have helped would have been a disaster plan for the entire family including family pets. Whether its fire or flood there is secure feelings knowing you have a plan in place.

Here is some information that may be of help: Make certain that your pet has a collar with information that is up to date with your current phone number. Micro-chipping is always a good idea, especially if their tag comes loose or your pet doesn't wear a collar. If you need to leave a pet behind, leave a sign for emergency workers that indicates how many pets are inside or have the sign say "Please save my cat" or "My dog is still here."

Contact your local humane society to see if they have an emergency plan in place or what they might recommend. If you leave for whatever reason to find shelter from lack of heat or flooding find out which hotels or motels take pets.

So just as we are getting ready for winter with snow shovels, window scrapers, extra weight on our vehicle or snow tires, salt or kitty litter, water, candles and flashlights, we need to remember to include our pets into our planning. We never know what each new day will bring.

In 1868, pioneer business partners Amos Fox and Hiram Rose constructed the first wood building on downtown Bridge Street just southeast of the bridge. It opened in 1869 as The Mammoth Store of general merchandise which sold a little bit of everything. Fox and Rose held almost a commercial monopoly until the building boom of 1872 brought several other businesses to town. The road to what is now the city dock can be seen at far right. The first circuit court session of a newly formed Charlevoix County was held on the second floor in August that year. At lower left appears a man holding a sign proclaiming "American Express." The building held one of over 4,000 agencies for the nation's leading shipping and delivery company. Money orders (initiated in 1882) and traveler's checks (1891) could be purchased here. Emergency food and shelter grants available

Charlevoix County has been awarded $14,539 and Emmet County has been awarded $12,398 in federal funds under the Emergency Food and Shelter National Board Program. These funds will be distributed by a local board and are used to supplement emergency food and shelter programs in these counties through March 31, 2013.

The award was made by a national board that is chaired by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and consists of representatives from the Salvation Army; American Red Cross; United Jewish Communities; Catholic Charities; USA; National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA; and United Way of America. The local board was charged to distribute funds appropriated by congress to help expand the capacity of food and shelter programs in high-need areas around the country.

The local board is chaired by United Way and includes representatives from the Salvation Army, American Red Cross, Temple B'Nai Israel, Catholic Human Services, Emmanuel Episcopal Church, the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians, governmental representatives from both counties, the department of Human Services, both community foundations, and the Nehemiah Project.

This board will determine how the funds are will be distributed among the emergency food and shelter programs run by local service agencies in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

Under the terms of the grant from the national board, local agencies chosen to receive funds must: 1) be private voluntary non profits or units of government, 2) have an accounting system, 3) practice nondiscrimination, 4) have demonstrated the capability to deliver emergency food and/or shelter programs, and 5) if they are a private voluntary organization, they must have a voluntary board. 9-1-1 center sees systems upgrades

ZAC BRITTON
Northern Michigan Review

Charlevoix-Cheboygan-Emmet Central Dispatch used to rely on a push-button phone system and approximate cellular phone tower locations when accepting 9-1-1 calls.

But since late September, that has been replaced with an IP-based system which allows staff to use a computer mouse while also looking to a specific map when linking to any calls in its three-county region. The CCE entity is not alone with that ability, combining with six Upper Peninsula 9-1-1 authorities to purchase an up-to-date Intrado Viper system.

The program was purchased with a $300,000 grant from the Department of Justice, according to executive director Robert Bradley.

"This phone system, like a lot of things we do, is technology-driven and with that comes a price tag and they're not cheap," Bradley said. "Instead of all three counties having to buy a new phone controller to be ready for the upcoming changes in the future here, we bought one."

He likened the partnership with the U.P. authorities to buying in bulk, saving approximately $30-40,000 in grant funds because "instead of us buying one, we got into the package and were one of seven."

An added benefit will be improved connectively with other 9-1-1 call centers.

The key improvements locally, however, will be allowing operators to gather more information before each call is even picked up, which will certainly help when forwarded onto area police and fire departments and ambulance services.

"To me, it's a piece of equipment to do the job better," said team leader John Barendsen, who has worked for CCE 9-1-1 for 13 years. "I think having the touch screen is nicer. There's a lot more information you can get from this system than we used to have as far as where calls were coming from."

The Viper system, developed by Colorado-based Intrado, does add two computer screens in front of each operator — for example, Barendsen has five flat-screens at the team leader desk, not including one with a weather radar map.

One screen in particular provides more specific location for incoming 9-1-1 calls, especially with multiple calls for a specific event.

"We thought the Power Map was a option, but was it worth the money to buy it? I started applying it to real world and how we operate it and what really drove it home is the plane crash we had in Charlevoix a couple of summers ago," stated Bradley. "We took 16 calls in 61 seconds for that accident."

"If you can see all those calls popping up in one area, you know they're all related to that, but if you have another one 15 miles away, that might be somebody's Uncle Bill having a heart attack," he explained. "Someone could click right on that right away and we can with the click of a mouse. It gives you some flexibility. We used to get calls on a queue and you answered the next one in line. It can be a powerful tool as we move forward."

An Intrado system technician was in Petoskey through late last week, helping to fine tune the system and work with the authority's 16-person full-time staff and four part-time employees.

According to Bradley, there is a maintenance contract included that will allow for the potential to add improved text message, video and photographic connectively in the cell phone age. Technology has taken quite a leap from when Bradley started as team leader at the C-C-E authority in 1996. At this time, emergency cell phone calls are much more accurate and immediate with locations being measured to within a few feet.

"We had a button (on the dispatch console to indicate cell phone calls). If that lit up it was kind of unique because they were just starting up and you got no information with those calls," he recalled. "We still had to ask 'Who are you? Where are you?' And those kinds of question. Then we added Phase 1, where we got tower location where the call was coming from, then Phase II, where we got the ability to 'ping' a phone to get location information."

9-1-1: Ready for the next step

ZAC BRITTON
Northern Michigan Review

The technological upgrades to Charlevoix-Cheboygan-Emmet Central Dispatch put the authority in the easy position for the next step in 9-1-1 service — accepting text messages, pictures and video from cell phones. According to Robert Bradley, the authority's executive director, potential system updates are part of the maintenance contract with Colorado-based Intrado.

"We have the ability in-house right now," he explained. "There would have to be some software changes to enable it, but we have to have the ability to be ready for these technology changes. What we have to wait for right now is for the outside world to catch up a little bit. "The (cellular telephone) companies are progressing right along with this with national standards being developed."

The authority has long had an ability to communicate with non-voice calls, specifically when working with hearing-impaired emergencies. That will continue and expand, thanks in part to a lesson learned from the Virginia Tech University shootings in 2007 where 9-1-1 text messages went nowhere.

"Basically if someone were to text 9-1-1, they're going to get a quick message 'Your message has been received, please stand by for an operator,'" Bradley explained. "Voice communications is going to be so much faster, so much easier to ask those questions that we need to ask — what direction did the vehicle travel, what was (the suspect) wearing? Both of us typing on a keyboard, it just takes longer.

"There are times when the caller cannot do voice," he added. "With the hearing-impaired community, we will always work with them, but when you get into the domestic violence situation and those sort of things, this can be helpful."

Using pictures and video from hand-held devices is also not far off on the new Viper system.

"With the law enforcement having mobile computers (in vehicles)," Bradley said, "we'll be able to forward that picture right into a patrol car. How many eyes is that going to put on the street?"

Health department warns of tainted cider

ELLSWORTH — The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is warning the public to avoid unpasteurized apple cider provided by Mitchell Hill Farm or its proprietor, Jim Ruster.

Earlier this month, health officials obtained a search warrant to inspect Mitchell Hill Farm, located on Toad Lake Road in Ellsworth. According to a health department news release issued Monday, officials found evidence that Ruster had been producing adulterated food, or food prepared under unsanitary conditions that fails to meet health and safety standards as a result.

Anyone who believes they may be in possession of cider from this source should dispose of it immediately, according to Joshua Meyerson, M.D., Medical Director for the Health Department. Dr. Meyerson adds that anyone who has consumed the cider should consult a physician immediately if they experience health problems, such as abdominal pain, vomiting and diarrhea.

"What we know is that Mr. Ruster produced unpasteurized apple cider without a license, in an unsanitary facility," Meyerson said. "People should avoid any cider he has produced." He added that consumers should be suspicious of apple cider that is unlabeled.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan will continue to collaborate with The Michigan Departments of Agriculture and Rural Development and Community Health in ongoing investigation of Mitchell Hill Farm and any products that may have been distributed to the public.

Collection for Community Christmas begins

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Organizers with the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project recently kicked off collections and fundraising for this year's holiday season collection of goods for distribution to the less fortunate in the community.

One of the kick-off events is the collection of coats at the Clothing Company in downtown Charlevoix.

For many years, Clothing Company owner Jackie Dipert and her staff have teamed up with the Christmas Project to fill the project's need for winter coats. The Clothing Company's coat sale, which runs through Nov. 18, will offer special store incentives to anyone who brings in a coat to donate to the project. However, Dipert and her staff will be collecting coats for the Christmas Project until Dec. 15.

The Christmas Project will give out items collected on distribution day. Distribution will take place at the Bethany Lutheran Church on Friday, Dec. 21.

Organizers said the Christmas Project's programs are well under way and there are many ways people can donate to the organization. Mittens can be dropped off at Charlevoix State Bank mitten tree; sock boxes are placed within various businesses. To help meet the needs for teens, collections have been set up at several beauty salons in town where items and donations can be dropped off. For further information on how to donate time or money to the project, contact Bev Boss at (231) 547-2078.

Emergency food and shelter grants available

Charlevoix County has been awarded $14,539 and Emmet County has been awarded $22,398 in federal funds under the Emergency Food and Shelter National Board Program. These funds will be distributed by a local board and are used to supplement emergency food and shelter programs in these counties through March 31, 2013.

The award was made by a national board that is chaired by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and consists of representatives from the Salvation Army, American Red Cross, United Jewish Communities, Catholic Charities, USA, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA, and United Way of America. The local board was charged to distribute funds appropriated by congress to help expand the capacity of food and shelter programs in high-need areas around the country.

The local board is chaired by United Way and includes representatives from the Salvation Army, American Red Cross, Temple B'Nai Israel, Catholic Human Services, Emmanuel Episcopal Church, the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians, governmental representatives from both counties, the department of Human Services, both community foundations, and the Nehemiah Project.

This board will determine how the funds are will be distributed among the emergency food and shelter programs run by local service ageneies in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

Under the terms of the grant from the national board, local agencies chosen to receive funds must: 1) be private voluntary non-profits or units of government, 2) have an accounting system, 3) practice nondiscrimination, 4) have demonstrated the capability to deliver emergency food and/or shelter programs, and 5) if they are a private voluntary organization, they must have a voluntary board. Qualifying agencies are urged to apply.

Emergency food and shelter funds were awarded to the following agencies last year: the Women's Resource Center, the Salvation Army, the Manna Food Project, St. Francis Church, Brother Dan's Food Pantry, East Jordan Care and Share, and Good Samaritan Family Services.

Public or private voluntary agencies interested in applying for Emergency Food and Shelter Program funds must contact Martha Lancaster, Char-Em United Way, P.O. Box 1701, Petoskey MI 49770; by phone at (231) 487-1006; or via email at info@charemunitedway.org for an application. The deadline for applications to be received is 5 p.m. Friday, Nov. 30.

9-1-1 center sees systems upgrades

ZAC BRITTON
Northern Michigan Review

Charlevoix-Cheboygan-Emmet Central Dispatch used to rely on a push-button phone system and approximate cellular phone tower locations when accepting 9-1-1 calls.

But since late September, that has been replaced with an IP-based system which allows staff to use a computer mouse while also looking to a specific map when linking to any calls in its three-county region. The CCE entity is not alone with that ability, combining with six Upper Peninsula 9-1-1 authorities to purchase an up-to-date Intrado Viper system.

The program was purchased with a $300,000 grant from the Department of Justice, according to executive director Robert Bradley.

"This phone system, like a lot of things we do, is technology-driven and with that comes a price tag and they're not cheap," Bradley said. "Instead of all three counties having to buy a new phone controller to be ready for the upcoming changes in the future here, we bought one."

He likened the partnership with the U.P. authorities to buying in bulk, saving approximately $30-40,000 in grant funds because "instead of us buying one, we got into the package and were one of seven."

An added benefit will be improved connectively with other 9-1-1 call centers.

The key improvements locally, however, will be allowing operators to gather more information before each call is even picked up, which will certainly help when forwarded onto area police and fire departments and ambulance services.

"To me, it's a piece of equipment to do the job better," said team leader John Barendsen, who has worked for CCE 9-1-1 for 13 years. "I think having the touch screen is nicer. There's a lot more information you can get from this system than we used to have as far as where calls were coming from."

The Viper system, developed by Colorado-based Intrado, does add two computer screens in front of each operator — for example, Barendsen has five flat-screens at the team leader desk, not including one with a weather radar map.

One screen in particular provides more specific location for incoming 9-1-1 calls, especially with multiple calls for a specific event.

"We thought the Power Map was a option, but was it worth the money to buy it? I started applying it to real world and how we operate it and what really drove it home is the plane crash we had in Charlevoix a couple of summers ago," stated Bradley. "We took 16 calls in 61 seconds for that accident."

"If you can see all those calls popping up in one area, you know they're all related to that, but if you have another one 15 miles away, that might be somebody's Uncle Bill having a heart attack," he explained. "Someone could click right on that right away and we can with the click of a mouse. It gives you some flexibility. We used to get calls on a queue and you answered the next one in line. It can be a powerful tool as we move forward."

An Intrado system technician was in Petoskey through late last week, helping to fine tune the system and work with the authority's 16-person full-time staff and four part-time employees.

According to Bradley, there is a maintenance contract included that will allow for the potential to add improved text message, video and photographic connectively in the cell phone age. Technology has taken quite a leap from when Bradley started as team leader at the C-C-E authority in 1996. At this time, emergency cell phone calls are much more accurate and immediate with locations being measured to within a few feet.

"We had a button (on the dispatch console to indicate cell phone calls). If that lit up it was kind of unique because they were just starting up and you got no information with those calls," he recalled. "We still had to ask 'Who are you? Where are you?' And those kinds of question. Then we added Phase I, where we got tower location where the call was coming from, then Phase II, where we got the ability to 'ping' a phone to get location information."

9-1-1: Ready for the next step

ZAC BRITTON
Northern Michigan Review

The technological upgrades to Charlevoix-Cheboygan-Emmet Central Dispatch put the authority in the easy position for the next step in 9-1-1 service — accepting text messages, pictures and video from cell phones. According to Robert Bradley, the authority's executive director, potential system updates are part of the maintenance contract with Colorado-based Intrado.

"We have the ability in-house right now," he explained. "There would have to be some software changes to enable it, but we have to have the ability to be ready for these technology changes. What we have to wait for right now is for the outside world to catch up a little bit. "The (cellular telephone) companies are progressing right along with this with national standards being developed."

The authority has long had an ability to communicate with non-voice calls, specifically when working with hearing-impaired emergencies. That will continue and expand, thanks in part to a lesson learned from the Virginia Tech University shootings in 2007 where 9-1-1 text messages went nowhere.

"Basically if someone were to text 9-1-1, they're going to get a quick message 'Your message has been received, please stand by for an operator,'" Bradley explained. "Voice communications is going to be so much faster, so much easier to ask those questions that we need to ask — what direction did the vehicle travel, what was (the suspect) wearing? Both of us typing on a keyboard, it just takes longer.

"There are times when the caller cannot do voice," he added. "With the hearing-impaired community, we will always work with them, but when you get into the domestic violence situation and those sort of things, this can be helpful."

Using pictures and video from hand-held devices is also not far off on the new Viper system.

"With the law enforcement having mobile computers (in vehicles)," Bradley said, "we'll be able to forward that picture right into a patrol car. How many eyes is that going to put on the street?"

Health department warns of tainted cider

ELLSWORTH — The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is warning the public to avoid unpasteurized apple cider provided by Mitchell Hill Farm or its proprietor, Jim Ruster.

Earlier this month, health officials obtained a search warrant to inspect Mitchell Hill Farm, located on Toad Lake Road in Ellsworth. According to a health department news release issued Monday, officials found evidence that Ruster had been producing adulterated food, or food prepared under unsanitary conditions that fails to meet health and safety standards as a result.

Anyone who believes they may be in possession of cider from this source should dispose of it immediately, according to Joshua Meyerson, M.D., Medical Director for the Health Department. Dr. Meyerson adds that anyone who has consumed the cider should consult a physician immediately if they experience health problems, such as abdominal pain, vomiting and diarrhea.

"What we know is that Mr. Ruster produced unpasteurized apple cider without a license, in an unsanitary facility," Meyerson said. "People should avoid any cider he has produced." He added that consumers should be suspicious of apple cider that is unlabeled.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan will continue to collaborate with The Michigan Departments of Agriculture and Rural Development and Community Health in ongoing investigation of Mitchell Hill Farm and any products that may have been distributed to the public.

Collection for Community Christmas begins

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Organizers with the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project recently kicked off collections and fundraising for this year's holiday season collection of goods for distribution to the less fortunate in the community.

One of the kick-off events is the collection of coats at the Clothing Company in downtown Charlevoix.

For many years, Clothing Company owner Jackie Dipert and her staff have teamed up with the Christmas Project to fill the project's need for winter coats. The Clothing Company's coat sale, which runs through Nov. 18, will offer special store incentives to anyone who brings in a coat to donate to the project. However, Dipert and her staff will be collecting coats for the Christmas Project until Dec. 15.

The Christmas Project will give out items collected on distribution day. Distribution will take place at the Bethany Lutheran Church on Friday, Dec. 21.

Organizers said the Christmas Project's programs are well under way and there are many ways people can donate to the organization. Mittens can be dropped off at Charlevoix State Bank mitten tree; sock boxes are placed within various businesses. To help meet the needs for teens, collections have been set up at several beauty salons in town where items and donations can be dropped off. For further information on how to donate time or money to the project, contact Bev Boss at (231) 547-2178.

For just $50, your family, business or organization can sponsor an individual lamp post. The goal is to decorate 40 lights with fresh garland and wreaths to make Charlevoix extra festive and beautiful this holiday season. But we can't do it alone. TRAIL dent, is not as supportive of the trail. Residents living next to it will have to clean up the trash of those using it, he said, and he believes a county survey should have been done on whether residents along the path supported it.

"I think we're getting ahead of ourselves here," said Boyne City resident Robert Taylor. Local governmental money should be used for repairing roads, buildings or the jail, he asserted, not a recreational trail.

"Our priorities are out of order," said commissioner Richard Gillespie on why he voted against accepting the grant. "There's a lot more things in this county that need attention."

Gillespie said he believes property owners who live adjacent to where the trail will be built should have signed consent forms before the county committed to the project.

Although the path will be built in the public right-of-way, not on private property, the county road commission decided residents along the path should sign acknowledgement of right of way forms, especially where land along the pathway might be needed to house equipment during construction. The county will be moving forward with that task in coming months.

"I think the community has well supported this," said commissioner Shilene Tripp. "And we can all enjoy the results of this."

"The economic benefits outweigh all these negative comments," said commissioner Bob Drebenstedt. He said while traveling, he and his sons seek out areas that have recreational opportunities such as bicycle trails.

Many of the questions and concerns of the men objecting to the trail have already been discussed at length, added commissioner Chris Christensen. Local entities have already committed funds and the state has offered two grants.

"Pulling the rug out from under this at the last minute doesn't speak well for Charlevoix County when applying for grants in the future," he said.

Now that all funding for the trail has been secured, next steps for the county, reported Parks and Recreation director Ross Maxwell, include drawing up a cooperative agreement with Boyne City on details of the construction and maintenance of the trail and meeting with all 58 property owners who live along where the trail will be built to have them sign an acknowledgement of right of way form.

AEBRA COE/NEWS-REVIEW

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners chambers filled up Wednesday with residents eager to share their opinions on the proposed Boyne City- Charlevoix recreational pathway. At the meeting, commissioners voted to accept a grant from the Department of Natural Resources, effectively committing to moving forward with the construction of the first 3.2 miles of the trail.

what does that mean?" Beatty said. "We need to know when, where and how. These allegations don't give any sort of clarity."

When it was her turn to speak, Roth said she purposefully used more broad language, both at the recommendation of an attorney and in an effort to be concise. Roth said she and others supporting the recall effort have many different complaints and said she'd be willing to resubmit her petition request detailing as many as 15 specific complaints.

Before the roughly 10-minute meeting adjourned, Roth said she planned to file new paperwork for the petition language that same day. However as of 9:15 a.m. Thursday, Roth had not yet filed new proposed petition language. She would also have the option of appealing the election commission's decision to the Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

In July, city resident John Winn came to the council with an offer from an anonymous donor who wished to pay for the bulk of the cost of constructing a community fireplace on the western edge of East Park near the east side of Bridge Street between Mason and Clinton streets. The design called for the fireplace to be eight feet wide, seven feet tall and then be topped by a chimney that tapers to four feet wide for a [illegible] structure height of about [illegible] feet. The city's only cost for the project was to be about $300 for the installation of a natural gas supply line and the cost of the gas to be burned in the fireplace, estimated to be about $6,800 per year. Little or no public comments were received at the three meetings (two regularly scheduled and one special) at which the proposal was discussed, and the council ultimately approved the project by a 5-0 vote. (Council member Shane Cole abstained from the vote because his wife works for DTE Energy, the company that would supply the gas for the fireplace.)

The public outcry against the fireplace began when crews removed a tree to make room for the fireplace and site work began for the foundation. The most common among the objections were that the fireplace would block views of Round Lake and the park from Bridge Street. Other complaints included the cost of the gas and the impact on the environment.

Winn later explained that he was the one who suggested the idea of the fireplace to the donor, who had originally wanted to donate to the park's interactive water fountain — a project that has been completed. Winn said he got the idea from a similar fireplace in Holland, Mich., that has been a popular gathering spot in that city's downtown.

After hearing a chorus of complaints from full-house audiences at two council meetings, the council ultimately voted 4-1 to put the project on hold until spring to allow city officials to work with members of the community and the architect who designed the buildings in East Park to try to find alternatives to the proposal that might be more agreeable to more people. In that vote, council member Lyle Gennett cast the dissenting vote, noting that at this point, he thinks the project should simply be scrapped.

Community forum

The second of two planned citizen-organized community forums to discuss possible options for the fireplace project brought about 35 people to the Charlevoix Public Library Wednesday. Organizers said the goal of the meeting was to provide city council and architect Mark Buday options for the anonymous donor instead of a fireplace.

At the first forum, organizers tried to elicit ideas for options for the fireplace project, but most in attendance made it clear they simply want the project to go away.

Still firmly opposed to the possibility of a fireplace anywhere within Charlevoix, the group came up with several suggestions for alternatives over the hour-long meeting.

Complicating these suggestions was that the city would be on the hook thousands in already-spent funds if the fireplace is abandoned altogether, said John Campbell, moderator of the meeting.

Suggestions from the forum included an ice rink; an educational monument; a memorial to Charlevoix native Jeff Drenth; a public benefit such as a donation to the library, local hospital or funding holiday dinners for needy families; to replace the tree cut down to make the fireplace; and maintenance for the trout stream, interactive fountain and band shell already in East Park.

Charlevoix resident Bob Klein wondered if the donor would be willing to move away from a "brick and mortar" approach to donation, and asked whether the money could fund an endowed scholarship. He also emphasized the need to work together to find a solution for this problem.

"Joining hands is ... a lot more productive than pointing fingers," said Klein.

Monday's city council meeting

The fireplace discussion is set to ramp up further at the Monday, Nov. 19, Charlevoix City Council meeting, set to begin at 7 p.m. at Charlevoix City Hall.

On the agenda for the meeting is initial discussion with architect Mark Buday on options for the fireplace. Buday, the architect who designed the buildings that grace East Park, has offered — at no charge — to help city leaders come up with design and location options for the proposed fireplace that might ruffle fewer feathers in the community.

Charlevoix Mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr. said Wednesday he's heard a lot of misinformation out in the community about what is coming for the fireplace matter.

First, Carlson wanted to clarify that no decision is expected on moving forward with construction on the project at Monday's meeting. He said Monday's meeting with Buday is intended for him to get direction from the council on how he should proceed in developing options.

Carlson did say at the beginning of Monday's discussions he plans to ask the council if there is any desire among them to reverse their approval of the fireplace project.

"It doesn't make sense to waste our time or Mark's time if that's the route they want to go," Carlson said.

However, because of council procedural rules, the only way that can happen is by a 2/3 vote to suspend a rule against rescinding earlier decisions and then another 2/3 vote to rescind the decision.

Barring that happening, the council expect to be considering options for modifying the current design or ideas for other locations for the fireplace, all of which must at some point be agreeable to the donor, he said.

Responding to rumors in the community that the council is waiting until many people are out of town for the winter months before deciding to move forward with the fireplace, Carlson noted that, not only was Buday not available until now, but also the council wanted to wait until after the election so that the members who would be deciding the mattering would be the ones taking part in the discussion from the start.

After taking the volleyball season off, Liz Shaw returns to coaching basketball

BRANDON HUBBARD
Northern Michigan Review

A familiar face is returning to the Charlevoix High School girls' basketball team.

After less than a year stepping away from the volleyball court, Liz Shaw will return to coaching as she takes over as the head coach for Rayders varsity girls' basketball team.

Shaw announced in August she would be taking a season off after 11 years as the Charlevoix High School volleyball coach to have her second child.

Leading the Rayders on the volleyball court Shaw compiled a 380-138-68 career record, which included a fourth consecutive Lake Michigan Conference title in 2011 and a district championship. Her team also reached the state semifinal for the first time in 2011 under her leadership.

Shaw steps up to take over a 9-14 Rayder team from 2011, which lost in the State Class C district final to Elk Rapids and graduated four starters. Only 2011 starter Sydney Carlson, a senior, is back this season.

"It is going to be a challenge. They are pretty raw fundamentally," Shaw said.

"But, the girls are really excited and eager to work hard. I think you can do a lot with that."

Two weeks into practice, it is all about getting back to fundamentals, though their modus is already taking shape.

"We are quick and like to press," Shaw said. "It's all about pushing the ball up the floor and forcing the other team to make errors."

That strategy has worked for Shaw in the past.

During a three-year stint as Charlevoix High School girls junior varsity coach from 2004-06, Shaw went 60-0.

Shaw, formerly Grunch, was a 1995 basketball standout at Charlevoix High School and went on to play at Lake Michigan College.

One big factor translating that success to the varsity position in Charlevoix this season, she says, will be generating chemistry among the team.

"I think potentially, it is going to be great," she said. "It is just going to take some time and some patience on everybody's part — I think it will come together."

Charlevoix faces Ellsworth in its opening game Tuesday, Nov. 27.

dent, is not as supportive of the trail. Residents living next to it will have to clean up the trash of those using it, he said, and he believes a county survey should have been done on whether residents along the path supported it.

"I think we're getting ahead of ourselves here," said Boyne City resident Robert Taylor. Local governmental money should be used for repairing roads, buildings or the jail, he asserted, not a recreational trail.

"Our priorities are out of order," said commissioner Richard Gillespie on why he voted against accepting the grant. "There's a lot more things in this county that need attention."

Gillespie said he believes property owners who live adjacent to where the trail will be built should have signed consent forms before the county committed to the project.

Although the path will be built in the public right-of-way, not on private property, the county road commission decided residents along the path should sign acknowledgement of right-of-way forms, especially where land along the pathway might be needed to house equipment during construction. The county will be moving forward with that task in coming months.

"I think the community has well supported this," said commissioner Shirlene Tripp. "And we can all enjoy the results of this."

"The economic benefit outweighs all these negative comments," said commissioner Bob Drebenstedt. He said while traveling, he and his sons seek out areas that have recreational opportunities such as bicycle trails.

Many of the questions and concerns of the men objecting to the trail have already been discussed at length, added commissioner Chris Christensen. Local entities have already committed funds and the state has offered two grants.

"Pulling the rug out from under this at the last minute doesn't speak well for Charlevoix County when applying for grants in the future," he said.

AEBRA COE/NEWS-REVIEW

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners chambers filled up Wednesday with residents eager to share their opinions on the proposed Boyne City- Charlevoix recreational pathway. At the meeting, commissioners voted to accept a grant from the Department of Natural Resources, effectively committing to moving forward with the construction of the first 3.2 miles of the trail.

Now that all funding for the trail has been secured, next steps for the county, reported Parks and Recreation director Ross Maxwell, include drawing up a cooperative agreement with Boyne City on details of the construction and maintenance of the trail and meeting with all 58 property owners who live along where the trail will be built to have them sign an acknowledgement of right of way form.

"Joining hands is ... a lot more productive than pointing fingers."

what does that mean?" Beatty said. "We need to know when, where and how. These allegations don't give any sort of clarity."

When it was her turn to speak, Roth said she purposefully used more broad language both at the recommendation of an attorney and in an effort to be concise. Roth said she and others supporting the recall effort have many different complaints and said she'd be willing to resubmit her petition request, detailing as many as 18 specific complaints.

Before the roughly 10-minute meeting adjourned, Roth said she planned to file new paperwork for the petition language the same day. However, as of [illegible] on Thursday, Roth had not yet filed new proposed petition language. She would also have the option of appealing the election commission's decision to the Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

In July, city resident John Winn came to the council with an offer from an anonymous donor who wished to pay for the bulk of the cost of constructing a community fireplace on the western edge of East Park near the east side of Bridge Street between Mason and Clinton streets. The design called for the fireplace to be eight feet wide, [illegible] feet tall and then be topped by a chimney that tapers to four feet wide for a total structure height of about 20 feet. The city's cost for the project was to be about $300 for the installation of a natural gas supply line, and the cost of the gas to be burned in the fireplace, estimated to be about $6,800 per year. Little public comment was received at the three meetings, two regularly scheduled and one special, at which the proposal was discussed, and the council ultimately approved the project by a 5-0 vote. (Council member Shane Cole abstained from the vote because his wife works for DTE Energy, the company that would supply the gas for the fireplace.)

The public outcry against the fireplace began when crews removed a tree to make room for the fireplace and site work began for the foundation. The most common among the objections were that the fireplace would block views of Round Lake and the park from Bridge Street. Other complaints included the cost of the gas and the impact on the environment.

Winn later explained that he was the one who suggested the idea of the fireplace to the donor, who had originally wanted to donate to the park's interactive water fountain — a project that has been completed. Winn said he got the idea from a similar fireplace in Holland, Mich., that has been a popular gathering spot in that city's downtown.

After hearing a chorus of complaints from full-house audiences at two council meetings, the council ultimately voted 4-1 to put the project on hold until [illegible] to allow city officials to work with the donor, the community and the architect who designed the buildings in East Park to try to find alternatives to the proposal that might be more agreeable to more people. In that vote, council member Lyle Gennett cast the dissenting vote, noting that at this point he thinks the project should simply be scrapped.

Community forum

The second of two planned citizen-organized community forums to discuss possible options for the fireplace project brought about 38 people to the Charlevoix Public Library Wednesday. Organizers said the goal of the meeting was to provide city council and architect Mark Buday options for the anonymous donor instead of a fireplace.

At the first forum, organizers tried to elicit ideas for options for the fireplace project, but most in attendance made it clear they simply want the project to go away.

Still firmly opposed to the possibility of a fireplace anywhere within Charlevoix, the group came up with several suggestions for alternatives over the hour-long meeting.

Complicating these suggestions was that the city would be on the hook thousands in already spent funds if the fireplace is abandoned altogether, said John Campbell, moderator of the meeting.

Suggestions from the forum included an ice rink, an educational monument, a memorial to Charlevoix native Jeff Drenth, a public benefit such as a donation to the library, local hospital or funding holiday dinners for needy families, to replace the tree cut down to make the fireplace, and maintenance for the trout stream interactive fountain and band shell already in East Park.

Charlevoix resident Bob Klein wondered if the donor would be willing to move away from a "brick and mortar" approach to donation, and asked whether the money could fund an endowed scholarship. He also emphasized the need to work together to find a solution for this problem.

"Joining hands is ... a lot more productive than pointing fingers," said Klein.

Monday's city council meeting

The fireplace discussion is set to ramp up further at the Monday, Nov. 19 Charlevoix City Council meeting, set to begin at 7 p.m. at Charlevoix City Hall.

On the agenda for the meeting is initial discussion with architect Mark Buday on options for the fireplace. Buday, the architect who designed the buildings that grace East Park, has offered — at no charge — to help city leaders come up with design and location options for the proposed fireplace that might ruffle fewer feathers in the community.

Charlevoix Mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr. said Wednesday he's heard a lot of misinformation out in the community about what is coming for the fireplace matter.

First, Carlson wanted to clarify that no decision is expected on moving forward with construction on the project at Monday's meeting. He said Monday's meeting with Buday is intended for him to get direction from the council on how he should proceed in developing options.

Carlson did say at the beginning of Monday's discussions he plans to ask the council if there is any desire among them to reverse their approval of the fireplace project.

"It doesn't make sense to waste our time or Mark's time if that's the route they want to go," Carlson said.

However, because of council procedural rules, the only way that can happen is by a 2/3 vote to suspend a rule against rescinding earlier decisions and then another 2/3 vote to rescind the decision.

Barring that happening, the council expects to be considering options for modifying the current design or ideas for other locations for the fireplace, all of which must at some point be agreeable to the donor, he said.

Responding to rumors in the community that the council is waiting until many people are out of town for the winter months before deciding to move forward with the fireplace, Carlson noted that not only was Buday not available until now, but also the council wanted to wait until after the election so that the members who would be deciding the matter would be the ones taking part in the discussion from the start.

Firearm hunting outlook is bright

MORGAN SHERBURNE
Northern Michigan Review

After a successful outing, hunters head south at the toll booth on Mackinac Bridge last year.

Though southern Michigan has struggled throughout the year with epizootic hemorrhagic disease, Northern Michigan should get ready for a decent firearm season, says the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

Southern Michigan's deer population has suffered through a difficult season of EHD, a viral disease transmitted by a biting midge. Deer who contract it suffer massive internal bleeding and fever. The disease is usually fatal. According to a recent press release from the DNR, the organization had no estimate of total deer mortality, but it has more than 13,000 dead deer reported.

The disease is transmitted only by the biting midge. The virus can't be transmitted from deer to deer.

While most of these deer have been reported in southern counties — most reports are concentrated in the counties along the Ohio and Indiana border then further north to Muskegon, Montcalm, Gratiot and Saginaw — there have been confirmed cases reported in Manistee County. There are also reports of deer deaths likely because of the disease in Presque Isle, Benzie, Kalkaska and Oscoda counties.

Southern Michigan has the mild winters and droughty summer to thank for the midge's thriving, and the DNR has responded to the population's impacts in kind. In some areas, the DNR is limiting permits beginning Nov. 8.

Hunters who have already received their tags don't have to rescind them, but the DNR is asking hunters to exercise caution in filling the antlerless tags they already have.

"Until this year, we've never seen enough EHD in Michigan to cause population declines at a broad level, but the southwestern corner of the state — Cass and St. Joseph counties — has had EHD a couple years in a row, in 2010 and 2012, and now again this year," said deer and elk program leader Brent Rudolph in a DNR press release.

According to the release, effective immediately, the purchase limit for DMU 486 (a multicounty unit in the southern Lower Peninsula) is five private land antlerless deer hunting licenses per hunter. Also effective immediately, the public antlerless license purchase limit per hunter is two for each of the following DMUs: 012 (Branch), 034 (Ionia), 039 (Kalamazoo), 041 (Kent), 044 (Lapeer), 076 (Sanilac), 078 (Shiawassee), 079 (Tuscola) and 080 (Van Buren).

By and large, said DNR deer biologist Ashley Autenrieth, Northern Michigan has escaped real harm. No deer suspected of dying from EHD have been reported yet in Charlevoix or Emmet counties. In fact, said Autenrieth, the outlook is positive.

"It's looking pretty darn good this year," said Autenrieth, of the firearm season in Northern Michigan.

According to a separate DNR press release, the number of deer that hunters killed in southern Michigan overtook the number of deer that hunters killed in Northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula in 2002. That year, 35,000 bucks were taken in the Upper Peninsula and 79,000 were taken in the Northern Lower Peninsula while 127,000 bucks were taken in the lower half of the state. The scale-tipping started in the 1990s, said Autenrieth.

"(Southern Michigan) holds about half the population in the state, a very high number," she said. "It was really too high in a lot of areas, and the numbers had to do with lots and lots of available food and habitat."

Over the past three years, Northern Michigan has seen that same available food and habitat — and that, combined with our mild winters, have helped the herd population.

"We had an excellent acorn crop. Acorns are like gold to deer. They really give them that fat content and protein. Last year, we had a great apple crop, which is always really helpful," said Autenrieth.

This year, Autenrieth has heard of a solid acorn and apple crop. And with last year's mildest winter on record and warm spring, this fall's season "really looks like one of the best years that we've seen in a long time. There are a lot of 2.5 and maybe even 3.5 year old bucks out there."

Mayor to appoint steering committee for fireplace design

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Two months after halting construction of a controversial community fireplace project in East Park, the Charlevoix City Council on Monday took the first steps toward arriving at a possible resolution to the divisive debate.

Taking a suggestion from architect Mark Buday, Charlevoix Mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr. laid out the process the council will follow as it tries to find a common ground between the donor who offered the fireplace to the city, city leaders and residents who are upset about the project.

Buday, who was the architect who designed many elements in East Park, offered to be a consultant to the city as it considers possible changes in the fireplace's design and/or location.

Buday was on hand at Monday's regular semi-monthly city council meeting as Carlson explained that he would be assembling a steering committee comprised of approximately five people who would meet with Buday in the coming weeks to discuss options for the fireplace. Carlson said he wants to have representatives from both sides of the issue — those who support the project and those who oppose it, and invited community members who would like to serve on the committee to contact him via email at boogiecarlson@gmail.com or via phone at (231) 675-4561.

Carlson cautioned, however, that he is not looking for people who are "totally close-minded" to serve on the committee.

He said if the committee can come to a consensus, Buday will take that recommendation into account in making his formal recommendation to the council. Carlson said even though the city's has legal opinions that the matter is not required to go before the planning commission, the commission will be invited to future council meetings and be allowed to weigh in on the matter.

Carlson also reminded the audience, which was around 65 people (smaller than other recent meetings involving the

Jarema, county deny allegations in response to Fanara lawsuit

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

Outgoing Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema and Charlevoix County have responded to a lawsuit filed against them by a former cheif assistant prosecutor, Shaynee Fanara, denying all allegations in the suit. Jarema filed his response on Thursday, Nov. 15 and the county filed its response on Monday.

In the suit Fanara claims she was the victim of six counts including sexual harassment, defamation, retaliation, deprivation of free speech, deprivation of liberty and intentional interference with contractual relations. Jarema was defeated in the August primary election by incoming prosecuting attorney Alan Telgenhof who will take over the county prosecutor's office Jan. 1.

Jarema

The lawsuit was filed with the United States District Court Western District of Michigan, in Grand Rapids, on Oct. 1.

In addition to the lawsuit's original charges, Fanara also claims wrongful termination as she was fired three days after filing the lawsuit against her employers.

Both the county and Jarema requested the court enter a 'no cause' judgement on the lawsuit and award him attorney's fees for all legal action on the matter.

In his response to the litigation, the prosecutor outlined several reasons why he believes the complaint should be dismissed.

Fanara

Jarema claims he is covered by governmental immunity, the damage to her reputation is Fanara's own fault, her own actions were the reason she was fired, her headaches existed before any alleged harassment and, Jarema adds, "the truth as to any matter asserted is a defense" in regards to the statements he made about Fanara's alleged sexual relations with a defense attorney.

Jarema also claims that Fanara "failed to mitigate damages" during her employment, her financial distress or loss of earnings are not the fault of her employer and that her gender "was never a factor in any employment action."

The county's response includes 26 affirmative defenses, many of them the same as Jarema's including governmental immunity. In one of it's defenses, the county also asserts, "The County of Charlevoix cannot be held liable for any actions of Mr. Jarema, the lawfully elected Prosecutor, over which it had no control or authority."

"There's nothing particularly substantive in it," said Charlotte Croson, attorney for Fanara, of Jarema's response to the lawsuit.

"The things he has said about her are untrue," said Croson. "And his actions

Board approves Charlevoix freshmen girls basketball coach

It's official: Charlevoix freshmen girls will have a basketball team.

The Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education approved the hiring of a freshmen basketball coach, Tim Carey, at its regular board meeting on Monday night. The team will be comprised of 12 girls.

The board also approved a family and medical leave of absence for teacher Cindy Whitley, who will return to her position after her leave of absence is over.

And to showcase their new iPads, a trio of sophnmores presented to the board how they have been integrating their iPads into schoolwork. Using file sharing systems such as DropBox and a social media site similar to Facebook, students can better communicate with each other and with their teachers.

English and yearbook teacher Karen Peterson said using the iPads has changed the way she is grading. She can better keep track of how students are understanding material and adjust her material to the way specific students learn.

Board president John McClean asked Peterson whether the iPad's ability to constantly connect Peterson to her students would create more work for her.

"I haven't noticed it adding to my work load," she said. "If anything, it's changed it."

The senior class will be the last to receive the iPads, which the district has been rolling out in stages so that teachers can be trained and the iPads integrated into the district's technology infrastructure without overwhelming it.

A contingent of seniors were on hand to ask when they would receive their tablets, and technology director Scott Mays said the committee in control of it was meeting to discuss that after the Thanksgiving holiday.

Finally, the district recognized Charlevoix farmer Rebecca Berg with the Charlevoix Education Association "Friend of Education" award for her help with donating plants and gardening knowledge to the elementary school gardening projects.

The board will meet next at 6 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 17, in the Charlevoix Middle School large meeting room.

Lake to Lake Trail to be re-routed

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Some mis-information supplied by state transportation officials has prompted city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township officials to look at rerouting a new non-motorized trial set to link Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan just south of the city.

The trail, dubbed the Lake to Lake Trail, has been in the works for several years. The trail was originally intended to take hikers and cyclists from Lake Charlevoix at Ferry Beach to Lake Michigan at Fisherman's Island State Park using an old railroad grade running between M-66 and U.S. 31 as one of its primary sections. The remainder of the trail was to be constructed along Ferry Avenue, U.S. 31 and Bells Bay Road.

Earlier this year, the city received a $288,000 grant in federal money through the Michigan Department of Transportation to pay for the cost of the trail construction. Through an intergovernmental agreement, the city and township are to share the additional costs of construction, including the 25 percent match.

However, a bump in the path cropped up recently when state officials informed city representatives that federal regulations for the money require that the easement for the former railroad bed be given "in perpetuity." State officials had originally told the city that the easement needed to be at least 12 years, city manager Rob Straebel said. The railroad bed, which has been used for many years by bikers, cyclists and snowmobilers, is owned by St. Marys Cement Company, which had agreed to a 12-year easement for the trail. However, after learning of the corrected requirements, St. Marys officials were not willing to give a permanent easement on their property for the trial, Straebel told the city council at its regular semi-monthly meeting Monday.

Without the permanent easement, the trail will have to be re-routed, he said. The new route will eliminate the sections on the railroad bed and Ferry Avenue and will instead likely follow Stover Road — both the existing and abandoned sections around the north side of Brookside Cemetery and then will cross M-66 at Stover Road and U.S. 31 at Marion Center Road.

The additional cost for new survey and engineering work is estimated at $31,500. Straebel said state officials said they could not compensate the city or township for the additional costs caused by the mixup, but said they may be able to reduce the matching requirement on the grant from 25 percent to 20 percent. The grant money must be spent in 2013 or the grant will be forfeited.

The council ultimately voted 5-1 to approve the additional costs, to be split with Charlevoix Township, contingent upon the township board's approval. Council member Bryan Vollmer cast the dissenting vote.

Few turn out for contamination information

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

A team of Environmental Protection Agency representatives had a very sparse community turnout Monday for two two-hour informational sessions on the status of underground contamination on the city's southwest quadrant.

EPA Environmental Health Scientist Keith Fusinski said the agency had hoped property owners in the area roughly south of the Pine River Channel, west of May Street, north of Crain/Wood streets and east of Sherman Street would stop by the sessions at the Charlevoix Public Library Monday to hear about preliminary results of underground vapor level testing collected in August to check on the status of cleaning solvent contamination discovered in the 1980s. The discovery led to the area being declared an EPA Superfund site, the city's water system being changed from a well to Lake Michigan supply and cleanup efforts at several former laundry cleaning and tool shop locations in the southwest corner of the city.

When the active cleanup effort ended, officials planned to allow the solvent contamination to naturally dissipate out of the ground through natural flushing. However a routine recheck of monitoring wells found that the contaminant levels were not dropping off as quickly as had been expected.

That prompted EPA officials to do more testing to determine if there is additional cleanup needed.

One of the main reasons officials are taking a fresh look at the status of the contamination is over concerns for something known as "vapor intrusion." Vapor intrusion is when vapors from contaminated soil or groundwater seep into buildings, exposing occupants to breathing the vapors. Long term exposure to breathing vapors from either solvent can have serious health effects, according to the EPA.

The next step for the EPA is to get air samples from inside homes near the sites of the contamination. Sometime in the coming months home and business owners near the areas where the elevated levels were found will be getting a letter from the EPA asking permission to have access to their property for further testing. Testing could involve drilling a small hole in a concrete basement floor, an air sample collection canister or a mobile lab that would collect air samples using hoses and forced air. Testing would take place over two 24-hour periods and would not significantly affect homeowners daily activities, officials said Monday.

EPA officials expect actual testing in homes to take place sometime in February or March.

To learn more about the site or to contact EPA officials about your specific property in the site area, contact Community Involvement Coordinator Dave Novak via email at novak.dave@epa.gov, or via telephone at (312) 886-7478 or (800) 621-8431, ext. 67478. Tuesday crash causes injuries

Two people were injured in a two-vehicle traffic crash near the city's southern border Tuesday.

City of Charlevoix Police Department Deputy Chief Scott Hankins did not have the complete accident report nor the names of those involved available at press time Tuesday, but said one driver was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix Ambulance with what appeared to be non-life threatening injuries. He said the other driver sought his or her own treatment for minor injuries.

Hankins said the crash happened at the intersection of U.S. 31 and Marion Center Road at about 7:45 p.m. when the driver of a southbound vehicle on U.S. 31 turned left into the path of a northbound vehicle.

He said he believes it was the driver of the northbound vehicle who was transported to the hospital.

Charlevoix city officers were also assisted at the scene by city firefighters, and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's office.

OPINIONS yours & ours

Can we afford a less-healthy America?

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

A common recent response to the increasing cost of health care, education or even our military is, "We can't afford that." It seems to me that is the wrong approach.

The question should be, "Can we afford an unhealthy or less healthy populace?" Or, "Can we afford a poorly educated population?" Or even, "Can we afford a less secure America?" Suggesting that such public expenditures are too costly for us seems to me to be a very short-sighted view of our economy and our government.

A less healthy or less-educated population will certainly not enhance our economic productivity in the long run, although there might be short term savings. Our nation might very well need to temporarily borrow money to accomplish the necessary education and health. That is, after all, what families do when costs temporarily exceed income. Families borrow for medical emergencies, and for education. Enhanced productivity can pay off the loans. Both education and general health benefit productivity in the long view.

I suppose the problem is whether we are all liable for such expenditures, or whether only those people benefiting directly should be liable. As a nation, we have, from the beginning, supported the idea of universal public education as being a good for the whole of society, not just for those who are in school at any particular time. The question, "Why should I, who has no children in school, help support the public schools?" has a ready answer. It is that the whole of society benefits from a widely educated populace, where leadership may come from a much larger pool of people. The alternative is a small leadership class, highly educated, without much possibility for the rest of us to succeed. That is a recipe for totalitarianism, not democracy.

It does seem to me that health care provides a similar problem and a similar solution. If we don't raise hackles by using words like "socialism or socialist" as part of the discussion, we could agree that a generally healthy population is a benefit for everyone, much like education is. When our Constitution was written, there wasn't anything that could be called healthcare, there was only the kindly country doctor, who would accept chickens or eggs in lieu of payment. That doesn't work anymore. As long as we as individuals are mostly responsible for our personal health care, we will suffer as a society, much as we might suffer from a lack of universal public education.

We seem more comfortable with the idea that we all pay for a very large military presence all over the world. Is security of that sort more important than the security to be found in the idea that we might benefit collectively from a healthier society, or a better educated one?

That is a discussion that we must have as a society in the near future. Don't just choose up sides and shout, talk about it. New ideas should always be welcome. Maybe we can decide collectively what the best course would be. I have some hope.

Roger Knutson is a professor emeritus of biology from Luther College in Decorah, Iowa, where he taught for 30 years. He holds master's degree and a doctorate from the botany department at Michigan State University.

Castle Farms offers thanks

Editor:

As we approach the season of Thanksgiving, the entire team at Castle Farms wishes to pause and give thanks for another successful season. Tours of Castle Farms continue to grow at a phenomenal pace. In 2012, a record number of guests from cruise ships, charter buses and individual group tours were able to visit and tour The Castle. This accomplishment would not have been possible without the collaborative efforts of many individuals and area businesses working hand in hand with our Castle staff. Special thanks to Erin Bemis and her wonderful team at the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce; Amanda Wilkens and the Charlevoix Area Convention & Visitor's Bureau; Dave Miles and the Charlevoix Historical Society; Craig and Jason Funkey of the Keweenaw Star; the great crew at the Beaver Island Boat Company; and the amazing people at Circle Michigan.

We would be remiss if we did not mention our fabulous area hotels and resorts with their friendly knowledgeable front desk staff who continue to spread the word about The Castle. We are also indebted to numerous shop owners, restaurateurs, area businesses and even local residents, who take the time to chat with guests visiting the area, asking them, "Have you visited The Castle?"

All of us at Castle Farms feel blessed to call this area home. We are grateful to live in an area where neighbors help neighbors, as evidenced by the continued goodwill and spirit of cooperation which promotes Charlevoix the Beautiful and the entire Northern Michigan region. Thank you for your continued support. Blessings to you and yours in this holiday season. May the upcoming new year of 2013 be the brightest and best season for all of us yet!

High school performing arts to present 'A Christmas Carol'

The Charlevoix High School Performing Arts program will present the Charles Dickens classic Christmas tale, "A Christmas Carol" for three performances at 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 7-8, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9, at the Charlevoix High School Auditorium.

Program director Jodi Thompson said this Charles Dickens's classic Christmas tale is told from a new perspective — a young girl's grandfather. Victoria enjoys spending time at her grandfather's prominent London business, but has trouble understanding why her grandfather would give his hard-earned money to the poor. This gives Grandfather the perfect opportunity to tell the story of Ebenezer Scrooge as he recalls it, and a traditional retelling of A Christmas Carol comes to life. As the story goes, of course, revelations brought by visiting his past, present and future with three ghosts persuade Scrooge to turn his life around.

Thompson said the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts would like to thank the Charlevoix Schools Foundation for supporting the production with a grant that helped pay for scripts and royalty fees.

Tickets are $5 for students and $7 for adults and will be available at the door.

LOOKING BACK…

On a June night in 1887, the passenger steamer Champlain caught fire and burned off Fisherman's Island with the loss of 22 lives, Charlevoix's worst maritime disaster. By 1888, the charred hull had been enlarged and the boat rebuilt into the City of Charlevoix that ran between here and Chicago. She steamed into town for the first time in early May that year accompanied by a cold drenching rainstorm. But that didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the crowd that awaited her arrival for, as the Charlevoix Sentinel newspaper put it, they "... welcomed her at the bridge with three rousing cheers and a tiger, and the band awaited her landing in the warehouse (on what is now the Beaver Island Boat Company dock), from which quarters they played a joyful welcome ... She is a beauty ... and sits in the water like a duck ... Long live the City of Charlevoix!" The steamer ran under that name for many more years, and ended up known as the Kansas. On the left in the photo appears the Charlevoix Roller Mills grist mill, now the Weathervane Inn; on the the right stands the Lewis Grand Opera House, now the lawn sloping down to the channel.

Alternative gift fair planned for Dec. 1

Gifts with a Purpose, an alternative gift fair, is planned 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, at Charlevoix Public Library.

The event focuses on helping the community and people in need, just-in-time for the holiday season. Gifts with a Purpose, which focuses on Charlevoix organizations, is an opportunity for community members and businesses to shop nonprofit organizations, making donations in honor of their friends, loved ones, teachers and other hard to shop for people.

When a shopper comes into the fair, they will be greeted by an organization representative and receive a list of suggested giving levels. Then the shopper may go around and learn about the organizations and how they help the community. Each organization will have suggested gift donations, and how those donations specifically help. For example, a $50 donation to the Outreach Food Pantry will provide meals for a family of four for one month or a $10 donation to the Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library will purchase one book for the youth department. Credit cards will be accepted this year and used at the collective checkout station.

Once the shopper decides what to purchase, they will receive a gift card that can be mailed or given to their loved ones.

The organizations involved in Gifts with a Purpose include Third Day Fellowship & Outreach/Food Pantry/Joppa House, B.A.S.E.S. Teen Center, Bergmann Center, Inc., Charlevoix Area Community Pool, Charlevoix Circle of Arts, Charlevoix Community Christmas Project, Charlevoix Community Pantry, Charlevoix Historical Society, Charlevoix Schools Foundation, Colorado Challenge, Dolly Parton Imagination Library, Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library, Hospice of Northwest Michigan, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, Leadership Charlevoix County: Wheels to Water, Rainbow Shoppe, and the Serenity House — Alano Club of Charlevoix.

Snacks will be available for purchase from the Aktion Club of Charlevoix. For further information about the fair, contact one of the co-organizers: Cheri Hoffman at (231) 547-7659 or Val Meyerson at (231) 547-2651.

Sponsors needed for new lampost decorations

Fresh cut garland and wreaths could adorn downtown Charlevoix this holiday season.

The Retail Committee of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce hopes to spruce up the town this holiday season by replacing the plastic wreaths that have been used over the past several seasons with live greens along Bridge Street in the central shopping district.

The committee is seeking sponsors for the wreaths. For $50, a family, business or organization can sponsor an individual lamp post.

Contact the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce for more information or to become a sponsor by calling (231) 547-2101 or email ferguson@charlevoix.org.

Autism awareness

Donations collected by third-graders at Charlevoix Elementary School will help students who have autism, including a sibling of one of the students. Charlevoix Elementary teachers Cathy Silberhorn and Julie McLean explained that students made and sold autism awareness ribbons and food snacks, raising a total of $600 to help a Char-Em Intermediate School District classroom purchase equipment to project lessons for students with autism. The fundraising project helped Charlevoix students become more aware of autism. On hand for the check presentation are (front row, from left) students, Eli Priest, Eligh Wynkoop, Cameron Roloff, Karissa Givens holding her brother Christopher Givens, Kelsey Smith; and adults (from left) Char-Em ISD teacher Adam Poel, Charlevoix teacher Cathy Silberhorn, Bobby Givens (father of Karissa and Christopher) and Charlevoix teacher Julie McLean.

OBITUARIES

Marilyn A. Izor, 86

Marilyn A. Izor, 86, passed into Glory in the early morning hours of Saturday, Nov. 10, 2012, after a brief illness. Marilyn was the second child of the late John and Gladys Zaebst of suburban Cleveland, Ohio. Her older brother, Bob Zaebst, 90, passed away in April, 2012.

Marilyn met her husband, Herman Izor at the Fairview Baptist Church in Fairview Village, Ohio in 1945, following the war. They were married in 1946 and celebrated 66 years together last June. Together, they raised three sons, were active in their churches and after Herman's retirement in 1974, they traveled extensively throughout North America in their motor homes and Airstream trailer.

As a young mother, Marilyn was active in the local school PTA, serving as president. She enjoyed a successful career in several occupations including secretary to the head of a bank trust department. In retirement she volunteered in numerous community service agencies the Welcome Wagon, Wally Byam International Caravan Club, the Airstream owners club, and the Hospital Auxiliaries of Charlevoix, Mich., Tucson Arizona and Palomar Pomerado in Poway, Calif.

Upon moving to San Diego, Marilyn, with Herman became active in The Church at Rancho Bernardo as a worship service greeter, marriage retreat mentor and volunteer in many ways. Always at her best in her kitchen, Marilyn regularly baked cakes and desserts for the Salvation Army Mission.

Marilyn is survived by her devoted husband, Herman; three sons, Paul Izor (Michele) of Mount Hermon, Robert Izor (Catherine) of Medford, Oregon, Bill Izor (Karen) of Poway; three grandchildren; three great-grandchildren and many other loving family members and friends. Private burial will be at Miramar National Cemetery and a public memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. on Dec. 1, at The Church at Rancho Bernardo. The family requests that you share your written thoughts and remembrances to the church. A memorial fund has been established in remembrance of Marilyn with Mount Hermon Association, P.O. Box 431, Mount Hermon, CA 95041. Please send your gift with an appropriate designation.

Bobbie Lee Hilton, 75

Bobbie Lee Hilton, 75, of Charlevoix, passed away Friday, Nov. 16, 2012, while deer hunting with his grandchildren in Central Lake. He was born July 19, 1937, in Charlevoix, the son of Myron and Rose (Saganak) Hilton. He attended Charlevoix Schools.

Bob was a journeyman machinist by trade and worked for many local businesses such as Hufford Industries, American Mold, an experimental tool and die shop for the Joel A. Dyksterhouse Company. But most of all, he loved working in his own shop, visiting with friends, and solving seemingly impossible mechanical problems. Bob was also a dairy and beef farmer, logger, and owned a sawmill, all in Marion Township.

Bob was an active member of the Barnard United Methodist Church and the Northern Michigan Antique Fly-wheelers Club.

Bob loved the outdoors, and his enthusiasm was passed on to his grandchildren while spending time hunting, snowshoeing and enjoying outdoor life.

On May 5, 1956, he married Phyllis A. French in Ellsworth. Phyllis survives him, as do their children, Robert D. (Carol) Hilton, Ronald L. (Terri) Hilton, Pamela Hilton all of Charlevoix, Lisa Hilton of Central Lake; grandchildren, Amber Phillips, Anthony Miller, April and Rose Hilton; great-granddaughter, Claire Miller; brother, Charles (Cheryl) Hilton of Traverse City.

A memorial service will be at 11 a.m. Monday, Nov. 26, at the Barnard United Methodist Church in Charlevoix, where visitation will also take place from 4-7 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 25. The Rev. Rap Posnick will officiate. Interment will be in Barnard Cemetery.

If you wish to share a memory of Bob, or condolences, please do so at www.winchesterfuneralhome.com against her are completely unwarranted."

On his claim that the lawsuit holds no water because he is covered by governmental immunity, Croson said, "We don't think it applies here because he doesn't have access to that immunity."

A long history of discord in the prosecutor's office has led up to this legal climax. At the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners meetings in April and May, Fanara pleaded with commissioners to step in and stop Jarema from continuing behavior she alleged was "bullying."

Fanara has accused Jarema of lying to county commissioners and a judge, refusing to pay her for work she did, launching a false investigation into her on-the-clock county hours, restricting her job duties, failing to register her for a student loan payback program, falsely accusing her of obtaining warrants without probable cause and perhaps the most egregious allegation, that Jarema spread false rumors about her having sex with a defense attorney in exchange for better plea bargains.

After Jarema launched an investigation against Fanara through the state Attorney General's office claiming she had charged a defendant without probable cause, officials found the assistant prosecutor did nothing wrong.

"No crime was committed by the chief assistant prosecutor," revealed Genesee County Prosecutor David Leyton in October.

The allegations against her came as retaliation, Fanara says, after she filed a grievance against Jarema with the Michigan Attorney Grievance Commission for alleged lies to commissioners and a judge.

After filing the grievance, Fanara was placed on medical leave by doctors after she experienced stress-related tension headaches she previously said are attributed to Jarema's poor treatment of her.

The rumors Jarema allegedly spread about Fanara having sex with a defense attorney are the top bullet point in Fanara's lawsuit explaining why she believes she has been sexually harassed. It is followed by claims that Jarema and the county threatened to file unfounded complaints against her with the Attorney Grievance Commission, falsely accused her of submitting false time sheets and authorizing warrants without probable cause, refused to register her for a federal student loan payback program, reduced her pay, denied her access to the office and restricted her job duties.

It goes on to say that she spoke out against their treatment of her, but the alleged harassment did not stop, it instead increased, reads the lawsuit, thus the charge of retaliation.

The comments also qualify as defamation, claims the lawsuit, because they resulted in damage to Fanara's reputation in the community, her ability to find work, emotional distress, humiliation, sleeplessness, migraine headaches, tension headaches and anxiety.

Fanara is claiming she has been deprived of her freedom of speech by the county and Jarema because, after she spoke out to the public about Jarema's alleged harassment, the county retaliated against and terminated her because of, or on the basis of, "Her exercise of her constitutionally-protected speech on a matter of public concern."

With the lawsuit, Fanara is demanding that the county stop the alleged discrimination, harassment and defamation and award her all lost wages, as well as compensatory and punitive damages and attorney's fees.

Jarema did not return telephone calls seeking comment for this story.

FIREPLACE

fireplace), of some parameters that surround the discussion.

First, he noted that while the donor is open to considering many options for re-designing and or/relocating the fireplace, his donation is for a fireplace located in East Park, and not other uses or locations in the city.

Carlson also noted that if the proposal that comes forward through the committee and Buday is not one that the council and/or the donor can agree upon, the project would move forward as originally approved, unless the council chose to make a 2/3 vote to suspend its procedures and then took another 2/3 vote to overturn its decision to approve the fireplace, as spelled out in the city charter.

The mayor also noted that the additional cost — that will likely have to be supplied through fundraising — to relocate the fireplace would be about $13,900 and about $15,400 if the project completely goes away. (The added cost for the "go away" options would be for the re-stocking fee that would be incurred by returning the gas log set that would go unused.)

In July, city resident John Winn came to the council with an offer from an anonymous donor who wished to pay for the bulk of the cost of constructing a community fireplace on the western edge of East Park near the east side of Bridge Street between Mason and Clinton streets. The design called for the fireplace to be 8 feet wide, 7 feet tall and then be topped by a chimney that tapers to 4 feet wide for a total structure height of about 20 feet. The city's only cost for the project was to be about $300 for the installation of a natural gas supply line and the cost of the gas to be burned in the fireplace, estimated to be about $6,800 per year. Little or no public comments were received at the three meetings (two regularly scheduled and one special) at which the proposal was discussed, and the council ultimately approved the project by a 5-0 vote. (Council member Shane Cole abstained from the vote because his wife works for DTE Energy, the company that would supply the gas for the fireplace.)

The public outcry against the fireplace began when crews removed a tree to make room for the fireplace and site work began for the foundation. The most common among the objections were that the fireplace would block views of Round Lake and the park from Bridge Street. Other complaints included the cost of the gas and the impact on the environment.

Winn later explained that he was the one who suggested the idea of the fireplace to the donor, who had originally wanted to donate to the park's interactive water fountain — a project that has been completed. Winn said he got the idea from a similar fireplace in Holland, Mich., that has been a popular gathering spot in that city's downtown.

After hearing a chorus of complaints from full-house audiences at two council meetings, the council ultimately voted 4-1 to put the project on hold until spring to allow city officials to work with members of the community and Buday to find alternatives to the proposal that might be more agreeable to more people. In that vote, council member Lyle Gennett cast the dissenting vote, noting that at this point, he thinks the project should simply be scrapped.

Also at Monday's meeting an audience member complained that the 3rd Ward was being under-represented in the council discussions on the fireplace matter by Cole's abstaining from the discussions and votes. Cole responded that he was acting on the recommendations of others, but said he is willing to re-join the discussion if the city attorney feels there is no conflict of interest in him doing so. Carlson said the council would seek an opinion on Cole's participation from its attorney.

In another matter relating to the city council and the fireplace debate, as of press time Tuesday, city resident Julee Roth had not re-filed an amended proposed petition seeking to recall 3rd Ward council member Jill Picha for her support of the fireplace. Roth filed her first petition in late October, but the county election commission later ruled that the proposed language was too vague and rejected the language.

Flurry Fest, open house to be Dec. 1

Downtown Charlevoix will again host Flurry Fest, a celebration of hot chocolate, cool entertainment and lots of community spirit. The sixth annual event will take place on from 2:30-6 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, under a large heated tent in downtown's East Park.

After being offered last year as a stand-alone event, Flurry Fest will once again be presented in conjunction with the Merchant Open House. The staples of the event remain "Charlevoix's Hot Chocolate Champ" hot chocolate contest featuring concoctions offered by area eateries and music from local performers.

This year's musical selections include festive offerings from the brass group Tuba Christmas and the warm island percussion sounds of the Petoskey Steel Drum Band. A new addition to the entertainment lineup will be Neil Sauter, the Michigan Stiltwalker. Sauter is currently holds the world record for fastest marathon on stilts and last summer completed an 830-mile stilt walk across Michigan to raise funds for United Cerebral Palsy of Michigan. Sauter will also showcase his holiday balloon tying skills for the event's younger attendees.

A four-legged representative from Santa's reindeer team will also be on-hand as the team prepares to help Santa deliver gifts to all good girls and boys in just a few short weeks.

Limited edition Flurry Fest stocking caps will once again be available for purchase, with proceeds supporting the event. Flurry Fest is presented with contributions from Bingham Insurance Services, Charlevoix Ace Hardware, Landscape Logic and Way Transportation.

Not a hunter?

There are still places you can hike

MORGAN SHERBURNE
Northern Michigan Review

Beginning last Thursday, trucks began parking in the early morning where, throughout most of the year, no trucks parked.

You could imagine, as you drove past them, hunters settling into blinds — probably more than a few sleeping. And beginning on Sunday, you could see many of these trucks and cars parked in the short driveways and parking places of Little Traverse Conservancy preserves.

But, says Anne Fleming, communications coordinator for the Little Traverse Conservancy, not all preserves are open to hunting.

Sometimes, a preserve is closed to hunting because the donor requested that it be that way — or a preserve allows hunting because the donor enjoys hunting.

"Quite often, our staff and stewardship committee keep in mind a handful of sensible factors such as the preserve's proximity to houses, the size of the preserve, and whether or not land around it is also open to hunting," said Fleming.

But, said Fleming, even though a particular preserve might be open to hunting, land surrounding it might not be. It's always a safe bet to follow the usual safety guidelines during hunting season.

Wear bright clothing, she suggests, and points to a hiking website that gives suggestions for safety. Avoid blacks, browns and earth-toned greens. Consider purchasing blaze-orange vests or hats.

Make noise as you hike — whistle or carry on a conversation with your hiking partner. If you do hear shooting, try to raise your voice and talk with the hunters, alerting them to your presence.

Educate yourself. Know the starting and completion dates of hunting season. In Michigan, rifle season runs through Nov. 30, and muzzleloading season is Dec. 7-16.

T'is the season to see trucks parked along likely hunting spots and successful hunters driving back down south with deer strapped to their car roofs, but the Little Traverse Conservancy in Harbor Springs does offer preserves where hunting is prohibited. Here's a list.

Charlevoix County preserves

Barnay's Lake (on Beaver Island), 112 acres
Nathan "Barry" Driggars, 75 acres
Rogars Family Homestead/Dressel/Jordan River, 201 acres combined
Little Sand Bay (on Beaver Island), 28 acres
North Point (owned by city of Charlevoix), 27 acres
Charles A. Ransom, 80 acres
Raven Ridge, 140 acres
The Hill, 106 acres
Undina, 28.5 acres

Through July 2013, the Little Traverse Conservancy has outlined the preserves open to hunting. Hunters must get permission to hunt a conservancy preserve or natural area by calling the conservancy office at (231) 347-0991 and obtaining a permission form. The form must be signed by the hunter, a witness and the conservancy to be valid, and hunters need to carry a copy of the form with them while hunting.

Charlevoix County preserves

Halle, 11 acres, Melrose Township
Horton Creek, 20 acres, Hayes Township
Marvin, 132 acres, Wilson Township
Nick Adams, 40 acres, Bay Township
North Branch Boyne River and Big Cedar, 60 acres, Boyne Valley Township
Rufus Teesdale, 10 acres, Bay Township
Schulz, 40 acres, Hayes Township
Sleepy Hollow, 55 acres, Eveline Township
Susan Creek (including Lietz and Wabber), 172 acres, Hayes Township
Taylor Horton Creek, 147 acres, Hayes Township

Andrea Schnell remembered

Faith helps crash victim's family through shock

ZAC BRITTON
Northern Michigan Review

Andrea Schnell

The most important thing to Andrea Lynne Schnell was her faith.

"First and foremost, she wants people to know she's in Heaven," said Yvonne Schnell, Andrea's mother, with voice full of emotion.

Andrea Schnell, 26, was returning to her Charlevoix residence from a Sunday evening service in Petoskey when her 1988 Pontiac two-door car slid into northbound traffic on U.S. 31 near Camp Daggett Road. Her fatal injuries in the ensuing two-car accident have shaken her co-workers at Charlevoix Area Hospital, her fellow parishioners at Landmark Baptist Church and her family — especially her parents and two sisters — in Alpena.

Even beyond that.

"She was one of those quiet people that may not have been noticed until they're gone," stated Yvonne, who joined Andrea's father, Paul, and siblings Kristen and Sarah, in making arrangements for Thursday's visitation and Friday's service in Alpena. "It's just that huge hole. We're hearing from a lot of people especially (Tuesday). We heard from friends and co-workers ... so many people just can't believe it."

Pastor Gary Biggs had similar emotions upon receiving the call late Sunday night.

"Anytime she wasn't at work, she was here, that's where she was on Sunday night," said Biggs, who has been senior pastor at the 2,100-member church since 2000. "It's definitely the last thing we expected. To get that call late on Sunday, with terrible news and then we were trying to get in touch with her family.

"She will be sorely missed," he added, noting she helped frequently in the church's nursery. "I know with the College and Careers group (at Landmark). It's still a state of shock a couple of days later."

That's equally the case at Charlevoix Area Hospital where she worked as a CT and X-ray technician for the past 22 months.

Council recall efforts renewed

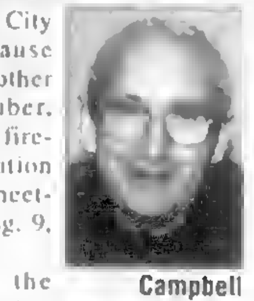
Petitions seeking to oust Picha, Vollmer claim violations of Open Meetings Act

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

A Charlevoix resident has re-initiated an effort to recall Third Ward Charlevoix City Council member Jill Picha and another resident initiated a similar action against Second Ward councilmember Bryan Vollmer.

Last week Third Ward resident Julee Roth filed a new proposed recall petition with the Charlevoix County Clerk's office seeking to recall Picha claiming Picha "had a meeting with other city council members in violation of the open meetings act on Aug. 9, 2012; and has failed to ensure compliance with the Charlevoix Ordinance of 2007 requiring timely collection of debris and other trash since June 2012."

Picha



Campbell

Second Ward resident (and former mayor and city council member) Gabe Campbell also recently filed a similar proposed recall petition with the county clerk's office. Campbell's petition language reads, "We wish to recall Bryan Vollmer from the 2nd Ward City Council because he met with other council member, regarding the fireplace in violation of the open meetings act on Aug. 9, 2012."

Asked by the Courier Wednesday, how exactly Vollmer (and the council) violated the open meetings act, Campbell said the violation occurred because the meeting did not take place "as advertised."

Explaining further, he contends that the meeting was in violation of the act because the meeting was posted as a joint meeting by the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority and the Charlevoix City Council, but ultimately, the downtown development authority did not have enough members present to make a quorum and therefore could not officially meet. Thus, he contends, the meeting was different than what was "advertised" in the posting.

Both Roth's and Campbell's proposed petition language refer to a special city council meeting that took place on Aug. 9. At the meeting, the council voted 5-0 (with council member Shane Cole abstaining) to approve construction of a community fireplace in Plaza B of East Park.

The proposal to build the gas-fired fireplace — designed to be about 8 feet wide, about 7 feet tall and then topped by a stone chimney that tapers to 4 feet wide for a total height of about 20 feet — came from an anonymous donor through city resident John Winn.

Although no one spoke in opposition to the project at the two regular and one special meeting, when work began to prepare the site for construction days later, and word of the project began to spread, a group of community members objected to the project complaining that — among other things — it would block views of the park and Round Lake and objecting to a projected cost of about $6,700 per year to operate. Ultimately, even after the first few courses of the fireplace's foundation blocks were cemented in place, the council voted to put the project on hold until spring to look for options that might satisfy all of the parties

Up North Fourth fizzles, movies, concerts likely to return

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority will go back to the drawing board in its effort to create an event to draw people to the downtown around the Independence Day holiday.

At Monday's regular monthly authority board meeting, executive director Keith Carey said after two attempts, the authority and its promoter Porterhouse Productions will be abandoning the fledgling Up North Fourth event.

Carey's comments were part of an overall discussion of program planning for next year in advance of coming budget planning that will take place in early 2013.

Carey noted that although the authority has seen some cost savings over the past year, and very tentative projections are for revenue from property taxes to stabilize from the declines experienced in recent years, it will likely have to deal with a revenue hit somewhere between $20,000 and $45,000 next year thanks to the state legislature's expected elimination of the personal property tax.

With these constraints likely facing them, Carey encouraged the board to take a hard look at what promotional programs are having the most significant impacts on the downtown and the community at large.

For many years Charlevoix had ceded events around the Fourth of July holiday to surrounding communities, but two years ago, looking to draw people to the downtown during that event void, authority officials devised the Up North Fourth as a craft beer, barbecue, and music event in East Park. But the event struggled to hit its stride. Even after a revamp for its second year, Carey said the festival still wasn't paying enough dividends for the authority and the promoter, and the entities parted ways. Carey said he's still hopeful that the authority alone or working together with other organizations can come up with some type of event around Independence Day that will be far less labor intensive and cost less than the $2,000 the authority laid out for this years event.

Carey said he's also going to suggest the board take a look a the Flurry Fest. This year's event (set for Dec. 1) will mark the sixth year for the event and Carey suggested that board may want also evaluate the effectiveness of that event as well.

Board member Dan Barron asked about how well attended the movies in the park have been and how well that translates in to business. Carey said its hard to tell how much economic impact the movie series in East Park has, but he noted movies typically draw between 125-500 people and some of the best feedback from locals and guests alike,

County opts to maintain health benefits for employees

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

At its meeting Wednesday, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners opted out of a state law that requires county employees to pay at least 20 percent of their health insurance premiums if the price of their health care plan exceeds a set dollar amount.

Under Public Act 152, passed in 2011, all governmental entities in Michigan are now required to either keep health care costs for its employees below set "hard cap" limits, make public employees pay a percentage of their premiums or opt out of the first two options in a majority vote by its governing body.

In addition to the decision Wednesday, Charlevoix County opted out last year as well of the hard cap and employee contribution options, meant to save local governments money in health care costs for employees.

The county is "very close" to the hard cap, the maximum suggested amount that a government should spend per employee, couple or family, according to county clerk Cheryl Potter Browe.

Charlevoix County has found its own ways to save on health care costs, she said.

A year ago, the bill for the county's employee health care costs was about $265,000 each month. That has been reduced to about $140,000 a month, for a total savings of nearly half a million dollars over the course of the year.

The savings were realized when the county moved from a PPO, to health savings accounts for employees. Its premium increase was also very low, 2.8 percent, this year.

"I'm pleased that we have been able to save that much money," said Browe.

Other cost-saving measures include a decision two decades ago that dictated that while employees hired before 1992 will receive health benefits from the county for the rest of their lives after retiring, those hired after that date will not see those lifelong benefits.

Also, while employees themselves do not contribute to their health insurance premiums, they are responsible for paying 40 percent of the premium for any spouses or dependents on their plan. That rule applies to all employees hired after 2000 when the scenario was voted in by the board.

The employees would pay slightly more if the county hadn't opted out of PA 152 at its meeting.

"We have a board that is really good to its employees," said Browe.

Visitors bureau hopes to double down on Pure Michigan campaign success

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

After seeing a $20,000 investment in a Pure Michigan advertising campaign increase "clicks" on its website by more than 1,000 percent this year, officials with the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau are hoping to double-down on the success by more than doubling their investment next year.

At the bureau's annual meeting at the Weathervane Restaurant Wednesday, Ken Yarsevich, an advertising specialist with the Pure Michigan program detailed provided numbers that reflected what many hotel operators and other business owners in the area already knew anecdotally — the campaign appears to have worked well.

One of the key parts of the campaign was a Charlevoix-specific radio ad recorded by Michigan native actor Tim Allen in the Pure Michigan style that aired for several weeks in the late spring and early summer in downstate markets outside of Detroit including Kalamazoo, Lansing, Saginaw, and Flint. The board had stayed away from the Detroit and Chicago markets because they are much more expensive.

For 2013, Yarsevich said the minimum buy-in to the program has increased to $25,000. And based on this year's results, the bureau's leadership wants to expand into a fall campaign that would add another $25,000 to the total campaign cost. Yarsevich said the fall campaign ad would be different from the summer ad and should start running in mid- to late August.

Yarsevich pointed to statistics that showed for the first time since records have been kept, last year more tourism spending in Michigan came from outside the state instead of Michigan residents. Based on that trend, and what he viewed as some "oversaturation" in Michigan markets, Yarsevich is recommending that Charlevoix target some nearby out-of-state areas such as South Bend, Ind.

Wilkin

The bureau gets the bulk of its funding through fees charged on room rentals by hotels in the area.

Bureau director Amanda Wilkin said an uptick in revenue from last year will help fill some of the gap for the expansion of the advertising campaign, but said the bureau will likely have to look for additional partnerships and fundraising opportunities to make up the rest.

One of many volunteers, committee chair Tracey Sherman of East Jordan, organizes a group of silent auction items called "Munchkinland, gifts for kids" at Castle Farms Tuesday in preparation for Holly Daze, the annual Charlevoix Area Hospital fundraiser dinner, Saturday evening, Dec. 1. Reserve seating available by phone only. Contact Faye Parrish, (231) 547-8501.

Tickets remain available for Holly Daze, the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation's annual dinner and auction fundraiser. The event will begin at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, at Castle Farms in Charlevoix.

This year's theme is Renaissance Christmas Wassail. Decorations and table settings will follow the theme, and the meal catered by Grey Gables Restaurant also will feature renaissance style dishes. Proceeds from tickets sales, silent and live auctions will be used to support the purchase of surgical equipment for minimally invasive spinal surgery at the hospital.

The evening will begin with cocktails and a silent auction, followed by dinner and the live auction at 7:30 p.m. Director Ann Golski says there certainly is something for everyone, "whether you want warmth, history, golf, pampering or artwork. There's something here for you," she said.

Auction items include trips to sunny Mexico, historic Williamsburg, Va., and skiing in Colorado. Artwork to be auctioned includes a painting of the Pine River Channel in Charlevoix by Kevin Barton, an original painting by Gary Leitner and a painted Santa piece by artist Pat Tinney.

A men's outing package also is up for grabs, which includes golfing with a cart, dinner, breakfast and hotel accommodations for four at Bay Harbor, as well as a fishing charter trip for between 4-6 people.

Two other notable packages are the New Year/New You package and the New Year/New Room package. The first includes a complete makeover, teeth whitening, spa treatment and a gift certificate for clothing, while the latter includes a painter, wallpaper and carpenter services from Carlson Home Improvement, furniture from Bartlett's and interior decorating from Linda Mason.

Finally, angel gift donations are again available for those who would simply like to donate. This year's donations will benefit the hospital's swing room, a post-surgery rehabilitation room to more easily transition patients.

Contact the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation at (231) 547-8501 for more information, to make a donation or a reservation for Holly Daze.

Winter parking rules take effect Dec. 1

City of Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan is reminding Charlevoix city residents and guests that winter on-street parking restrictions will take effect on Saturday, Dec. 1 and will remain in effect until April 1.

The restrictions prohibit parking on city streets between the hours of 2-6 a.m. and are intended to help expedite snow plowing by city crews during those hours.

Violators of the on-street parking restriction face a $15 ticket.

was so bright. She learned new skills so quickly and so willingly," stated Dr. Jim MacKenzie, a physician at the hospital. "Patients appreciated her gentle touch and compassionate nature. She worked with me frequently in my clinic and I am so saddened by her loss."

"When she was here at work in Charlevoix, she was with "family," added Dr. Carl Harlan. "Trying to work this week without her has been very trying. I feel like I have lost one of my own kids."

Schnell was hired and moved to Charlevoix in February 2011, following her 2007 graduation from Alpena Community College and Mid-Michigan College in 2009. According to the obituary supplied by Bannan Funeral Home in Alpena, Andrea — who was home schooled — graduated magna cum laude from Mid-Michigan College, was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and American Registry of Radiologic Technologists.

"She just passed her CAT scan boards on Nov. 1," Yvonne said. "She was low-key about even that. She called her boss and said that she passed, and that was it. It didn't come up again, she didn't make any fuss or brag about it."

While that was impressive to friends and family, it fell short of who she was as a person.

"A truly kind-hearted and giving person," stated Biggs. "She was always asking if there was something she can help with."

"She was very quiet, never had a bad thing to say about anyone," recalled her mother. "That phrase that 'if you can't say anything nice, then don't say it,' she lived and followed that."

> "She was one of those quiet people that may not have been noticed until they're gone,"
> — Yvonne Schnell, Andrea's mother

And foremost was the strong faith, helping her family through the shock after just spending the bulk of the Thanksgiving holiday weekend together in Alpena. The last time Yvonne saw her daughter was at the family's church in Lewiston, following Sunday morning services, and she spoke to Andrea again right before she left for the drive north to Petoskey and Landmark Baptist.

"First and Foremost, she loved her Lord and Savior," stated Yvonne. "That was absolutely important to her. She loved Charlevoix. She loved where she worked. She loved her church and Pastor Biggs."

Besides her parents and sisters, Andrea is survived by her grandparents, Marion Schnell and Dick and Sue Benedict, all of Alpena; three uncles, Gary (Alanna) Schnell of Ohio, Paul Benedict of Muskegon, Steve (Amber) Benedict of Mexico; and several cousins.

Preceding her in death was her grandfather, Jasper Schnell.

Visitation will take place 2-8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 29, at the Bannan Funeral Home and will continue at 10 a.m. until the time of the funeral service at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 30, with the pastors Charles Price, Gary Biggs and Donald Evilsizer officiating.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to Landmark Baptist, 1182 Kemp Road, Petoskey, MI 49770.

U.S. 31 crash claims life of Charlevoix woman

ZAC BRITTON
Northern Michigan Review

A two-vehicle traffic crash late Sunday on U.S. 31 near Bay Harbor claimed the life of a Charlevoix resident.

Petoskey Department of Public Safety officials said one of the drivers, Andrea Lynne Schnell, 26, died at the scene from injuries she sustained in the crash. The other driver, Sanford Suddall, 65, of Liberty Township, Ohio was treated for minor injuries at the scene.

Public safety officials said the crash happened at about 8:30 p.m. as Schnell was driving a 1988 Pontiac two-door passenger car southbound on U.S. 31 near Camp Daggett Road. Police said Schnell's vehicle crossed over into the oncoming northbound lane where it collided with a 2002 Toyota two-door passenger vehicle driven by Suddall.

Authorties said conditions of the roads were slippery with a snow/ice mixture at the time of the crash and that there was no indication that alcohol was a factor in the accident.

U.S. 31 at Camp Daggett Road was shut down for approximately two hours while crash investigation was conducted.

The Petoskey Department of Public safety was assisted at the scene by the Emmet County Sheriff's Department, Michigan State Police, Charlevoix City Police, Charlevoix County Sheriff's department, Allied EMS and Emmet County Victim Services Unit.

Everything but the kitchen sink

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

My mom was never short on sayings. Some she made up, some were quotes from Ben Franklin and others were quips from comedians of her era. Whenever we traveled as a family she would look around at the luggage and exclaim, "My goodness, we've packed everything but the kitchen sink!" Well, this Thanksgiving I could hear a new bent on this well-worn saying. We had everything we needed for this holiday except the kitchen sink.

It wasn't your ordinary Thanksgiving Day. There were a few biccups. The most evident was the clogged kitchen drain. I don't know why garbage disposals were invented since I've never owned one that could take more than crumbs and a few stray coffee grounds. It was an invention by someone who thought the modern woman needed one to make her life easier. Something I find akin to that of a snake oil dealer from the Old West. I have learned the hard way that all of us can live without one. Inevitably every holiday when cooking goes into full steam, I plug up the sink with a few potato or apple peels. Years of experience taught me to not put anything into the disposal that had a skin or shell. I do drop a few ice cubes in now and then as I read somewhere it sharpens the blades. For what this mechanism can chew up, I still haven't figured out.

It doesn't take much to distract me so, as I was multitasking, I inadvertently let a few stalks of celery take a dive down the drain. Moments later I could see various food groups from a week ago float to the top of the sink. After three hours of plunging and adding every chemical that we could purchase at a late night hour on the eve of Thanksgiving, we began a workout equivalent to one weeks' worth at a gym. When we thought two sets of hands were better than one, we began plunging every orifice the sink had to offer. We gasped in horror as water spewed past our legs in a current a canoe would envy. Yes, the pipe directly holding things in under the sink blew a hole the size of my fist. I no longer needed to worry about washing the kitchen floor before company arrived. Water whooshed by and mopping began quickly to keep the tide from reaching the dining room. Sand bags were not an option.

After a fitful night's sleep, I decided to take a positive spin on this and pretend I was camping. What's the big deal? Our foremothers may not have had sinks but only tubs of water to work with. Yes, I told myself, I can do this and I am up for the challenge. I proceeded to check on the turkey that I put in the extra refrigerator to thaw for its big day. To my dismay, the bird was still frozen hard as a rock. Having converted the downstairs bathroom into a walk in shower, I proceeded to lug this hunk of fowl up the stairs and draw him a cold water bath. I only wish I had thought to place a shower cap over his neck and a loofa under his wing. I let this untethered fowl bob around a tub big enough to house a half dozen of his friends. I thought about using the hot tub sitting on the deck outside to move things along mor quickly but realized food poisoning written was all over this idea.

I did well getting a dinner for nine on the table turning the small bathroom downstairs into a kitchen annex. Doing dishes proved a bit of a challenge, but again, I told myself, "I love a challenge." (I had to repeat this mantra a lot). I completed putting away the last dry dish by the time I needed to hit the sack to get ready for another day.

This story ends well as our local plumber arrived the following morning to save the sink and our marriage. I may be a slow learner, but this I know: Next year I'll have no reservations about making some at one of our local establishments.

Bergmann Center thanks City of Charlevoix employees

Editor:

The Bergmann Center Board of Directors, clients and staff would like to thank the city of Charlevoix employees for taking part in a "Day of Caring" at the Bergmann Center and our resale shop the morning of Oct. 17: Jim Bishaw, Pat Elliott, Steve Johnson, Bob Jones, Kevin Morrison, Jennifer Nash, Dave Scafidi, Patty Spencley, Donna Stein, Rob Strachel, Joey Vanloo and Peg Wenzel. This hard working team of 12 accomplished a lot on our "To Do" list in a little more than two hours of volunteering their time. Projects completed included the removal of several old locker units and replacing with new locker units, installing an awning at our resale shop, and organizing the donation receiving area at the resale shop.

This is the second year the city employees have participated in a "Day of Caring" at Bergmann Center during the month of October (this was a carry over of the United Way sponsored event that is held annually in September).

We appreciate all the work that was performed in such a short period of time, which really has made a difference to all of us here at Bergmann Center.

City should abandon fireplace project

Editor,

It is indeed a shame that the fireplace controversy is becoming a huge cause of dissent among some in the community of Charlevoix. One thing is perfectly clear and that is the fact that the fireplace structure (regardless who is funding its construction) is a wildly unpopular idea to proceed with. Yes, there will be costs in abandoning the project and a few hurt feelings, but it is clear based on the meetings and the controversy that this idea has generated that the project won't serve the community in a meaningful way. Let's not forget the roughly $6,800 in annual fuel costs that the citizens would be expected to shoulder. The price to abandon a good idea that has gone bad is worth more than the regret of proceeding with a concept that is out of touch with its community. Our beautiful new park has enough "attractions" without the addition of this controversial and unpopular idea.

LOOKING BACK...

The Great Lakes are currently undergoing another of the periodic cycles of low water that have afflicted them since time immemorial. Only this time, allegedly because of global warning which has not allowed snowpack to accumulate for the needed spring run-off, the former cycle of popular lore — "seven years up, seven years down" — has seen mainly "down" since the 1980s. In the mid 80s the lakes rose so high that the city had to construct docks on top of docks in the Round Lake marina so boaters could walk from their boats, over the submerged waterside walkway, and onto the East Park grass. It has been reported that the lakes are within a few inches of their record low of 1964. This is how the Chicago Club boathouse on the northeast shore of Round Lake appeared in January of that year, looking like it had been stranded. Old River, the original outlet from Lake Charlevoix that exits into Round Lake just to the right of the boathouse, had been reduced to an unnavigable trickle.

High school performing arts to present 'A Christmas Carol'

Students in the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts program are putting the finishing touches on their performances as they prepare to present the Charles Dickens classic Christmas tale, "A Christmas Carol' for three performances at 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 7-8, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9, at the Charlevoix High School Auditorium.

Program director Jodi Thompson said this Charles Dickens's classic Christmas tale is told from a new perspective — a young girl's grandfather. Victoria enjoys spending time at her grandfather's prominent London business, but has trouble understanding why her grandfather would give his hard-earned money to the poor. This gives Grandfather the perfect opportunity to tell the story of Ebenezer Scrooge as he recalls it, and a traditional retelling of A Christmas Carol comes to life. As the story goes, of course, revelations brought by visiting his past, present and future with three ghosts persuade Scrooge to turn his life around.

Thompson said the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts would like to thank the Charlevoix Schools Foundation for supporting the production with a grant that helped pay for scripts and royalty fees.

Tickets are $5 for students and $7 for adults and will be available at the door.

Area Toys for Tots campaign in full swing

Large boxes wrapped in Christmas paper and banners with the well-know train engine logo have appeared at businesses and other locations all over the Charlevoix area recently heralding the start of this year's Toys for Tots campaign.

Since 1947, U.S Marines have collected toys at Christmas time and distributed delivered them to less fortunate children.

In the Charlevoix area, the Toys for Tots program is overseen by the Northern Michigan Marine Corps League #690 representing the Marine Corps Reserve.

Boxes for the collection of new, unwrapped toys have been placed at about 30 area businesses and organizations. Organizers suggest contributions such as toys, batteries, wrapping paper, or personal items such as backpacks, books, games, sleeping bags.

Those wishing to contribute to this year's Toys for Tots campaign, should have their donations placed in a collection box by Saturday, Dec. 15.

The toys and other items will be distributed through the Charlevoix Community Christmas program, which will conduct it's distribution day on Friday, Dec. 21.

Collection locations for this year's drive include:

Fox Motors (both locations), St. Marys Cement, Wallgreens, Ace Hardward, Kmart, Dollar Tree, Bay Winds Federal Credit Union, Dollar General, Copy Plus, Glen's Market, Ricks Chiropractic, Harbor Industries, Wojan Aluminum, Oleson's, Holiday Gas Station, Eagles, Clothing Company, Gray Gables, Weather Vane, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Charlevoix City Hall, Charlevoix Elementary School, Charlevoix Middle School, Charlevoix High School, Bolt Design, Charlevoix Elks, Island Airways, and Muscle Menders.

Charlevoix Elementary School will again be conducting a penny drive to help purchase toys as well.

Fox Motors in Charlevoix is again running a promotion to help encourage donations to Toys For Tots. Not only will Fox Motors match each toy donation, but it will also offer those who donate a toy at any Northern Michigan Fox location a voucher good for two free passes to the Great Wolf Lodge Waterpark in Traverse City. Through last year's Fox Motors promotion more than 1,600 toys were donated to Charlevoix Area Children.

For more information about the Toys for Tots program, contact, Russell Bolt, at (231) 547-4855.

Youth committee awards $14,000 in fall grants

COURTESY PHOTO

Charlevoix County Community Foundation Youth Advisory Committee members members (from left) Josh Lange of Boyne Falls High School, Kiana Kuhs of Boyne City High School, advisor Tom Schultz of Charlevoix High School and president Elizabeth Hodgson of Northwest Academy work together during the fall grant-making session.

The Youth Advisory Committee (YAC) of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation has distributed $14,067 in grants to five local nonprofit agencies to fund programs that benefit young people.

Started in 1992, the committee was organized to engage local high school students in philanthropy. Sixteen students, representing Beaver Island, Boyne City, Boyne Falls, Charlevoix, East Jordan and Northwest Academy high schools, comprise the group.

"(The Youth Advisory Committee) is a great place for students to experience philanthropy at its finest. They are able to see the time, treasure and talent that is needed in order to experience healthy community growth," Mishelle Shooks, the foundation's youth committee program associate said.

Organizations submitting proposals for consideration by the committee are also required to appear before the group for a formal interview.

"(The committee) has made me more aware of what happens in our community. I hope that through (the committee) we can inspire youth, and adults to help improve the community and really pay attention to the issues that are around us every day," Elizabeth Hodgson, a Northwest Academy senior and president of the committee, said. The following organization received grants from the committee:

- B.A.S.E.S Teen Center, $2,000 to provide mentors for teens at risk.
- Beyond the Scoreboard, $2,625 for a lecture series promoting healthy relationships.
- Jordan River Arts Council, $1,250 to create a sketchbook library.
- Planned Parenthood, $4,442 to support "Project Smart Choices."
- Raven Hill Discovery Center, $3,750 for a career program for elementary and middle school students.

Kiersten Bielas said enjoys the experience too. A senior at Boyne Falls High School, Kiersten is completing her fourth year as a committee member and sits as the treasurer on the group's executive committee.

"Our Grant Making Day is so important to the community. It is our chance to have a say in providing support for programs and services that kids need. I love having the opportunity to be a part of something bigger than myself," she said.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation is a grassroots charitable organization made up of various funds — all of them established by local donors. Some funds are earmarked for specific causes, and others are open-ended to meet changing needs. The funds are held in permanent endowment, so they can continue to grow and generate income to enhance the quality of life in Charlevoix County, now and for generations to come.

Annual report: Foundation grants exceed $1 million

Sherm Thomas of East Jordan is featured in the current annual report from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, "Deeply Rooted, Growing Stronger." Thomas is part of the Jordan River Action Group, which developed a Jordan River cleanup project that was sponsored in part by a recent grant from the community foundation. This and many other stories are presented in the foundation's 2012 annual report.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation recently released its 2012 annual report, which documents not only the foundation's recent accomplishments, but offers a look at some of the accomplishments of the organization's past 20 years as well. The report, titled "Deeply Rooted, Growing Stronger," presents stories from the foundation's early years as well as financial and grant information and articles highlighting current donors and grantees.

Since its beginning in 1992, more than 7,000 people have supported the foundation, making contributions totaling more than $34.5 million, while building an asset base of more than $24 million.

"We live in a generous community," says Chip Hansen, foundation president. "We're so grateful to everyone who has helped to make Charlevoix County such a special place."

Gifts to the foundation reached the $2 million mark this year, allowing the foundation to distribute more than $1 million in grants and scholarships, pushing the cumulative total of grants and scholarships over the $13.4 million mark.

"Donors, large and small, see the value of the foundation's endowed funds," says Hansen, adding, "making gifts that will continue to give forever."

Every year, earnings from the endowment are used to make grants supporting a wide variety of programs in the arts, education, environmental stewardship, health and wellness, economic development, civic improvement, recreation, and more.

Youth initiatives are also a focus of the foundation's grantmaking, as the Youth Advisory Committee oversees the distribution of the million-dollar Youth Fund. This year, the committee distributed $29,000 in grants to programs that encourage and support the young people of Charlevoix County. That amount, combined with previous years' grants, totals more than $700,000 in funding for area youth.

The year 2012 was a time of renewing the organizational focus and looking toward the future. The board of trustees spent considerable time reviewing the organization's key statements of purpose.

"We wanted to take the time to think intentionally about those things that we believe in collectively as an organization," said Hansen.

Through an interactive process, the board refined the mission statement, created a new vision statement, and developed value statements centering around the values of integrity, stewardship, excellence, respect and leadership. All statements are published on the organization's website as well as in the annual report.

"Our beliefs should reflect our commitment and be at the center of all that we do," said Hansen.

The foundation continued to seek opportunities for community collaboration among nonprofit organizations, businesses, local governments, schools and individuals, hosting roundtable discussions and meeting with key leaders in an ongoing effort to engage with others throughout the county. The organization continues to be accredited by the Council on Foundations' National Standards process, a designation that signifies that the Charlevoix County Community Foundation meets or exceeds a rigorous set of expectations designed specifically to measure the quality of the organization.

"We've had an excellent year," comments Hansen. "Contributions increased when compared to a year ago and the extra support allowed us to distribute hundreds of thousands of dollars to support important local causes."

Hansen praises the foundation's founders.

"When the foundation started 20 years ago, it must have been difficult to imagine where the path would lead," Hansen said. "Today, we can celebrate and appreciate the work of our founders. Their leadership and diligence made all the difference in the world. They showed us the way," he said, "and their good work, combined with the efforts of our current team of trustees, staff, donors, and volunteers encompasses the idea of being deeply rooted and growing stronger."

For a copy of the annual report, "Deeply Rooted, Growing Stronger," contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation office at (231) 536-2440, or online at www.c3f.org.

Sherm Thomas of East Jordan is featured in the current annual report from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, "Deeply Rooted, Growing Stronger." Thomas is part of the Jordan River Action Group, which developed a Jordan River cleanup project that was sponsored in part by a recent grant from the community foundation. This and many other stories are presented in the foundation's 2012 annual report.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation recently released its 2012 annual report, which documents not only the foundation's recent accomplishments, but offers a look at some of the accomplishments of the organization's past 20 years as well. The report, titled "Deeply Rooted, Growing Stronger," presents stories from the foundation's early years as well as financial and grant information and articles highlighting current donors and grantees.

Since its beginning in 1992, more than 7,000 people have supported the foundation, making contributions totaling more than $34.8 million, while building an asset base of more than $24 million.

"We live in a generous community," says Chip Hansen, foundation president. "We're so grateful to everyone who has helped to make Charlevoix County such a special place."

Gifts to the foundation reached the $2 million mark this year, allowing the foundation to distribute more than $1 million in grants and scholarships, pushing the cumulative total of grants and scholarships over the $13.4 million mark.

"Donors large and small see the value of the foundation's endowed funds," says Hansen, adding, "making gifts that will continue to give forever."

Every year, earnings from the endowment are used to make grants supporting a wide variety of programs in the arts, education, environmental stewardship, health and wellness, economic development, civic improvement, recreation, and more.

Youth initiatives are also a focus of the foundation's grant making, as the Youth Advisory Committee oversees the distribution of the million dollar Youth Fund. This year, the committee distributed $29,000 in grants to programs that encourage and support the young people of Charlevoix County. That amount, combined with previous years' grants, totals more than $300,000 in funding for area youth.

The year 2012 was a time of renewing the organizational focus and looking toward the future. The board of trustees spent considerable time reviewing the organization's key statements of purpose.

"We wanted to take the time to think intentionally about those things that we believe in collectively as an organization," said Hansen.

Through an interactive process, the board refined the mission statement, created a new vision statement, and developed value statements centering around the values of integrity, stewardship, excellence, respect and leadership. All statements are published on the organization's website as well as in the annual report.

"Our beliefs should reflect our commitment and be at the center of all that we do," said Hansen.

The foundation continued to seek opportunities for community collaboration among nonprofit organizations, businesses, local governments, schools and individuals, hosting roundtable discussions and meeting with key leaders in an ongoing effort to engage with others throughout the county. The organization continues to be accredited by the Council on Foundations' National Standards process, a designation that signifies that the Charlevoix County Community Foundation meets or exceeds a rigorous set of expectations designed specifically to measure the quality of the organization.

"We've had an excellent year," comments Hansen. "Contributions increased when compared to a year ago and the extra support allowed us to distribute hundreds of thousands of dollars to support important local causes."

Hansen praises the foundation's founders.

"When the foundation started 20 years ago, it must have been difficult to imagine where the path would lead," Hansen said. "Today, we can celebrate and appreciate the work of our founders. Their leadership and diligence made all the difference in the world. They showed us the way," he said, "and their good work, combined with the efforts of our current team of trustees, staff, donors, and volunteers encompasses the idea of being deeply rooted and growing stronger."

involved.

The proposal to build the fireplace had been discussed by council at two prior regular city council meetings: one on July 16 and one on Aug. 6. At the end of the Aug. 6 meeting Winn told the council that a condition of the donor's offer to pay for the bulk of the fireplace came with a condition that it be completed in time for Apple Festival in October. Winn said he was concerned that delaying the matter to the next city council meeting two weeks later might jeopardize the project being completed in time. Hearing that the council decide to set the special joint meeting with the downtown development authority for 6 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 6. The meeting was to begin with a work session in East Park to discuss the fireplace and the possibility of planting more shade trees in the park, and then was to adjourn and reconvene at city hall for the purposes of discussing and possibly deciding the fireplace and shade tree matters.

Those specifics of the meeting were also spelled out in the official meeting posting at city hall.

According to the state's Open Meetings Act. "for a rescheduled regular or a special meeting of a public body, a public notice stating the date, time, and place of the meeting shall be posted at least 18 hours before the meeting."

The act also requires: "A public notice for a public body shall always be posted at its principal office and any other locations considered appropriate by the public body."

Charlevoix City Clerk Carol Ochs said one of her staff members posted the notice of the special meeting on the front door to city hall at 4:20 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 7 — more than 48 hours in advance of the special meeting.

The city charter requires: "The City Clerk also shall post a notice of all special meetings and their purposes in a conspicuous public area of the City Hall at such times su as to comply with the laws of the State, but in no event fewer than twelve (12) hours prior to the time of the meeting."

According Ochs and the official minutes, the meeting took place as posted, however, the downtown development authority did not have enough members present for a quorum and therefore the members present could voice personal opinions, could take no action as a body.

Also contacted Wednesday, Picha said although council members are not involved in posting meeting announcements, she does not believe there was any violation of the Open Meetings Act during the Aug. 9 meeting. She also said she's unsure exactly to which trash ordinance Roth is referring in her petition language.

Although this is the first attempt to, for a recall petition against Vollmer, it's the second in about a month by Roth against Picha. On Oct. 29 Roth filed her first proposed petition with language indicating that Picha should be recalled for "violating the democratic process, mismanagement of city property and her willful support of resolutions against her ward's written and vocal objections."

However, at a Nov. 12 meeting the county election commission, which by law is comprised of probate judge Frederick Mulhauser, Charlevoix County Clerk Cheryl Browe and Charlevoix County Treasurer Marilyn Cousineau, voted unanimously that the language was too vague.

Both of the new petitions are set to be reviewed by that same panel at 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 10 in the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioner's chambers in the county building.

At that meeting, the election commission will again be charged with determining, "whether each reason for the recall stated in the petition is of sufficient clarity to enable the officer whose recall is sought and the electors to identify the course of conduct that is the basis for the recall."

The law does not contemplate the election commission considering or evaluating the language for its accuracy, truthfulness or any other standard beyond "clarity."

Contacted by the Courier Wednesday, Picha, who as mayor pro-tem, presided of the special meeting in question in the absence mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr., said, "I absolutely do not believe there was any violation of Open Meetings Act. She added that it was unclear to her which city ordinance Roth is accusing her of not enforcing.

Roth spoke at the council's Aug. 6 meeting about several issues, one of which was her concern about the city's yard waste pickup program. Roth's contention was that the current policy of allowing residents to simply pile brush and yard clippings at the curb any time they wish to be picked up by city crews on an unscheduled basis is causing the city to look cluttered and is allowing unnecessary amounts of material to wash into the storm sewers. Roth suggested that the city set up a schedule for brush and clippings pickups and only allow material to be placed at the curb for a few days around the scheduled pickup time.

Department of public works director Pat Elliott said that such a schedule could be set up, but with the city's limited manpower, it might be difficult to keep to the schedule without incurring more labor or equipment costs or asking residents to reduce the amount of material they place at the curb, The council seemed satisfied with the system as it is now and took no action of Roth's suggestion.

Picha said she still believes the council's decision to not modify the yard waste pickup program was a sound decision.

Roth also did not respond to an email seeking additional comment before Thursday's press time.

Campbell ran as a write-in candidate against Carlson for the mayor's post in the General Election earlier this month on the sole issue of the community fireplace and lost by a nearly 3-1 margin.

Vollmer did not respond to a telephone message left at his home Wednesday evening before press time Thursday morning.

Mayor expects fireplace committee to be in place soon

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Charlevoix Mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson expects to have a fireplace design steering committee in lined up in time for the Charlevoix City Council's next meeting at 7 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 3.

At the council's last regular meeting on Nov. 16, Carlson asked for community members who would be willing to serve on a committee that will provide input to architect Mark Buday as he works on a crafting a recommendation for the city council to consider as it deliberates the future of a controversial community fireplace project in East Park.

In September, the council voted to put the project on hold in the wake of community member objections that cropped up when construction began.

At the Nov. 16 meeting Carlson said he was looking for people on all sides of the issue who have open minds. They mayor said over the past week and a half he's had about 10 people contact him expressing interest in serving on the committee. Late Wednesday he said he had the field tentatively narrowed down to three people — one person completely opposed to the project, one who doesn't like it in is current design or location, but thinks it might work elsewhere in the park, and a third person who supports the project as originally presented. He said he was not prepared to give the names of the people yet as he had not had final conversations with any of them yet. He did say that he would ask city manager Rob Straebel to serve on the committee to represent the city and John Winn, to represent the anonymous donor. Carlson said neither he nor any member of the council will serve on the committee.

He said Buday will factor the committee's input into his final recommendation to the council, but noted that ultimately it will be up to the council to decide if it will proceed with the project as planned, modify the project, or seek to make the necessary 2/3 votes to repeal its earlier approval of the project.

The mayor said the exact process the committee will follow will be up to Buday, but he will be asking committee members for a one to three month commitment.

Carey also noted that the movie and concert series both benefit from corporate sponsorships.

In his tentative proposals for the 2013-14 budget Carey is showing a reduction of about $7,000 in promotions and events by eliminating Up North Fourth and Flurry Fest expenses, a reduction of about $4,600 in contractual services largely because of reduced costs associated with upkeep of the downtown tree lighting display, which was recently overhauled with all new lights.

Also on the topic of the new downtown tree lights, Carey said he has received many positive comments from the community on the new "warm white" lights that replaced the problematic "cool white" lights earlier this month.

However, he said he's fielded many questions from people looking for an explanation for the perceived gap in the display on the east side of Bridge Street from about Clinton to Mason streets. Carey noted that street-side trees in that area had to be removed years ago when East Park was renovated. Those trees were replaced with smaller trees which never thrived in the shadow of the larger trees on the western edge of East Park and were ultimately removed. Carey said the authority had not previously lit the trees on the park side of the sidewalk, which gives the appearance of a block of missing lights. Carey said he's hopeful that when the busy holiday season is over, the lighting contractor will be available to discuss costs associated with lighting the trees along the park's edge to provide a continuous display along bridge street.

Lady Rayders open season with a win

JV wins 37-33 in overtime play

Four different players scored in double figures as the Rayders cruised past Ellsworth 63-33 in a non-league opener for both teams.

Madeline Boss had 15 points, nine rebounds, three steals and two blocks; Gabby Gray added 12 points and two steals; Sydney Carlson had 11 points three rebounds and three steals, Kelsey Engstrom finished with 10 points and two steals and Kourtney Puttman had five points and eight rebounds and Ellie Way had four points as the Rayders jumped out to an early lead in coach Liz Shaw's varsity girls' basketball coaching debut.

Charlevoix led 23-7 after the opening quarter and pushed their advantage to 34-15 at halftime. After the third quarter, the Rayders were in command, 42-23.

"I was really proud of the girls," Shaw said. "We haven't worked a lot on the press, but I thought we did an outstanding job. We just got after it and we were really scrappy. We played well as a team."

Shaw, who took this past season off as the Rayders varsity volleyball coach because of the birth of her second child, said she was happy to see her team get off to a solid start.

"Right from the start we were strong," Shaw said. "We're basically returning just two starters from last year, so it was a great start. We don't have a lot of game experience, but we're working hard and it's paying off.

"We really don't have a star, but everybody is just picking up their game if not on offense, it's defense. It's great in that regard."

Charlevoix also won the JV game, 37-33, in overtime. For the Rayders, Olivia Storm had a game-high 22 points, while Nicole Peterson added six points and Hannah Zipp was lauded for a strong defensive game.

In other early season action around the Lake Michigan Conference Tuesday, Harbor Springs sophomore center Shallon Grawey scored 12 third quarter points and finished with a game and career-high 20 points and 10 rebounds as she led the Rams to a 69-32 win over Harbor Light Christian in both team's season opener.

In Gaylord, Boyne City fell to Gaylord St. Mary 68-29 in the openers for those teams.

GIRLS BASKETBALL PREVIEW

'Raw' Rayder team will focus on fundementals early

There is no rest for any girls basketball team looking to improve in the Lake Michigan Conference this season.

Several local teams hope to translate fast-tempo strategies with young players into winning records in the North Western Lower Peninsula Class C conference including Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan, Harbor Springs, Kalkaska, Elk Rapids and Traverse City St. Francis.

But, as the coaches point out, every game could be a toss up this season.

"I think we are pretty even across the board...I think it is who comes to play on any given night," says Harbor Springs head coach Jennifer Foley.

In East Jordan, head coast Steve Hines agrees.

"For the last three years or so, Kalkaska and St. Francis have been atop the league. I don't think that will change a whole lot this year, but I think the rest of the teams are pretty equal," Hines said. "Whoever can stay healthy and catch a break now and then, but I expect it to be a very competitive league this year."

Kalkaska finished a deep post-season run last season in losing to McBain in the Class C regional final. Traverse City St. Francis finished a perfect 14-0 to claim the conference title in 2011, before losing their opening district game to Manton.

Charlevoix

First-year varsity coach Liz Shaw has deep Charlevoix basketball roots. As the all-time point leader for girls basketball for the Rayders and a 60-0 junior varsity coach record from 2004-06, the 1995 Charlevoix High School graduate will have looking to continue her success in the school's top girls coahing position.

"One of my personal goals is just to bring the love back to the game," Shaw said.

The Rayders are "raw fundamently" and will be getting back to key fundamentals early in the season, following a 9-14 season last year.

The squad even includes two underclassmen on the team in Madeline Boss, who played on the varsity as a freshman last year and freshman guard Kelsey Engstrom.

Shaw wants to play a full-court, fast-moving pace. But, other than that, she is going into the season with a blank slate.

"We want to worry about what we do on the floor right now and just take whatever comes at us," Shaw said. "I'm sure we will get scouting reports down the road, but right now we are not concerned with what other teams are doing...These girls are just kind of learning and coming together, and I think potentially it is going to be great...I think it will come together."

East Jordan

East Jordan graduated four seniors last year, after putting together a 13-7 regular season in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"I lost a lot last year and we are going to be relatively young this year," said East Jordan coach Hines, who has been with the team four years.

The Red Devils will have senior point guard Valerie Peters back for a fourth season on varsity. Last season, Peters led the team at 13.7 points per game, shot 70 percent from the free throw line and was among the top in each other offensive category.

"(Peters is) coming off a very good season last year. She's a great athlete with a great work ethic," Hines said.

Hines said he is also expecting senior guard Bree Newberry to "pick up where she left off last year" as a large part as a starter this season. In the post, senior Ali Sutton contributed in 2011 as one of the first subs off the bench and will likely move into a starting role this season.

Juniors Paige Poindexter, playing down low, and Holley Carson, at both forward and guard, have also caught Hine's eye early.

"Our tendencies in the past have been to be a pressing team," he said. "We'll continue to do that this year, but I have a much younger team and also a much larger team than last year. It will be interesting. We've always tried to press and we'll try to do that again this year."

Hines said he believes being able to keep turnovers down and controlling the boards will be critical for his team to pickup wins down the stretch.

Boyne City

What the Ramblers lack this season in height they will make up in experience. Seven players will be coming back from last year for Boyne City, four seniors and three juniors with another six new juniors joining the varsity this season.

Returning veteran starters are seniors Jessica Selissen and Mary Myers, who are both coming back for their fourth season, after first playing on a thin varsity roster four years ago. Also back will be 2011 starter junior Rainy McCune.

"We're not a very big team. We are lucky to have forwards," said Boyne City coach Kevin Fitzpatrick, who is in his second year at the helm. "We have a lot of athletic ability and we are not very tall, so we are going to try to get out and play full court basketball."

Because Boyne City had a strong team in volleyball this past season, the girls basketball was not able to get started as early as usual. Compounding the early challenges for Boyne City will be a schedule with seven games before the Christmas holiday break.

"We come out of the gate next week with three games... then another four before Christmas" Fitzpatrick said.

"What we are trying to do is touch on a lot of things to get prepared to play, and then we will come back to dive back into areas we need to in between. It's been kind of a crazy preseason," he said.

The city charter requires "The City Clerk also shall post a notice of all special meetings and their purposes in a conspicuous public area of the City Hall at such times so as to comply with the laws of the State, but in no event fewer than twelve (12) hours prior to the time of the meeting."

According Ochs and the official minutes, the meeting took place as posted, however, the downtown development authority did not have enough members present for a quorum and therefore the members present could voice personal opinions, could take no action as a body.

Also contacted Wednesday Picha said although council members are not involved in posting meeting announcements, she does not believe there was any violation of the Open Meetings Act during the Aug. 9 meeting. She also said she's unsure exactly to which trash ordinance Roth is referring to in her petition language.

Although this is the first attempt to for a recall petition against Vollmer, it's the second in about a month by Roth against Picha. On Oct. 29 Roth filed her first proposed petition with language indicating that Picha should be recalled for "violating the democratic process, mismanagement of city property and her willful support of resolutions against her ward's written and vocal objections."

However, at a Nov. 12 meeting the county election commission, which by law is comprised of probate judge Frederick Mulhauser, Charlevoix County Clerk Cheryl Browe and Charlevoix County Treasurer Marilyn Cousineau, voted unanimously that the language was too vague.

Both of the new petitions are set to be reviewed by that same panel at 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 10 in the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioner's chambers in the county building.

At that meeting, the election commission will again be charged with determining, "whether each reason for the recall stated in the petition is of sufficient clarity to enable the officer whose recall is sought and the electors to identify the course of conduct that is the basis for the recall."

The law does not contemplate the election commission considering or evaluating the language for its accuracy, truthfulness or any other standard beyond "clarity."

Contacted by the Courier Wednesday, Picha, who as mayor pro-tem, presided of the special meeting in question in the absence mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr., said, "I absolutely do not believe there was any violation of Open Meetings Act. She added that it was unclear to her which city ordinance Roth is accusing her of not enforcing.

Roth spoke at the council's Aug. 6 meeting about several issues, one of which was her concern about the city's yard waste pickup program. Roth's contention was that the current policy of allowing residents to simply pile brush and yard clippings at the curb any time they wish to be picked up by city crews on an unscheduled basis is causing the city to look cluttered and is allowing unnecessary amounts of material to wash into the storm sewers. Roth suggested that the city set up a schedule for brush and clippings pickups and only allow material to be placed at the curb for a few days around the scheduled pickup time.

Department of public works director Pat Elliott said that such a schedule could be set up, but with the city's limited manpower, it might be difficult to keep to the schedule without incurring more labor or equipment costs or asking residents to reduce the amount of material they place at the curb. The council seemed satisfied with the system as it is now and took no action at Roth's suggestion.

Picha said she still believes the council's decision to not modify the yard waste pickup program was a sound decision.

Roth also did not respond to an email seeking additional comment before Thursday's press time.

Campbell ran as a write-in candidate against Carlson for the mayor's post in the General Election earlier this month on the sole issue of the community fireplace and lost by a nearly 3-1 margin.

Vollmer did not respond to a telephone message left at his home Wednesday evening before press time Thursday morning.

Mayor expects fireplace committee to be in place soon

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Charlevoix Mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson expects to have a fireplace design steering committee in lined up in time for the Charlevoix City Council's next meeting at 7 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 3.

At the council's last regular meeting on Nov. 16, Carlson asked for community members who would be willing to serve on a committee that will provide input to architect Mark Buday as he works on a crafting a recommendation for the city council to consider as it deliberates the future of a controversial community fireplace project in East Park.

In September, the council voted to put the project on hold in the wake of community member objections that cropped up when construction began.

At the Nov. 16 meeting Carlson said he was looking for people on all sides of the issue who have open minds. They mayor said over the past week and a half he's had about 10 people contact him expressing interest in serving on the committee. Late Wednesday he said he had the field tentatively narrowed down to three people — one person completely opposed to the project, one who doesn't like it in is current design or location, but thinks it might work elsewhere in the park, and a third person who supports the project as originally presented. He said he was not prepared to give the names of the people yet as he had not had final conversations with any of them yet. He did say that he would ask city manager Rob Straebel to serve on the committee to represent the city and John Winn, to represent the anonymous donor. Carlson said neither he nor any member of the council will serve on the committee.

He said Buday will factor the committee's input into his final recommendation to the council, but noted that ultimately it will be up to the council to decide if it will proceed with the project as planned, modify the project, or seek to make the necessary 2/3 votes to repeal its earlier approval of the project.

The mayor said the exact process the committee will follow will be up to Buday, but he will be asking committee members for a one to three month commitment.

Carey also noted that the movie and concert series both benefit from corporate sponsorships.

In his tentative proposals for the 2013-14 budget Carey is showing a reduction of about $7,000 in promotions and events by eliminating Up North Fourth and Flurry Fest expenses, a reduction of about $4,500 in contractual services largely because of reduced costs associated with upkeep of the downtown tree lighting display which was recently overhauled with all new lights.

Also on the topic of the new downtown tree lights, Carey said he has received many positive comments from the community on the new warm white lights that replaced the problematic cool white lights earlier this month.

However he said he's fielded many questions from people looking for an explanation for the perceived gap in the display on the east side of Bridge Street from about Clinton to Mason streets. Carey noted that street-side trees in that area had to be removed years ago when East Park was renovated. Those trees were replaced with smaller trees which never thrived in the shadow of the larger trees on the western edge of East Park and were ultimately removed. Carey said the authority had not previously lit the trees on the park side of the sidewalk, which gives the appearance of a block of missing lights. Carey said he's hopeful that when the busy holiday season is over, the lighting contractor will be available to discuss costs associated with lighting the trees along the park's edge to provide a continuous display along bridge street.

Lady Rayders open season with a win

JV wins 37-33 in overtime play

Four different players scored in double figures as the Rayders cruised past Ellsworth 63-33 in a non-league opener for both teams.

Madeline Boss had 15 points, nine rebounds, three steals and two blocks; Gabby Gray added 12 points and two steals, Sydney Carlson had 11 points three rebounds and three steals, Kelsey Engstrom finished with 10 points and two steals and Kourtney Puttman had five points and eight rebounds and Ellie Way had four points as the Rayders jumped out to an early lead in coach Liz Shaw's varsity girls' basketball coaching debut.

Charlevoix led 23-7 after the opening quarter and pushed their advantage to 34-15 at halftime. After the third quarter, the Rayders were in command, 42-23.

"I was really proud of the girls," Shaw said. "We haven't worked a lot on the press, but I thought we did an outstanding job. We just got after it and we were really scrappy. We played well as a team."

Shaw, who took this past season off as the Rayders varsity volleyball coach because of the birth of her second child, said she was happy to see her team get off to a solid start.

"Right from the start we were strong," Shaw said. "We're basically returning just two starters from last year, so it was a great start. We don't have a lot of game experience, but we're working hard and it's paying off.

"We really don't have a star, but everybody is just picking up their game if not on offense, it's defense. It's great in that regard."

Charlevoix also won the JV game, 37-33, in overtime. For the Rayders, Olivia Storm had a game-high 22 points, while Nicole Peterson added six points and Hannah Zipp was lauded for a strong defensive game.

In other early season action around the Lake Michigan Conference Tuesday, Harbor Springs sophomore center Shallon Grawey scored 12 third quarter points and finished with a game and career-high 20 points and 10 rebounds as she led the Rams to a 69-32 win over Harbor Light Christian in both team's season opener.

In Gaylord, Boyne City fell to Gaylord St. Mary 68-29 in the openers for those teams.

GIRLS BASKETBALL PREVIEW

'Raw' Rayder team will focus on fundementals early

There is no rest for any girls basketball team looking to improve in the Lake Michigan Conference this season.

Several local teams hope to translate fast tempo strategies with young players into winning records in the North Western Lower Peninsula Class C conference including Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan, Harbor Springs, Kalkaska, Elk Rapids and Traverse City St. Francis.

But, as the coaches point out, every game could be a toss up this season.

"I think we are pretty even across the board. I think it is who comes to play on any given night," says Harbor Springs head coach Jennifer Foley.

In East Jordan, head coast Steve Hines agrees.

"For the last three years or so, Kalkaska and St. Francis have been atop the league. I don't think that will change a whole lot this year but I think the rest of the teams are pretty equal," Hines said. "Whoever can stay healthy and catch a break now and then, but I expect it to be a very competitive league this year."

Kalkaska finished a deep post-season run last season in losing to McBain in the Class C regional final. Traverse City St. Francis finished a perfect 14-0 to claim the conference title in 2011, before losing their opening district game to Manton.

Charlevoix

First year varsity coach Liz Shaw has deep Charlevoix basketball roots. As the all-time point leader for girls basketball for the Rayders and a 60-0 junior varsity coach record from 2004-06, the 1995 Charlevoix High School graduate will have looking to continue her success in the school's top girls coaching position.

"One of my personal goals is just to bring the love back to the game," Shaw said.

The Rayders are "raw fundamently" and will be getting back to key fundamentals early in the season, following a 9-14 season last year.

The squad even includes two underclassmen on the team in Madeline Boss, who played on the varsity as a freshman last year and freshman guard Kelsey Engstrom.

Shaw wants to play a full court, fast moving pace. But, other than that, she is going into the season with a blank slate.

"We want to worry about what we do on the floor right now and just take whatever comes at us," Shaw said. "I'm sure we will get scouting reports down the road, but right now we are not concerned with what other teams are doing.. These girls are just kind of learning and coming together, and I think potentially it is going to be great...I think it will come together."

East Jordan

East Jordan graduated four seniors last year, after putting together a 13-7 regular season in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"I lost a lot last year and we are going to be relatively young this year," said East Jordan coach Hines, who has been with the team four years.

The Red Devils will have senior point guard Valerie Peters back for a fourth season on varsity. Last season, Peters led the team at 13.7 points per game, shot 70 percent from the free throw line and was among the top in each other offensive category.

"(Peters is) coming off a very good season last year. She's a great athlete with a great work ethic," Hines said.

Hines said he is also expecting senior guard Bree Newberry to "pick up where she left off last year" as a large part as a starter this season. In the post, senior Ali Sutton contributed in 2011 as one of the first subs off the bench and will likely move into a starting role this season.

Juniors Paige Poindexter playing down low, and Holley Carson, at both forward and guard, have also caught Hine's eye early.

"Our tendencies in the past have been to be a pressure team," he said. "We'll continue to do that this year, but I have a much younger team and also a much larger team than last year. It will be interesting. We've always tried to press and we'll try to do that again this year."

Hines said he believes being able to keep turnovers down and controlling the boards will be critical for his team to pickup wins down the stretch.

Boyne City

What the Ramblers lack this season in height they will make up in experience. Seven players will be coming back from last year for Boyne City, four seniors and three juniors with another six new juniors joining the varsity this season.

Returning veteran starters are seniors Jessica Selisson and Mary Myers, who are both coming back for their fourth season after first playing on a thin varsity roster four years ago. Also back will be 2011 starter junior Rainy McCune.

"We're not a very big team. We are lucky to have forwards," said Boyne City coach Kevin Fitzpatrick, who is in his second year at the helm. "We have a lot of athletic ability and we are not very tall, so we are going to try to get out and play full-court basketball."

Because Boyne City had a strong team in volleyball this past season, the girls basketball was not able to get started as early as usual. Compounding the early challenges for Boyne City will be a schedule with seven games before the Christmas holiday break.

"We come out of the gate next week with three games... then another four before Christmas," Fitzpatrick said.

"What we are trying to do is touch on a lot of things to get prepared to play, and then we will come back to dive back into areas we need to in between. It's been kind of a crazy preseason," he said.

Boss

Pearsall

Three members of the 2012 Charlevoix Rayder varsity volleyball team have earned post-season accolades for their play this past season, and one earned all-state honors. Sophomore outside hitter, Madeline Boss was named to the Class C All State Third Team, while Boss and teammates Karley Pearsall, and Gloria Green earned All-Region honors.

Rayder coach Audra Randall said of Boss, "Madeline is a dynamic player and helped her team from all areas of the court. She is a committed and determined player."

Boss racked up 410 kills for the season. Serving 95 percent with 69 aces. She had 299 digs and 21 blocks.

"She is a game maker and we all very proud of her from the Charlevoix community," Randall added.

Pearsall is a senior captain middle hitter who had 458 kills, with a .286 kill average. She had 287 digs, 43 serving aces and 91percent serving accuracy.

"She is an impact player on court. She was a big blocker for her team, with 109 blocks," Randall said.

Greene a sophomore setter recorded 531 assists, splitting the responsibility for the first two-thirds of the season, then earning the position for the last third of the season.

"She is focused and did a great job as a first year setter," Randall said.

She also had 16 blocks and 14 kills.

Other area players earning All-State honors included Boyne City's Kylie Hicks who was named to the first team in Class C and Petoskey's Megan Tompkins earned a second team All-State nod in Class A.

Despite the strange and rushed preseason, Boyne City still is looking to put together a solid season if it can channel its strengths.

"Our athletic ability allows us to be competitive every night," Fitzpatrick said.

Harbor Springs

The Rams will have plenty of room to grow this season. They graduated seven seniors in 2011 and will have only three returning players.

But, third-year coach Foley believes her team can be strong if they work to improve every game.

"I think our strength is going to be our quickness. We are pretty fast," Foley said. "We have some cross country and track runners — just very athletic players."

Returning will be seniors Katie Barkley at point guard and Mallori Keller down low, as well as junior forward-guard Stephanie Sylvaln. Barkley is the lone veteran starter.

Foley says her inexperienced team will be "looking to run" with an uptempo offense and defense to be successful early.

"We've got to really understand the level of play is a lot higher than the (junior varsity) level," she said. "We need to commit going (the varsity pace) early."

Post players will be Shallon Grawey, Eva Zorhoff, Morgan Lauer and Paige Bayliss for Harbor Springs, while guards Morgan Reeves, Layne Compton, Maddy Savard and Betsey Simons will be helping to push the pace.

Jazz band to play benefit for Sandy victims

MORGAN SHERBURNE
Northern Michigan Review

It's what artists have, so it's what artists do: donate their skills for the benefit of others.

And it's what the Pine River Jazz Band is doing. The new jazz band has a gig Saturday, Dec. 1, to help raise money and non-perishable food items for victims of Hurricane Sandy.

"When you're a musician or artist, it's what you have to give, and you give it gladly," said vocalist Maggie Dickson, of Charlevoix.

For other members of the band, Claire and Tom Rasmussen, the relief efforts hit a little closer to home. Their daughter, who lives in New York City, went through the hurricane, and while her home was not damaged, her workplace flooded, as well as her boyfriend's family's home on Long Island.

"She had about a decade of experiences in one week," Tom said.

The Pine River Jazz Band, which former Northwest Academy band director Gary Stutzman organized nearly two years ago, is comprised of alto saxophone Margie Guyot, tenor saxophone Claire Rasmussen, saxophone Gail Baldridge, bass player Tom Rasmussen, current Northwest band director Dave Pugh, pianist Brenda Pugh, trumpet Justin Pugh, trumpet Ev Wujcik, second trumpet Deb Stutzman, second trombone Gary Stutzman, lead trombone Aaron Schmidt and vocalist Maggie Dickson.

"We like to be together, we like to travel together, play together, spend time together," said Gary Stutzman. "We are all donating our time and talents to help make the Hurricane Relief concert and dance a success."

The fundraiser, dance and concert will take place from 7-10 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Entry fee is a non-perishable food item or any donation you would like to make to the Red Cross fund for hurricane relief.

Kusina added to council members facing recall

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor,

It is now a clean sweep.

All three Charlevoix City Council members who are currently eligible under state law to face a recall election have had recall proceedings initiated against them.

On Friday, 1st Ward resident Jeffrey Porter filed proposed recall petition language with the Charlevoix County Clerk's office against 1st Ward council member Dennis Kusina.

Kusina joins 2nd Ward councilmember Bryan Vollmer and 3rd Ward councilmember Jill Picha who had similar paperwork filed against them recently.

The remaining members of the council, Lyle Gennett, Shane Cole, and Greg Stevens, along with the mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr. can not face recall right now because all four of them were re-elected to their respective posts in November's General Election. State law prohibits filing a recall petition against an elected official in the first or last six months of his or her term.

The recall efforts stem from a controversial proposal to build a community fireplace in East Park. More specifically, all three proposed recall petitions cite the special Aug. 9 city council meeting at which the council approved the fireplace project as the reason for seeking the recall. In their proposed petition language, Porter, 2nd Ward resident Gabe Campbell and 3rd Ward resident Julee Roth, all claim that the council (more specifically, Kusina, Vollmer and Picha) violated the Michigan Open Meetings Act when they met to discuss and ultimately approve the fireplace project. In the proposed petition against Picha, Roth cites an additional reason which reads, "(Picha) has failed to ensure compliance with the Charlevoix Ordinance of 2007 requiring the timely collection of debris and other trash since June 2012."

Kusina

The special city council meeting in question, which took place at 6 p.m. on Aug. 9, was called at the end of a regular meeting on Aug. 6.

City clerk Carol Ochs said a deputy clerk posted the notice of the special meeting on the door at the main entrance to city hall at 4:20 p.m. on Aug. 7 — more than 48 hours before the special meeting took place.

The Open Meeting Act's requirement for posting notices of special reads, "... for a rescheduled regular or a special meeting of a public body, a public notice stating the date, time, and place of the meeting shall be posted at least 18 hours before the meeting."

Ochs provided the Courier with a copy of the posting, the main body of which reads, "City of Charlevoix Mayor Norman L. Carlson, Jr. has called a Special Joint Meeting of the Charlevoix City Council and the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority for Thursday, August 9, 2012 at 6:00 p.m. The meeting will start at East Park Plaza B for a work session and then move to Council Chambers, City Hall, 210 State Street for the purpose of deliberation and decisions. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the possible addition and location of shade trees and a fireplace to East Park."

Ultimately, the downtown development authority board did not have enough members present at the meeting to constitute a quorum, and therefore they did convene an official meeting of that body, Ochs, who was present at the meeting, said.

Ochs said, and the meeting minutes reflect that, the council discussed both the fireplace and the shade tree proposals in the park and then the meeting was adjourned to city hall where it reconvened at about 6:30 p.m. where further discussion took place on the two matters and votes were taken on both.

Asked by the Courier last week to elaborate more specifically on how he believes the council members violated the Open Meetings Act, Campbell said he believes the meeting was in violation because it was advertised (posted)

Cinema III under new ownership

Charlevoix natives jump into theater business, promise upgrades soon

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Downtown Charlevoix got something of an early Christmas present Friday, Nov. 30, when a husband and wife team with deep roots in the community purchased the Charlevoix Cinema III movie theater on Antrim Street.

Luther and Mary Kurtz bought the cinema from Charlevoix State Bank which has owned and operated the business since mid-July 2012 when its prior long-time owner Bill Supernaw defaulted on his mortgage after struggling for years with declining business.

At that time, Charlevoix State Bank President and Chief Executive Officer Mike Hinkle told the Courier that although the bank was not interested in

Man charged with knife assault, auto thefts, nudity

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

A Charlevoix man is facing multiple criminal charges after police say he went on a rampage that allegedly included attacking a man with a knife, stealing two automobiles, leading police on a high-speed chase and public nudity.

Andrew Patrick Kur, 25, is facing charges of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder, two counts of unlawful driving away of an automobile, third degree fleeing and eluding police, malicious destruction of police or fire department property, and two counts of indecent exposure. The assault charge is the most serious among the charges, carrying a possible penalty of up to 10 years in prison.

The charges stem from a string of events that police say took place on Nov 23, in and around Charlevoix.

According to police affidavits in the court files relating to the incident, Kur allegedly asked the first victim for a ride from a residence north of Charlevoix to East Jordan, but was instead driven to his residence on U.S 31 south of town. According to police, the victim reported that Kur was seated behind him in the vehicle and, upon arrival at the U.S. 31

Artists in Action series to feature sweet holiday treat

The Charlevoix Public Library continues its Artists in Action series from 3-6 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 13, with a special appearance Jack McCreadie making a Candy Land Village.

McCreadie has historically created his special holiday candy land village at home, and then transported it to the elementary school for viewing.

This year, the kids will get a treat as they will be able to watch him build the village in the library.

The library's Artist in Action series highlights local talents by providing a venue for them to work and for patrons to watch and ask questions. The artists set up a work area in the front lobby of the library to share their craftsmanship with the public and to answer questions.

Additional upcoming artists include: Jan. 17, Paul Vermeesch, finishing his LEGO replica of the library; and Feb. 21, Janel Anderson will be working with her pastels.

Township lands park improvement grant

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Charlevoix Township officials learned this week that the township has been awarded a $44,300 grant from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources to help pay for playground and other improvements at the township's Shanahan Field.

According to a news release from State Rep. Greg McMaster's office, the grant was one of 19 the state recently awarded to communities across the state totalling $735,100. The money comes from the sales of Recreation Passports, which replaced the resident motor vehicle permit window stickers for state park entrance in 2010.

"The Recreation Passport program was a vast improvement over the window sticker program that not only has provided necessary funding to operate and maintain Michigan's state parks, but is also giving back to local communities," said MacMaster, R-Kewadin. "The township recreation project will increase the fun and safety for residents and visitors at Shanahan Field."

The Recreation Passport Grant Program saw 82 grant applications seeking about $2.9 million in funding.

The annual state resident Recreation Passport costs $10 ($5 for motorcycles) when renewing a license plate through the Secretary of State and provides Michigan motorists access to state parks, recreation areas, state forest campgrounds, nonmotorized state trailhead parking and state boat launches.

The work for which the grant will help pay includes replacing the aging and non-compliant play structure and playground equipment with universally-accessible pieces, as well as accessible surfacing and walkways and eventually possibly for a fountain-like water feature.

The work is just one part of a multi-phase plan for improvements at Shanahan Field, township officials said.

This fall crews completed work on a new baseball field on the site a former field that had fallen into disrepair and was often unusable because of poor drainage. Crews also completed upgrades to the parking area at the park.

Charlevoix Township Supervisor Chuck Center said the work is likely to take place in 2013, but more information on exactly how much the project will cost and other details will be available following the township board's next meeting set for 7 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 10.

Center noted that the township has also applied for another, larger grant that would help pay for further improvements to the park including improvements to the picnic pavilion near the playground, and the creation of a hiking trail in the park.

Charlevoix Township officials learned this week that the township has been awarded a grant that will help pay to improve the current playground and pavilion amenities, shown above, at Shanahan Field.

City to study public safety model for emergency services

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Charlevoix officials will soon begin a study of the feasibility of moving its fire, ambulance and police department operations into a public safety department.

At its regular semi-monthly meeting Monday, the Charlevoix City Council approved a request from city manager Rob Straebel to allocate $4,000 in the 2013-14 fiscal year budget to commission a study on the feasibility of combining the city's emergency services under a public safety model.

Straebel

Straebel said now is a good time to take a look at the possibility because current fire chief Paul Ivan is expected to retire in the next year or two.

In his memo to the council on the matter, Straebel wrote, "Many municipalities are moving to a public safety department whereby there is one department head overseeing both police and fire/EMS. Generally, the most opportune time to make such organizational changes is through attrition. Because chief Ivan will be retiring in the next 1-2 years, staff thinks this is a great time to research and possibly implement changes to our public safety departments. Ultimately there may be potential savings to the city that would need to be balanced with no reductions in services levels for police and fire/EMS."

The closest city to use a public safety department is Petoskey, which has used the system for about 20 years. In Petoskey all of the city's police officers are also cross-trained as firefighters and all also hold emergency medical technician certification. (Unlike Charlevoix, Petoskey does not run an ambulance service.)

Straebel said he has spoken with both Ivan and police chief Gerard Doan and both are in favor of a feasibility study.

The council ultimately voted unanimously in favor of Straebel's request, but not before councilmember Jill Picha expressed concerns that the model wouldn't work well for Charlevoix because of its ambulance service and the highly technical nature of the EMS crews' work.

Straebel noted that there are varying levels of integration that the city could pursue and it goes no further than one administrator overseeing both departments.

In other business, the council approved a measure to apply for five grants from the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians. Three of the grants are for the city and two are on behalf of the Third Day Outreach and Ministry.

The city grant requests include:

— $10,000 to upgrade playground equipment in Rotary Park on Carpenter Avenue. If approved, the Charlevoix Rotary Club would also be contributing $5,000 to the project.

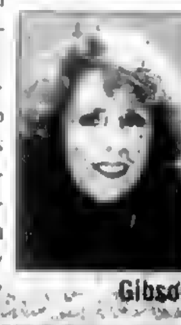
— $15,000 for preliminary engineering work to study the feasibility of constructing an underpass under U.S. 31 (Petoskey Avenue in the area of the city golf course to eliminate the hazards golfers, pedestrians, cyclists and others face in crossing busy U.S. 31. The plans would be used to pursue further grant funding and to initiate talks about the project with the Michigan Department of Transportation.

— $15,175 for new terrain park features at Mount McSauba. Straebel said young people are among the largest groups who use Mount McSauba and the terrain park is very popular among that age group. He said adding more features could draw more users and more revenue.

On behalf of Third Day, grant requests included:

— $20,000 for operations for Third Day's fledgling Joppa House transitional home for women and children.

— $20,000 for Third Day's original ministry, which includes a food pantry, drop-in center and other services.



Gibson

Responding to questions from resident Shirley Gibson about why the city is applying for grants for a religious organization such as Third Day, mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson explained that the tribe requires that all grant requests come from governmental bodies. He said that the city does nothing more than ask for the money on the organization's behalf and pass the money on if the grant is awarded. He noted that the city has done so before in the past for faith-based organizations such as Colorado Challenge.

Carlson

Councilmember Greg Stevens, who is married to Third Day pastor the Rev. Ginger Stevens abstained from discussions and voting on the grant requests.

Stevens

The council also approved a motion to purchase seven new LED streetlights for the newly reconstructed section of Clinton Street between State and Bridge streets at a cost of $24,062. The lights are expected to be installed sometime in the next 4-6 weeks.

The council also approved a measure to again apply for the city to be named a Tree City USA. If approved, it would be the 21st year the city has received the distinction.

Ellsworth woman injured in crash

An Ellsworth woman was injured in a one-vehicle traffic crash on Six Mile Lake Road near Hersha Lane in Charlevoix County's South Arm Township Sunday, Dec. 2.

In a news release about the crash, Charlevoix County Sheriff Don Schneider identified the injured woman as the driver, Nicole Alexandria Bethell, 29. Deputies said Bethell sustained several injuries and had to be air lifted by North Flight EMS to Munson Medical Center in Traverse City. Authorities said her injuries did not appear to be life-threatening.

According to sheriff's officials, the crash happened as Bethell was driving her 2010 Honda CR-V on Six Mile Lake Road. Deputies said a witness to the accident reported that Bethell's vehicle was over in the witness' lane of travel and almost struck the witness' vehicle then went around the curve and struck several trees.

Sheriff's officials said further investigation revealed that Bethell went off the shoulder of the roadway, struck a tree head-on, then spun around and struck another tree. Bethell was ejected from the vehicle during the crash, according to the report.

Sheriff's officials said Bethell was not wearing a seatbelt and speed and alcohol are believed to be factors in the crash, which is still under investigation.

Charlevoix County Sheriff's office was assisted at the scene by East Jordan EMS, Banks Township Fire Department and North Flight EMS.

OPINIONS yours & ours

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Legislators should know their science before making laws

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Right wing radio and some Republican politicians have been critical of a reporter who asked Sen. Marco Rubio of Florida, "How old do you think the earth is?" It is worthwhile to pay particular attention to exactly what the question was. The reporter did not ask Senator Rubio how old the earth was. The question was, "How old do you THINK the earth is?" It was a request for an opinion, not for an authoritative answer.

Senator Rubio's first words were, "I am not a scientist." Do only scientists have opinions about the age of the earth? The senator continued with a more complete answer, including that there are several theories about the earth's age, and that all of them should be taught.

The reporter was, of course, trying to find out if the senator was among those who hold as an opinion, that the world is about 6,000 years old, according to the summing of the biblical begats. The Bible lists the ages and offspring of the Biblical fathers all the way back to Adam. A bishop Usher added them all up a couple of centuries ago and concluded that the earth was created in October of 4004 B.C.

It seems to me that what Senator Rubio was saying wasn't that he is not a scientist, rather that he knew very little about science. And if we expect our congressmen to make good and careful decisions about matters scientific, that they should be at least as well educated about it as those students who must pass a standardized science test before they can graduate from public high schools. Is it possible that we might develop a standardized science test that must be passed by those seeking legislative office before they can be on the ballot?

I am not a particular fan of standardized testing being used to summarize the success of a whole school or school system, but such tests are often a fine indicator of the knowledge in the head of a particular student. I would even be willing to offer a few questions that might be part of such an examination. For example: How old is the earth and what specific evidence do you use to come to that conclusion? This is not a request for an opinion; it requires real information.

A question about how long human beings have been present on earth, with a similar request for evidence might be appropriate, as would a question about whether humans and dinosaurs were ever present on earth at the same time.

Those questions have good science answers. They are not religious questions, and no one's religious freedom would be at risk by answering them.

The quality of our laws as they impinge in science might be improved by the application of such a test. It would certainly have more questions than those few above, but they would all be science questions, not requests for an opinion.

On a lighter note.

The East Park duck flock is still hanging around. They have, on occasion, been confused and frightened by the establishment of the Lion's "tree farm," and the Flurry Fest activities pushed them temporarily out onto Round Lake. But most mornings there are anywhere from three or four to as many as nine individuals waiting for a few handfuls of corn kernels. On several occasions, they have followed me across East Antrim Street and Belvedere Avenue, all the way to the 7-Eleven parking lot, where they eat the remains of the corn kernels and then fly out onto Round Lake. I have not yet solved the problem of how they will carry my newspaper. Maybe some sort of harness? Training continues.

to the editor

Why a fireplace?

Editor:

1. The mayor was quoted in the Nov. 16 Courier that Mark Buday's time should not be wasted if the fireplace decision was to be reversed. The Nov. 19 council meeting was to begin by asking the council if there is any desire among them to reverse their approval of the fireplace project. That did not happen. Why?

2. A gentleman during this council meeting asked, "Why a fireplace." I was then asked the same question while circulating the "No fireplace" petition. No one answered his question, "Why?" Many of us wonder "Why a fireplace."

3. The steering committee is to be comprised of around five people to discuss options for the fireplace. Will "totally close minded people" FOR as well as AGAINST be eliminated? Is it right to eliminate close minded people against if that is your majority of citizens?

4. There was only one person that spoke in favor of the fireplace during the two very crowded council meetings. The two forums at the library to brainstorm ideas for the fireplace found people willing to be cooperative and offer ideas as requested of them but basically those present did not want a fireplace. The meeting was clearly designed for supporters. None attended. Why?

There are many valid reasons to oppose the fireplace. Each person opposed has his own reason(s): pollution, energy waste, cost, maintenance, liability, setting a precedence, obstructing the park and lake view, changing the visual focal point of the park to a fireplace, it's not a functional structure, it offers no warmth, limited seating (gathering) space, gathering places already exist, losing the tree, etc.

Aren't we wasting Mark Buday's time as well as the mayor's, the council's, and most importantly the citizens of Charlevoix? The majority says "no fireplace." This majority includes citizens of Charlevoix, township citizens, summer residents and visitors. Why a steering committee? Why a fireplace?

Bridging our past with our future

LOOKING BACK...

Martha Ayers came to Charlevoix in the mid 1890s and immediately made an impact with both her eccentricity and unusually shrewd business acumen. Her tall, spacious house stood at the southwest corner of the State Street/West Hurlbut Street intersection overlooking the downtown area. Martha scandalized many of the locals by sharing the house with a man who was purportedly not her husband, but she refused to tell anyone whether he was or wasn't. He never said a word. She built the tallest structure on Bridge Street on the east side of the 300 block about where the middle of East Park is today. The three-story building housed a number of businesses over the years, including a billiards parlor, dance hall, and eating establishments. Charlevoix's famed builder-in-stone Earl Young snapped this photo of the southern half of the facade, where a window proclaims the availability of a delicacy of the local cuisine — "Electrocuted Hot Dogs."

This image is one of 850 in the Charlevoix Historical Society's most recent DVD titled "Charlevoix, Michigan — A Pictorial Journey through 16 Decades." The disc is available at the Society's Harsha House Museum, 103 State St. next to the Congregational Church, from 1-4 p.m. Tuesday -Saturday. Back Porch concert set for Saturday, Dec. 8

The Back Porch Coffeehouse concert will take place on Saturday, Dec. 8 at the Charlevoix Senior Center building.

The music will begin at 7 p.m. The format is new this year for the group holiday music event: There will be a central microphone and speakers. Musicians and poets are welcome to take turns performing or leading songs and poems. Offerings can be holiday-related, or whatever the presenter would like to share. This format will continue throughout the evening, with plenty of "jam" time toward the end.

The event is intended for all ages. Crafts will be available for children to enjoy as well. Light refreshments will be served including soup, cookies, tea, coffee and juice, at no additional charge.

Donations at the door are appreciated. All donations will go toward future scheduled performers. Suggested donations are $5 per person and $10 per family. Cookie donations are always welcome. A donation jar will also be available for a fund to purchase a sound system for the Coffeehouse Series. The Charlevoix Senior Center is located on the corner of Carpenter and Norwood streets on the south side of Charlevoix.

Charlevoix board contributes to Imagination Library

Members of the Charlevoix library board of directors made a special holiday gift this year. Instead of giving each other gifts, board members pooled their funds to make a donation to United Way's Imagination Library project.

The Imagination Library provides free books to children from birth to age 5 in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. The project was started in August, and more than 700 children are now receiving age-appropriate books each month.

"Our board felt that supporting the Imagination Library was a wonderful way to give the gift of reading to young children and more useful than giving each other token holiday gifts," said Val Meyerson, library director.

"United Way is grateful to the library board for this thoughtful donation," said Martha Lancaster, executive director of Char-Em United Way. "The Imagination Library is quickly outpacing our budget and we are seeking other funding partners. We hope other boards, women's organizations, service clubs, book clubs and similar groups will make holiday gifts to the program."

More information about the Imagination Library project can be found at http://www.charemunitedway.org/activities/dolly-partons-imagination-library.

Local gallery features unique holiday decor

Charlevoix's Bier Art Gallery shows off for the season

SHERI MCWHIRTER-O'DONNELL
Northern Michigan Review

Artwork available at Bier Art Gallery near Charlevoix offers an opportunity to decorate your Christmas tree like few others — with unique, handmade holiday ornaments.

"We send a letter out to our artists and they send us anything they come up with," said Anna Farrell, an artist in residence at the gallery and adjacent studio.

More than 60 artists share their work at the Bier Art Gallery, several miles south of Charlevoix along U.S. 31. Most of those artists are from Michigan, specifically Northern Michigan.

Favorites among the holiday shoppers?

"We sell a lot of Mom's ornaments. People bring up eight or 10 at a time," said Tyler Bier, artist in residence and son of artist Tami Bier, who owns the shop and studio with her husband, Ray Bier.

Every available display space inside the gallery is used to show off creative and often adorable holiday images. The old schoolhouse makes for great art gallery space with its high ceilings and wooden floors, the historic building filled with both small and large pieces of artwork.

This time of year the place is stacked with blown glass flowers, wheel-thrown baubles, fused glass pieces, classic blown glass witch balls, tiny clay violins, regal nativity characters made from clay, along with the endearing holiday frogs often made by Tami Bier. All of this and more can be found at the gallery for the Christmas season, when holiday shoppers come to inspect this season's offerings.

"They really like it. They come in for unique ornaments for their trees," Tyler Bier said.

Charlevoix artist Meredith Krell is among the locals who contribute their holiday ornament designs with shoppers at Bier Art Gallery. This is her second year participating, she said.

"When they ask a 2-D artist — I'm a printer and a painter — how do you make a 3-D ornament? But I found these little canvasses that I could paint," Krell said.

And paint tiny canvasses, she did.

Dozens of small Krell paintings are delicately hanging from a Christmas tree inside the gallery, while others are displayed on equally small easels. It made for a fun project, Krell said.

"And I think I'll keep doing it," she said.

The Christmas ornament show and other holiday decorations will remain on display and available for purchase through New Year's.

The Bier Art Gallery is at 17959 Ferry Road, at the intersection of Ferry Road and U.S. 31, about six miles south of Charlevoix. Call (231) 547-2288 for more information, or visit www.biergallery.com online.

Ellsworth celebrates the holidays Dec. 12

ELLSWORTH — The seventh annual Ellsworth Wooden Shoe Festival, an evening of free food, fun and entertainment, will take place from 6-7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 12, at the Banks Township hall.

The festival kicks off with the lighting of the community tree by Donna Heeres, Banks Township Citizen of the Year, followed by Christmas carols accompanied by a brass band. A free pizza dinner will be topped off with Christmas cookies and a trip to the hot chocolate bar. Kids can decorate their own holiday mug to take home and everyone can take part in old-fashioned games at each table. Twister Joe will be on hand to make festive holiday balloon hats and Cindy Lou Who will read "The Grinch Who Stole Christmas."

Also on hand will be author Jeff Kessler of the "Victor the Friendly Vampire" series.

Flurry Fest 2012 chocolate champs announced

Edgewater Bistro's white chocolate treat earned 51 percent of the popular vote to capture the title of Flurry Fest 2012's "Hot Chocolate Champ." With nearly 300 tasters casting their votes, the event saw one of its highest attendance counts since it began in 2007.

Edgewater Bistro was selected by 152 voters. Whitney's edged Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant for second place by a single vote, 53-52. First-year participant Johan's Café finished a respectable fourth with 40 votes.

"We know this is a very busy weekend for our local eateries and cannot thank our four participating restaurants enough for their support of this year's contest," commented Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority executive director Keith Carey.

Carey noted that Grey Gables, which has won the contest for the past five years was not able to participate in this year's event because the staff was too busy with scheduled weekend commitments.

The event also featured an appearance by one of Santa's reindeer, festive music provided by Tuba Christmas and the Petoskey Steel Drum Band and showcased the balance and balloon tying expertise of Neil Sauter, aka the Michigan Stiltwalker.

Flurry Fest was supported by contributions from Bingham Insurance Services, Charlevoix Ace Hardware, Landscape Logic, and Way Transportation.

OBITUARY

Ralph Graf, 88

Ralph M. Graf age 88, passed away on Nov. 21, 2012 in Lakeland, Fla. of natural causes. Born in Manitowoc, Wis. and raised on his family's farm in Eaton County; and, raised his family in Charlevoix Michigan.

Beloved husband of 64 years of Dorothy (Larson), loving father of Joy Maddox, Jan (Rod Betts), David (Deborah), Peter (Sonya), and Thomas (Peggy). Doting grandfather of Emily, Austin, and Alexander.

Retired from management of Medusa Portland Cement in Charlevoix in 1991. Attended Northwestern College at Watertown, Wis. and technical courses throughout his career.

A quiet, hard-working man of values, Ralph lives on in the ways he shaped his children and those who knew and loved him.

Police department now has prescription disposal box

Those looking to discard their prescription and over-the-counter drugs will now have a permanent drug drop-off box at the Charlevoix Police Department.

Over the last few years, the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, in coordination with many partners, developed a prescription and over-the-counter drug disposal program. Organization officials said the program's drop-off boxes offer a year-round, secure, convenient and environmentally sound option for the disposal of unused and unwanted household medications. Additionally, this is the only program in Northern Michigan that can take back controlled substances such as prescribed pills.

This expansion will make it easier and more convenient for residents to properly dispose of medications as there are now more options available for residents to use. The Charlevoix Police Department is joining 13 other departments already participating with 16 permanent drop boxes available throughout Northern Michigan.

"Northern Michigan has a huge problem with prescription drug abuse. A study by The White House Office of National Drug Control Policy found that an astounding 12 percent of teens in Michigan use prescription drugs recreationally, much higher than the 7 percent national average," said Gerard Doan, Charlevoix police chief. "Our department is committed to working to address the problem of drugs in our community and protect the health and safety of our residents."

More permanent boxes will also become operational in the coming weeks in Grand Traverse County and Mackinac County.

"Through this program, we are reducing avoidable poisoning of both children and adults; preventing intentional misuse of unwanted prescription drugs, especially by teenagers, and protecting our water resources, fish and other aquatic species in Northern Michigan," said Jennifer McKay, policy specialist at Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council.

Residents can drop off unwanted medications at any time throughout the year. All medications are secured according to the law enforcement agency's evidence protocols until they are destroyed in accordance with state and federal laws.

For more information about the pharmaceutical collection boxes, visit www.watershedcouncil.org or call (231) 347-1181.

- •Raven Hill Discovery Center ($5,000) for construction of the Evolving Technologies building

Grants were distributed from a wide variety of funds held at the community foundation.

"This grant cycle, we saw an emerging trend. We live in an interesting era, where environmental organizations are more effective when they are connected with technology. With these grant awards, they will be enabled to market their programs and services with an enhanced web presence, using new videography tools and skills, social media networks and technology equipment," said Maureen Radke, foundation program officer. "In this way, environmental programs can bolster economic development efforts, capitalizing on and marketing our beautiful northern Michigan natural resources in a positive fashion," Radke added.

A charitable organization dedicated to improving and enriching life in the area, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation accepts gifts from individuals, families, businesses, and civic groups and manages them as permanent endowments. Every year, a portion of the investment income is used to support programs in education, the environment, the arts, human services, health and wellness, youth activities, community development, and various civic projects. The principal of the endowment continues to grow, providing perpetual charitable capital to benefit Charlevoix County's residents and nonprofit organization.

Since it was founded in 1992, the foundation's net assets have grown to more than $24 million, and grants and scholarships totaling more than $13 million have been distributed for the common good.

The foundation welcomes inquiries and grant requests. The next deadline for submitting a grant request is March 1, 2013. For more information about grantmaking opportunities, or the community foundation, call (231) 536-2440, or visit the foundation's website at www.e3f.org.

Women's giving circle taking grant applications

The Hestia Women's Giving Circle is welcoming applications for its seventh grant cycle.

Applications are due Feb. 1, and grants will be announced in May and awarded in mid-June. Organizations applying for grants must have 501(c)3 nonprofit status or be a school or government agency, or have a fiscal agent with a nonprofit status.

The Hestia Women's Giving Circle is a donor-advised fund of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation which also assists the circle in grant making and distribution.

Potential applicants should contact Maureen Radke at (231) 536-2440 prior to filling out an application.

The Hestia Women's Giving Circle was formed in 2005 by women in Emmet and Charlevoix counties. Its mission is to promote the economic self-sufficiency and well-being of women and girls in Emmet and Charlevoix counties. The circle is named for the Greek goddess Hestia, who expresses her love and concern for others through thoughtful acts. The Giving Circle provides an opportunity for women to pool their donations to make a significant impact and to educate themselves about issues facing women and girls in our community.

Earlier this year, the Hestia Women's Giving Circle awarded $33,000 in support of local programs that serve women and girls. Grant awards are: Third Day Fellowship & Outreach for written materials for the Joppa House Women's Transitional Home; First Tee of Boyne Highlands life skills program; YMCA of Northern Michigan for summer day camp scholarships; Ottawa Elementary School for a self-esteem, health and leadership program fon girls; North Country Kids for childcare scholarships for low-income women; Child and Family Services of Northwest Michigan for pregnancy counseling services; Raven Hill Discovery Center for the Got-See Girls science and math program; Women's Resource Center for educational scholarships for low-income women, and Planned Parenthood of Western and Northern Michigan for access to reproductive health care for low-income women.

The Hestia Women's Giving Circle is actively seeking new members. The annual membership fee is $1,000, which can be shared by two women. All of the funds received are distributed directly to local organizations serving women and girls. The Giving Circle is especially interested in supporting smaller organizations that may have limited access to other sources of funding.

as a joint meeting of the council and the downtown development authority board, yet only the council ultimately officially conducted a meeting.

Responding to the same question in an email, Roth responded, "In simple terms, the City Council did not do what they were supposed to do. Jill is and was elected Mayor Pro Tem and did not do her job correctly. There's still a fireplace up and ready to go. There's a laundry list of problems with that fireplace."

Asked Wednesday how he believes the council violated the act, Porter said he believes, based on discussions he has had with legal counsel, that the meeting notice should have been advertised in a newspaper in advance of the meeting.

Last week Picha denied that the meeting violated the Open Meetings Act and Vollmer did not respond to a message left at his home seeking comment.

Contacted by the Courier on Wednesday, Kusina also denied that the Aug. 9 meeting violated the Open Meetings Act.

"We didn't do anything wrong. I feel it's an unjust charge," Kusina said. We didn't violate the Open Meetings Act. There was nothing under the table."

Kusina added: "I'm deeply saddened it's come to this. I think it's dividing this community. After the last election, I thought it was behind us, but obviously, they are just going to push on. This is a free country, and that's their right."

The proposal to build a gas-fired community fireplace in East Park was first brought to the council at a meeting in early July when city resident John Winn proffered the idea on behalf of an anonymous donor who wished to pay for the bulk of its construction. Winn said he suggested the fireplace idea to the donor after seeing a similar one in downtown Holland.

A chorus of community member objections to the project began to rise up when crews began construction site preparations in mid-August. Some of the major objections have included the cost of natural gas, that the fireplace and its chimney will block the view of Round Lake and East Park, the processes the council followed in approving the project, and others.

In response to the complaints, in mid-September the council voted to put the project on hold to allow time to see if a compromise can be worked out among the council those who oppose the project and the donor.

The next step in the recall process will be a meeting of the Charlevoix County Election Commission set for 1:30 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 10, in the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners' meeting room at the county building. At that time the election commission which, by law, is comprised of probate judge Frederick Mulhauser, Charlevoix County Clerk Cheryl Browe and Charlevoix County Treasurer Marilyn Cousineau, will consider the proposed language of all three recall petitions. At that meeting, the election commission will be charged with determining, "whether each reason for the recall stated in the petition is of sufficient clarity to enable the officer whose recall is sought and the electors to identify the course of conduct that is the basis for the recall."

Mayor names members to fireplace steering committee in Monday meeting

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

At the end of Monday's regular semi-monthly Charlevoix City Council meeting, Charlevoix Mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr. named five members to a steering committee that will help provide input regarding options for a contentious proposal to build a community fireplace in East Park.

Carlson appointed the committee at the suggestion of Mark Buday, an architect in the community who was heavily involved in designing the buildings in East Park and who has volunteered his services to assist in looking for possible design and/or location alternatives in the park that might be more agreeable to members of the community who are opposed to the project.

When seeking candidates for the committee, Carlson said he was seeking one person against the project, one person in favor of it and one who had no firm opinion on the matter to join Charlevoix City Manager Rob Straebel and John Winn, who represents the fireplace donor, on the committee.

Carlson has appointed to the committee: Judi Bingham who is against the fireplace, Becky Doan, who is in favor of the project and Pat Miller who has no position on the matter. At Monday's meeting, Carlson had originally named Bob Jess Jr., but he has since replaced Jess with Miller citing concerns about Jess not living in the city.

The first meeting of the committee had not yet been set as of the Courier's Thursday morning press time, but when they do take place, they will be posted in advance on the city's website and will be open to the public.

At Monday's council meeting, Carlson reminded audience members that the committee's discussions will serve as informational to Buday who will ultimately bring an advisory recommendation back to the council for it to consider in making its final decision about the fireplace.

Carlson also asked people refrain from "ganging-up" on or pressuring the committee members.

Board recommends approval for Camp Sea Gull grant funds

Hayes Township officials have cleared a big hurdle in their efforts to buy a former girls summer camp on the shores of Lake Charlevoix to be used as a township park.

Hayes Township Clerk Marlene Golovich said that at its annual meeting Wednesday the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Trust Fund Board voted unanimously to recommend approval for a $3.375 million grant application from the township to purchase the former Camp Sea-Gull property on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road.

The owners closed the camp in 2010 and put the 20-acre parcel, which includes 1,700 feet of Lake Charlevoix shoreline, up for sale.

Golovich said the township has already secured $650,000 in matching funds in the form of $500,000 in township funds set aside over the years for a park purchase, and contributions and pledges from private donors.

The proposal to the township to buy the camp property for a park has not been without opposition. A group of property owners came forward as the proposal and grant application have been discussed opposing the effort saying the park is not needed — given its proximity to Young State Park, and that the township should be spending its money on other things. Township officials supporting the purchase have called the purchase a "once in a lifetime opportunity" for the township.

Golovich said the opposition to the project did not come up in the trust fund board's deliberations of the project's merits.

The money in the trust fund comes from the proceeds from mineral rights leases on state-owned land and may only be used for the purchase or improvement of public recreational facilities. The recommendation will now go to the state legislature for its consideration. If approved, it will then go to the governor for his signature or veto.

If eventually approved and purchased, the township will have to find additional funds for the amenities it envisions for the park. Those amenities include:

— Township officials envision a launch for small boats, such as fishing and small recreational boats.

— The township wishes to preserve as many of the existing cabins and buildings to be rented out for overnight and short term visitors. At some time in the future, rustic camping may be discussed.

— The township plans to use the year-round residence on the property to house an individual who will be present to manage the property. This is practiced in many other parks. The use of the residence would be a substantial part of the resident manager's compensation. This would be implemented as soon as possible after acquisition of the land.

being in the theater operations business, bank officials felt it was important to keep the business open while looking for a buyer because of the important role that it played in the mix of downtown entertainment amenities.

Hinkle told the Courier Wednesday that bank officials had been actively marketing the property to people that would buy it and operate it as a theater for those same reasons.

Hinkle said he is very happy with how the processes ended up.

"We have been energetically trying to market it as a theater, but we were having trouble finding people who were willing to take a business risk," Hinkle said. "We marketed to Luther and Mary and they stepped up."

The Kurtzes live in Harbor Springs, but both grew up in Charlevoix. Luther is perhaps best known around Northern Michigan for his business Skydive Harbor Springs, based at the Harbor Springs Airport. He started that business in 2002 and it has since grown to a total of six skydive locations around the country with a reservation call center based in Harbor Springs.

Luther Kurtz told the Courier Wednesday that he and Mary are very excited about their new business venture. He said they have hired Terry Osterhout to manage the theater. Luther said Osterhout is a perfect fit for the theater, noting that he worked in a movie store in New York City and worked in theaters in Los Angeles.

"He loves movies with a passion," Kurtz said. "He'll be able to talk to customers about just about every movie that's out there."

Kurtz said there are some immediate upgrades planned for the theater including digital projectors and new seats. He said if all goes according to plan, the digital projectors will be installed as early as Dec. 17. If that date doesn't work out, it will likely take place in mid-January. He said the new seats are expected to be installed later this month as well. He said patrons should check the theater's website at charlevoixmovies.com for possible schedule changes that will be caused by the upgrades.

He said after the initial upgrades are completed, they will be looking at additional upgrades in the future. He said Osterhout will also likely be running special events and promotions which might include classic Sunday afternoon matinees or special showings of children's movies in the afternoons, just to name a few possibilities.

Kurtz expressed his gratitude to members of the Charlevoix community who have been supportive of their new venture.

"Everyone that I've run into has expressed a very nice welcome back to being in Charlevoix. I want to say thanks for the encouragement."

Kurtz noted that he and Mary will be living in Charlevoix over the winter as their new business gets going.

location, Kur allegedly began flailing in the back seat. The victim told police he got out of the car, thinking Kur had punched him.

"(Kur) put his fists up as if readying to fight ... (and then) suddenly ran away screaming," the affidavit reads.

Police said the victim reported after Kur ran away he found a drywall knife in the vehicle where the Kur had been seated.

"He (the victim) then realized that he had been stabbed in the shoulder by the defendant; that the knife blade was approximately six inches long with serrated teeth with a curved blade and a sharp point," the affidavit reads.

According to police affidavits, Kur allegedly showed up at home on Barnard Road in Norwood Township naked and claiming that someone was trying to kill him and asking for help. Police reported that they followed Kur's bare footprints to the location in the driveway where a missing F-250 Ford pickup truck had been parked.

Police said they followed the vehicle tracks in the fresh snow and located the truck parked on Terrace Street in the City of Charlevoix. Police said they then followed bare footprint tracks to a location on Hampton Street from which a second vehicle, a 2000 Chevy Tahoe had been taken. As they were investigating the incidents, police learned that a Michigan State Police trooper John Janicki had located and was in pursuit the stolen Tahoe. According to the affidavit, police said speeds during the chase exceeded 90 mph.

"Officers cornered the defendant (Kur) when he ran off the road and spun out in a bank parking lot; that the defendant then accelerated towards a Michigan State Police Vehicle driven by Trooper Janicki; that Trooper Janicki deliberately used his vehicle to block the defendant from escaping and struck the front of the stolen vehicle; that the defendant then continued to accelerate into the patrol car in an effort to escape causing further damage to the patrol car," the affidavit reads.

Police said they were then able to stop Kur and that he then surrendered and they arrested him.

Kur's bond has been set at $50,000 cash or surety and he remained locked up in the Charlevoix County Jail as of late Wednesday. Chris Turkelson has been appointed to represent Kur.

A 90th District Court preliminary examination for Kur had originally been set for 2:30 p.m. on Tuesday Dec. 11, however at a pre-trial hearing on Tuesday court officials signed an order to have the Michigan Center for Forensic Psychiatry evaluate Kur's his competency to stand trial. Further court proceedings will likely be put on hold until those evaluations are completed.

City OKs inaugural New Year's 'Bridge Drop' event

CELEBRATION

At its regular semi-monthly meeting Monday, the Charlevoix City Council approved a series of measures that will allow a new event to take place in downtown Charlevoix on New Year's Eve.

The event has been dubbed "Charlevoix Bridge Drop – A New Year's Celebration" by its creators Rick Randall and Amanda Wilkin.

Randall and Wilkin said they are planning the event to be a weekend-long celebration of the New Year, intended to draw people from near and far to the community to enjoy its many offerings.

Although plans were still evolving at press time Thursday, Randall and Wilkin said the event will feature the sale of wristbands for $5 that will give purchasers special privileges at participating locations around town during the weekend. Proceeds from the wristband sales will be used to offset costs of the event and to create a pool of seed money for next year's event.

Although the organizers are still looking to add to their list of participating businesses, the wristbands will get purchasers special discounts at area merchants and other benefits such as a free group ski lesson at Mount McSauba on New Year's Eve, a deck party at the Weathervane Restaurant and a beach party at the Charlevoix Community Pool on Dec. 30. Organizers said the Charlevoix Elks Club will be open to the public and serve as a center of events for the weekend where wristbands can be purchased. Other plans are in the works for safe teen-oriented events to take place on New Year's Eve.

Like the ball drop in Times Square, the event will culminate at 11:59 p.m. on Dec. 31 when the drawbridge will be raised and then lowered to coincide with the arrival of the new year at midnight. The deck at the Weathervane will have a DJ and serve as the center of the ceremonies leading up to midnight, Wilkin said.

Once the bridge is back down, organizers are planning a short, but noisy parade across the bridge. The parade will include emergency vehicles with lights and sirens going and a float carry members of the Charlevoix schools class of 2013. Parade participants will carry sparklers and plans are in the works for some kind military-style ceremonial firearms salute. The organizers have also asked that the city's fire siren atop city hall be activated at midnight.

The council ultimately unanimously approved measures waiving city ordinance restrictions to use Bridge Park after midnight, allow music coming from the Weathervane after 11 p.m., allow non-emergency use of police and fire vehicle sirens and the siren atop city hall, allow the gun salute, and to allow the free group ski lessons at Mount McSauba.

Wilkin said the whole idea of the event is to draw people to the downtown and create excitement about the event and the community. She said more details about the event will be forthcoming as they are firmed up. Wilkin also noted that she and Randall are hopeful that this year's event serves as a catalyst to bigger and better events in coming years, that eventually an organization might be willing to take on.

For more information on the event, call Wilkin at (231) 547-2101.

Wrestlers eager to hit the mats under new coaching

The Charlevoix Rayder wrestling team will bring 12 wrestlers to the mats this season under a new coaching staff.

Among this year's team members is new senior Alex Brown, who, according to first year wrestling coach Mike Hinkle, could make a run at a state title.

"We are looking forward to an excellent year," Hinkle said. "Conditioning has been a priority, and will be throughout the season as we look to develop an aggressive style requiring stamina and mental toughness.

"Several team members attended a kick-off training camp hosted by Traverse City West during the first weekend of the season."

Juniors Jake Novotny, Austin Cesaro and Jake Sharrow return.

Charlevoix also welcomes first-year wrestler Andrew Mitchell, a junior. Sharrow is working his way back into the team after an injury cost him much of last season.

Sophomores Sam Hovie, Devin Largent and Spencer Bruce all return to the Rayders lineup. Largent and Bruce both add good size to the mix. Sophomore Lucas VonLau rejoins the Rayders after focusing on cross country the last ccouple seasons. Freshmen include Lucas Prevo, Mick Hinkle and Justin Adkins.

"We have about a 50-50 squad. About half have a lot of wrestling experience and half are just starting out," Hinkle said.

Hinkle

The Rayders first meet was set for Thursday, Dec. 6., a home tri-meet with Onaway and Mancelona.

Hinkle said he and assistant coach Tim DeYoung took over the high school wrestling program at the last minute when former coach Craig Golovich recently determined that his work commitments would not allow him to devote the necessary time to the team.

Hinkle said he and DeYoung have been overseeing the wrestling programs at Charlevoix Middle School and Charlevoix Elementary School for several years and agreed to step in to lead the high school team. Both will continue to over see the lower level programs this year, as well. Hinkle said Golovich will also continue to assist with the program when he can.

Hinkle said the coaching staff is not only excited about this year's prospects but also the long-term prospects for the program. He said plans are in the works for next off-season to coordinate programs such as camps, pre-season conditions, and cooperative conditioning programs with other sports programs at the school.

"We have a great group of kids and they have been working very hard," Hinkle said.

Rayder football coach resigns

Joe Pruchnicki steps down after one season at the helm

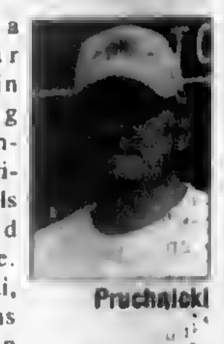
STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Charlevoix High School is back where it was a year ago — in the market for a varsity football coach — after Joe Pruchnicki tendered his letter of resignation from the position last week.

Charlevoix High School athletic director Brian Certa said Pruchnicki cited nothing more than "personal reasons," when he contacted Certa to tender his resignation last week.

The Charlevoix School Board hired Pruchnicki in early June after Lowell High School defensive coordinator Jason Katt decided not to take the football coaching (and a teaching position) for which he had been approved in April. At the time Katt said he chose not to take the positions over concerns about job security in light of the district's continuing budget struggles.

Pruchnicki, 65, retired from coaching and teaching at Flat Rock High School in June.



Pruchnicki

He had a 40-year career in coaching and teaching at various schools around the state. Pruchnicki, who owns a cabin on Starvation Lake near Mancelona, inherited a Charlevoix team from coach Don Jess, who resigned in December 2011 following a nine-year stint during which he guided the Rayders to a 41-44 record, including a 4-5 mark in 2011.

Under Pruchnicki, the Rayders posted a 1-8 record for their 2012 season.

Certa said the search for a new coach likely won't get started in earnest until after the Christmas break. Certa met with players on Wednesday to deliver the news of Pruchnicki's departure and to discuss plans for a tentative off-season weight room schedule.

Rayders fall to Frankfort in Crossover Challenge

KINGSLEY — Frankfort outscored the Charlevoix 23-4 in the fourth quarter to pull away for a 71-35 victory during Friday's (Nov. 30) second game of the Northwest Conference-Lake Michigan Conference Challenge Friday.

The Rayders, 1-1 overall, cut the deficit to five points early in the fourth, but simply ran out of gas coach Liz Shaw said.

"We just couldn't carry the intensity over for all four quarters," Shaw said. "They (Frankfort) shot quite a few free throws and made them in the fourth and they simply outplayed us in the last quarter.

"I thought the game was much closer than what the score showed."

Keelan Kelly led the Panthers with 12 points, while Shelby Packard added 10 points.

For Charlevoix, Madeline Boss had 20 points and four rebounds, while Sydney Carlson added five points, four steals, four rebounds and four assists and Katie Hybl had six points and three steals.

Also, Paige Ager had five steals and four rebounds and Courtney Putman added three assists and three steals.

Frankfort also won the JV game, 46-25.

The Rayders will open conference play on Friday at home against Harbor Springs. Tip-off is at 7 p.m.

Also for Harbor, Mallori Keller added six points, while Eva Zoerhof had four points and 13 rebounds. Layne Compton finished with four points for the Rams, while Shallon Grawey had eight rebounds.

For Buckley, 1-1, Montana Jayska had six points, while Bailee Kuhn, Hannah Baldinger and Ciera Cabanting all had four points apiece.

Harbor Springs also won the JV game, 44-17, over Buckley. For Harbor, Claire Fleming had eight points, while Abby Zmikly added seven points.

Glen Lake 56, East Jordan 28

Jordan Peplinski scored 17 points and Scotlyn Brengman added 15 as Maple City Glen Lake topped East Jordan Saturday in a Northwest Conference-Lake Michigan Conference Crossover Challenge contest Saturday.

Also for the Lakers, 2-1, Brengman added 12 rebounds, four blocks, four steals and three assists, while Maddy Brown had 10 rebounds. Glen Lake led at the half, 32-11, then outscored East Jordan, 0-2, 17-8 in the fourth quarter.

Boyne City 67, Mesick 31

A solid start and a solid finish for the Boyne City girls' basketball team Saturday.

Boyne's full-court pressure limited Mesick to just a free throw in the first quarter as they built a 16-1 advantage en route to earning their first win of the season in the Northwest Conference-Lake Michigan Conference Crossover at Kingsley High School.

Leading 38-17 at halftime, the Ramblers, 1-1 overall, went on to outscore Mesick 29-14 in the second half.

"Our full-court pressure was really effective and got us off to a nice start early," Boyne City coach Kevin Fitzpatrick said. "In the second half, we played excellent half court defense."

For the Ramblers, Rainy McCune had 17 points and was 11-of-12 from the free throw line, while Mary Myers added 13 points and Jenny Selissen added 10 points.

"All 10 girls who played all scored for us," Fitzpatrick said.

For Mesick, Clara Jurik finished with 15 points.

Boyne City also won the JV game, 42-31. For Boyne, Hannah Hoth had 21 points and Ali Johnson added seven.

In other area girls basketball action, Lauren Rogers had a game-high 19 points, while Allie Hines added 12 points as Central Lake topped Ellsworth 51-30 Friday, Nov. 30 in a non-league contest.

The Trojans, 2-0 overall, led 10-7 after the first quarter and stretched their advantage to 31-11 at halftime. At the end of the third quarter, Central Lake was in front, 41-19.

"Kudos to Central Lake," Ellsworth coach Brenda Stevens said.

"They have a solid team and they played well. We just have to step it up because they (Central Lake) are in our district."

For Ellsworth, 0-2, Tara Essenberg had 10 points, while Kari Steenwyk added eight points and Taryn Rozema and Kendra Warner each added six.

Central Lake also won the JV game, 36-29. For Ellsworth, Maddie Steenwyk had nine points and Amanda Veenstra, six points.

Rayder look for veterans to emerge as leaders

BRANDON HUBBARD
Northern Michigan Review

M. CHRIS LEESE/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

The Rayders boast probably the oldest team in the Lake Michigan Conference this season with nine seniors, a potentially good situation for third-year coach Adam Wood.

Returning players for Charlevoix include point guard Tanner Catt, guard Charlie Hamilton, and 6-foot-4 forward Sawyer Russell, all who all saw significant playing time last season.

Staying true to tradition, Charlevoix is going to looking to keep pressing.

"One of the staple in the past 16-years or so has been to run the press initiated by (former coach Keith) Haske. So, that is still going to be a big part of our play, but with some of the height that we have coming up — we'll have to play to our strengths," Wood said.

Junior Zach Hankins at 6-foot-8 is a potential starter and could be a pillar, literally, for the team.

After losing two senior guards and leaders to graduation, Wood expects his team to do some assimilating into its new roles.

"I think it will be intriguing for us to see who is going to fill that pure leadership role for us this year," he said. "We are looking at a couple guys, but that is going to be the key and meshing the new bodies with a couple new seniors coming in (transfers) to see where people fit."

Woods says last year the Lake Michigan Conference was as tough as he has ever seen it, but he thinks the young talent coming up in the conference makes for an interesting league again this year.

"I think it is going to be quite a battle," he said.

Here's a look at other area Lake Michigan Conference teams:

Boyne City

On court expectations could not be higher for a young Boyne City boys basketball team this season.

Coming off a district title in 2011 and finishing 17-7 (its best since 1998) the team wants nothing more than to build on its success last year. There is also buzz surrounding the program after 6-foot-4 sophomore forward Corey Redman verbally committed to a scholarship to play basketball at Central Michigan University over the summer — a rare occurrence for a Northern Michigan underclassman.

Redman finished third offensively on the team last season with 12 points per game and five rebounds. He looks to settle into a bigger role this season to help lead the Ramblers in a competitive Lake Michigan Conference that sent eight players on to college ball last year.

Veteran coach Nick Redman, Corey's father, says despite the interest surrounding his 16-year-old son, his team has plenty of room for growth this season.

"We're very young, probably the youngest we've ever been," Nick Redman said.

Five sophomores are up on the varsity this year, but it also happens to be a very talented young group — including returning starters Redman and Ryan Carson, who are both about 6-foot-5. Junior guard Bradley Fouchia and sophomore Gaylord-transfer Cole Butler are also going to be contributors, Redman said, as well as several other young athletes.

Carson, who will be coming off an injury, led the Ramblers last season in rebounds with about 11 points and 7 boards per night.

Boyne City will be looking to come to play in man-to-man and force turnovers into a breakaway offense.

"We're pretty athletic this year, even though we are young," Redman said. "I've got a great nucleus of young kids who are putting the time in, that are good and want to be good."

Redman said team goals include bring a district title home again and keep getting better.

Harbor Springs

The Rams will be returning with senior height and experience to improve on a 8-14 season, (5-9 in the conference) last year.

Head coach Geoff Morse is returning for his fourth season during his second stint as a Ram and his 11th overall.

Morse briefly pondered stepping down after last season when his son graduated and move on to play baseball at Concordia University — not wanting to miss any of those games.

"I got away from it for a week or so and decided to come back," Morse says.

He returns one of the most veteran teams in the league.

"It is probably more height then we have had in a long, long time, and we returned three starters, which is a nice thing," he said.

Big men 6-foot-6 Neal Zoerhoff and 6-foot-4 Spencer Kloss are returning down low as seniors. Senior three-point threat Peter Lauer is back at guard.

Morse said his 14-player team is deep in the mid-six foot range making them tough on the boards.

"Probably our strongest asset will be our post play, because with Neal and Spencer in the post last year they came along really nice — they are probably better yet this year," he said. "Plus, we have a couple kids (transitioning) to from the junior varsity."

Morse expects senior Nick Vandermus and junior David Walker to be key contributors battling underneath the hoop.

The Rams want to develop a senior-level defensive intensity early in the early season and come to work everyday to compete in an extremely evenly match league.

"We are going to have to be solid defensively to be successful," he said. "That is our biggest focus right now."

East Jordan

The Red Devils will be looking to mature this season and turn some heads in the underdog rule this year in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"We're going to be young, real young," said seventh-year East Jordan head coach Darrin Weber.

The Red Devils saw eight seniors graduate season, leaving them with two seniors this year and only one returning starter.

Seniors guard Matt Bolser and forward Joe Manville will be expected to step into leadership roles. Junior point guard Noah Bacchus, a Lake Michigan Conference honorable mention as a sophomore, will be the lone returning starter.

"(Bacchus) is our point guard. He runs the show for us," Weber said. "He has quickness, knows the game and understands the game real well. We are kind of going to go as be goes. I think he has a good chance to be one of the best guards in the league."

East Jordan will be looking to run a setup-style offense, though they feel they have to speed to compete up and down the court.

"We'll get up and down the floor a little bit," Weber said, not wanting to go into too much detail about his teams strategy.

Keys to early success for East Jordan will be aggression on the boards to make up for lack of height and controlling the defensive pace.

Community Christmas Project marks 30 years

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Bev Boss can't explain it, but after setting a record for the number of children it served last year, the clients signed up to receive assistance from the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project appears to have dropped off slightly so far for this year.

Boss, the longtime chairwoman of annual community effort to collect and distribute toys, clothing and other basic needs to needy families in the Charlevoix Public Schools District, said as of Wednesday the numbers of people the program has registered to serve for this year appears to be off pace from last year's bumper crop of need.

The numbers Wednesday were 171 families, which includes 374 children. That's down from last year's record numbers which included 250 families including 460 children. Those numbers were with a little more than a week to go before this year's distribution day, set for Friday, Dec. 21 at Bethany Lutheran Church, on U.S. 31 just north of the city limits.

This year marks the program's 30th anniversary.

Boss said for sure there will be more who trickle in over the next week and there are always people who show up on the day of the event. She's expecting the numbers to end up around 200 families and 400 children.

She's just hopeful there won't be any last minute rush of clients.

Boss said she can't really explain the dip in the number. She said while it appears the economy may have improved some, and perhaps a few former clients have moved away, she thinks some people may have simply found other ways to get by, such as more than one family moving in together under one roof. Another factor she suspects may have played a role, is that many major retailers offered easy layaway this

Petition language approved

Recall petition sponsors may now start collecting signatures

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Charlevoix County Clerk Cheryl Browe (left) listens as probate court judge Frederic Mulhauser speaks during the county election commission hearing Monday.

The residents behind an effort to recall three Charlevoix City Council members cleared the first hurdle in their effort Monday, when the Charlevoix County Election Commission approved the language that will be circulated on the petitions for signatures.

On Monday the election commission found that the language for all three petitions met the standard for clarity required by state election law. The law requires that "each reason for the recall stated in the petition is of sufficient clarity to enable the officer whose recall is sought and the electors to identify the course of conduct that is the basis for the recall."

The petitions seek to recall council members Jill Picha, Bryan Vollmer and Dennis Kusina for their participation in a special meeting on Aug. 9 at which the council approved construction of a community fireplace in East Park. The petition language claims that the meeting took place in violation of the state's Open Meetings Act. The petition against Picha also contains language about failing to enforce a city ordinance regarding the collection of debris from the city's streets.

By law, the election commission is comprised of probate judge Frederick Mulhauser, Charlevoix County Clerk Cheryl Browe and Charlevoix County Treasurer Marilyn Cousineau. Mulhauser, the chair of the commission, said Cousineau was not available for Monday's meeting, but noted that the meeting could take place as planned, because he and Browe constituted a quorum of the election commission.

Although all three council members and those seeking to recall them, along with a handful of others attended Monday's election commission meeting, the meeting lasted less than 10 minutes. The only comments made by audience members came from an attorney who said she was prepared to argue in favor of the petition language, but didn't need to given Browe's and Mulhauser's comments that they planned to approve it, and a comment from Picha who said she agrees that the language is clear but also said that the statements are not true.

Mulhauser reminded the audience that the truth of the petition allegations were for the voters, not for the election commission to decide.

Julee Roth is the sponsor for the petition against Picha, Jeffrey Porter is the sponsor for the petition against Kusina and Gabe Campbell is the sponsor for the petition against Vollmer.

The recall effort centers around a proposal brought to the city council in July by city resident John Winn on behalf of an anonymous donor who wished to pay for the construction of a gas-fired outdoor community fireplace to be built in East Park's Plaza B (located on the east side of Bridge Street between Clinton and Mason streets. As originally designed, the fireplace was to be a roughly a cube, about seven feet in each dimension, topped by a chimney that would taper to four feet for a total structure height of about 20 feet. Construction of the fireplace was approved at a special meeting on Aug. 9 and objections to the project among community members began to arise when work began at the site, including removal of a tree. After hearing numerous complaints and objections to the project at two packed house city council meetings, the council voted in September to stop construction and put the project on hold until spring to allow time to see if a compromise in the fireplace's location and/or design might be worked out.

Picha

Kusina

Charlevoix Mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr. recently appointed a steering committee to work with architect Mark Buday to develop a recommendation on options for the fire place for the council to consider. That committee has not yet met.

The remaining members of the city council, Lyle Gennett, Greg Stevens and Shane Cole, along with Carlson were all re-elected to their respective posts in November and therefore cannot be recalled right now. State law does not allow an elected official to be recalled in the first or last six months of his or her term.

In a release sent to the Courier Tuesday, Roth wrote, "The people of Charlevoix have been speaking loud and clear and the mayor, who claims to be personally responsible for the voices on the council, just isn't listening. I do not want to have to go through with the recall. But this council is lying to us, the taxpayers and citizens of Charlevoix. We have proof. Even John Winn, who

Gaylord office involved in weather project

DETROIT (AP) — National Weather Service offices for Detroit, Grand Rapids and Gaylord are participating in a multi-state project aimed at improving winter hazard messages.

The weather service's Detroit/Pontiac office said Wednesday that the demonstration project won't change or affect current messages. But a website will allow people to see proposed alternative messages and offer their thoughts about possible new wordings..

The demonstration is expected to run through March 31. It aims to address possible confusion with terms such as "watch," "warning" and "advisory."

The National Weather Service says the project involves more than two dozen offices across the country.

Michigan sees increase in flu activity this winter

METRO CREATIVE SERVICE

Flu season is under way and the Health Department of Northwest Michigan has received reports of a significant increase in flu activity statewide. The increase has prompted health officials to re-issue an urgent message to the public: get your flu shot and make sure school-age children get theirs too

Suzette Daly, Family and Community Health supervisor for the health department, emphasizes that flu shots are especially important for children. Last week, the local health department in Calhoun County, was informed of a sudden increase in upper respiratory illness, resulting in an absenteeism rate of as much as 30 percent among school-age children in one district.

"Kids should be in school, learning, rather than at home trying to recover from the flu," Daly said. "Those who haven't received a flu shot are far more likely to come down with the virus, and spread it to others."

She added that flu viruses spread quickly in schools and day care settings, where students and adults are in close contact, and getting a flu shot before the virus reaches our area can save days missed from school and work, and prevent holiday illness.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention currently lists Michigan's flu activity as local, meaning there is evidence of the flu, lab confirmed cases and some outbreaks in schools, hospitals and residential institutions.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan stocks vaccine, and offers appointments for flu shots and other vaccines at its offices in Bellaire, Mancelona, Charlevoix, Petoskey/Harbor Springs and Gaylord. The cost for seasonal flu vaccination is $25. Medicaid and Medicare are accepted, as well as private insurance, or clients may pay by cash or check. Call the Health Department at (800) 432-4121 to schedule an appointment.

Flu vaccinations offer protection throughout the entire flu season, which can last as late as May. There are two types of flu vaccines: the flu shot, approved for use in people 6 months of age and older, including healthy people, people with chronic medical conditions and pregnant women; and the nasal spray flu vaccine, approved for use in healthy people from 2-49 years of age who are not pregnant. Babies 6 months of age and under are at risk for the flu, but cannot be given the vaccine; the best defense is parents, siblings, grandparents and day care providers being immunized.

Sheriff warns of text message scam

Charlevoix County Sheriff Don Schneider is warning citizens of the latest scam circulating, involving cell phone text messages and popular chain retail stores such as Target, Walmart, Best Buy, etc.

According to a sheriff's office news release, residents may receive a text message on their cell phone claiming to be in response to an entry into a drawing at one of many stores such as Target, Walmart, Best Buy, etc. To claim the prize, the message indicates you need to go to a website and enter the enclosed personal identification number (PIN) in the text message within 24 hours. Upon investigating, after recipients enter the PIN they are either directed to another web page or sent another text message requesting some contact information, such as full name, address and birthday.

It is at this point the scam starts, as this personal information is used to gain access to other accounts. Authorities said this is a nationwide scam that has been reported numerous times to the Better Business bureau and FBI. The sheriff advises not to respond to the messages and delete them.

Serious injuries avoided in U.S. 31 accident

NORWOOD TOWNSHIP — Three people escaped more serious injuries in a two-vehicle accident on U.S. 31 South near Schmidt Road on Sunday.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department press release, 83-year-old Cora Stoppert of Kewadin lost control of her vehicle and spun into oncoming traffic, colliding with a vehicle carrying Brian and Nancy Gutowski, both 47 and from Petoskey, at approximately 4:14 p.m.

Stoppert was checked by Charlevoix City Ambluance and transported to the Charlevoix Area Hospital for evaluation. Everyone involved in the accident was wearing a seat belt.

Personal property tax issue could impact local schools

JAMIE BAUMANN
Northern Michigan Review

As Michigan's lame-duck session winds down, action could be taken on a plan to repeal the state's personal property tax law.

That issue has not only caught the attention of business owners, but education leaders. Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District superintendent, Rick Diebold, said the issue could impact local school districts.

The personal property tax is currently levied on a variety of physical resources that businesses use to operate, specifically those items that aren't permanently affixed to the ground — such as machinery or other equipment. This type of tax raises more than $1 billion in Michigan.

Doing away with this tax would eliminate a projected $470 million in revenue for local units such as counties, municipalities and schools.

Additionally, depending on how state legislators resolve the issue, the proposed personal property tax legislation could ultimately affect individual tax millages.

According to Diebold, if voters have approved school bond dollar amounts and the school district millages will not generate the same dollar amounts based on a loss of personal property tax income, the millage rates may need to be raised to achieve the already-committed dollar amounts.

"For example, if in the new resolution to the personal property tax issue, schools are reimbursed 80 percent of the revenues lost, the result could be that individual millage rates would need to be raised to meet obligations already committed by taxpayers," Diebold said.

Diebold explained that in essence, what the new Michigan business tax has done is relieve the property tax burden on large corporations, with an unintended consequence of raising that burden on small businesses. Now, the legislature is trying to figure out how to relieve the tax burden on small businesses without too much loss of revenue to the municipal, county, school and other local governmental agencies that depend on that revenue to provide services that the public expects.

One possible result of relieving the burden on the small businesses, depending on how the legislature solves the dilemma, is an increase in individual tax millages to make up the difference in revenues produced after the new tax structure and the reimbursement allocations are decided.

Over time, the legislature will have moved the tax burden from the large corporations, to the small businesses and then possibly to the individual taxpayer, in order to improve the business climate in Michigan.

Lawmakers are scheduled to go on holiday break on Friday.

Electric vehicle charging station now in service

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

It's no secret that many people enjoy coming to Charlevoix.

As of this week, visitors to the city's downtown who drive electric cars, can now also get a charge out of the experience.

Earlier this year, as part of improvements made to the White Parking Lot (located on the south side of Clinton Street just east of Harbor Health and Fitness), the city installed an electric vehicle charging station where folks who drive vehicles, such as a Chevy Volt can charge their vehicles while they patronize businesses in the downtown.

The move, Charlevoix City Manger Rob Straebel said, makes Charlevoix one of the first cities in Northern Michigan to offer such an amenity. He said the closest such units he knows of are in Traverse City.

At its Dec. 3 regular semi-monthly meeting, the Charlevoix City Council took the final step to make the station operational — approving the acceptance of credit card payment at the device.

For now, the cost to charge a vehicle at the station will be set at $3 per hour, with city electric department engineer Don Swem noting that it typically takes about four hours to completely charge an electric car. Swem said figuring a cost of electricity of about 75 cents per hour and if the unit is used for about 10 hours per week, it ought to pay for itself in about 10 years.

Straebel said the city council decided to keep the charging station as part of the White Lot improvements even though a grant request to help pay for some of its costs was not successful.

"Overall, I think the charging unit will be another reason to visit and shop in the downtown area," Straebel said. "Although electric vehicles are not ubiquitous at this point, a rise in gas prices could certainly make people take a closer look at the cost savings of driving an electric car. In the near future, we envision northwestern Lower Michigan as a hub for electric vehicles and believe the EV charging unit complements the city's other environmental initiatives."

Doomsday, 12/21/2012?

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

Ahhhh ... I don't think so.

Let's look at Dec. 21, 2012 as a wake-up call to be kinder, more considerate, and more tolerant and help others in need. This date marks the winter solstice and not the end of the world. Yes, it's the last date of the year in the Mayan calendar but they, like us, flip it over and say, "Wow it's a new year. January is here and I need to get my tax information together."

OK, that's in my head, not a Mayan's.

My belief is that we are using up our natural resources and taking advantage of our Mother Earth more than a teenager takes advantage of their mom. How we treat ourselves and our natural resources affects us all and I don't need a politician to figure that one out. So, instead of planning for a doomsday we should look at this date to renew and plan for a lifestyle that helps ourselves, each other and our beautiful planet called Earth.

As we try living simpler and embrace one another for our differences, we may realize that we are more alike than different. Most of us want to live full, productive lives, have a family, friends and find a job or volunteer in positions that bring us satisfaction. Most of us have a desire to help others in need and take care of each other.

Our calendar year ends on the 31st and we celebrate with gilded balls dropping in Times Square, glasses getting clinked and lovers getting kissed. The Maya celebrated on the 21st and they had their own parties to welcome winter — probably not much different than our own. After all, they liked to have a good time, too.

Doomsayers will say we have hurricanes more violent, floods taking more lives, earthquakes and tsunamis; but we are our own enemy. We allow individuals to build on weak shores. We allow the populace to explode in places where nature should take its course. We feel we are owed this Earth and she belongs to us, but this Mother Earth definitely commands respect. She's more powerful than your mamma.

This hooey about the world ending began when a Sumerian belief enlightened us about a planet that would collide with earth in May 2003. When that didn't happen the date was changed to 2012 and Dec. 21 seemed like a logical date since it was the last date of the year in the Mayan calendar. If such a planet or asteroid were to arrive, NASA would surely have spotted it by now. After all, we do have improved technology on our side.

Thirty years ago I remember telling Dad to prepare a shelter since doomsday was approaching. I went into serious Civil Air Patrol mode after reading the "Celestine Prophecy." My wise father replied in his usual manner, "Yes, I've heard this before in the 1940s but we are still here." Planets do line up occasionally and have an effect on the earth, but how we physically treat our planet brings about more dramatic change.

According to the Mayan culture Dec. 21, 2012 is a rare celestial juncture of the converging of the winter solstice sun and the Milky Way which means the beginning of a new millennium. It's the resetting of a great celestial clock and a hopeful shift in the nature of human consciousness and civilization. This date should give us pause to celebrate and look forward to a new year being cognizant of how we treat our earth and one another. So, this date does not mark the end but should serve as a reminder to renew and review our lives and prepare and create a kinder future.

Gifts with a Purpose organizers offer thanks

Dear editor:

We would like to extend a big thank you to the Charlevoix community for making the second annual Charlevoix Gifts with a Purpose Alternative Giving Event such a success. The 17 local non-profit organizations who participated took in a total of more than $7,000 in alternative "gifts" which will be given throughout the holidays. This is more than double the amount raised last year. A special thanks to the library for the use of their facility, Charlevoix State Bank for their assistance with credit card processing, the Bergmann Center Aktion Club for providing morning refreshments and lunch, and the Charlevoix Community Food Pantry for providing greeters. If anyone missed the event, and would still like to make a donation as a Christmas gift, all 17 organizations are still accepting donations. Thanks again to everyone who made this day such a success.

Sincerely,
Val Meyerson and Cheri Hoffman, event co-chairs

Regular visitor opposes fireplace project

Editor:

As a many time visitor to Charlevoix from down state, I read with interest your article on the planned fireplace for East Park. On our most recent visit over Thanksgiving, my husband and I walked by the proposed site and formed our own opinions.

First, since the renovations to the marina and park a few years ago, East Park is a perfect little gem, and the addition of an imposing fireplace is "gilding the lily." From an aesthetic standpoint it is unnecessary and even worse, it will detract from the beauty of the park.

Second, the placement of the fireplace, if it should be built, is very close to the street, and would seem to be unsafe for children who may be running around it.

Third, it amazed us that the scope of the design was so large. When I looked across the street at the stores and lofts above them, it became apparent that their view will now be dominated by this fireplace and its very tall chimney. Frankly, that doesn't seem to be a very neighborly thing to do.

Lastly, with due respect to the very generous donor who I am sure did not anticipate the hullabaloo his kind offer would generate, our thoughts would be to move it, turn it into a fire pit with benches all around, and provide sticks for the marshmallows.

We love Charlevoix and hope the steering committee will be able to find a balanced solution.

Fireplace will be an asset downtown

Editor:

I would like to give you a quick background on my reason for writing this letter.

Many years ago I boated into Charlevoix and often could not get in because it was full. While it was one of our favorite ports, we started to just skip it because of troubles with getting in. When we could get in, everyone was wonderful to us and truly made us feel wanted.

When the new marina went in and getting in became a little easier, we added Charlevoix back to our list. We really fell in love with the area to the point we decided to purchase a home on Belvedere. We now have been in Charlevoix a considerable amount of years. Every summer and winter we bring in many guests who enjoy the store fronts, restaurants and marina area.

This past summer something changed. A couple of the store front owners stopped guests and requested they sign a petition against the structure across the street. They never once told them it was a fireplace; just that it was just an ugly structure blocking the view. When my guest told them they were not from Charlevoix area they stated that did not matter; they just needed signatures. I was very surprised that local merchants would drag tourists into a local matter. I became really taken back by it when I was told I needed to stay out of this debate because I was not born in Charlevoix. I decided that was just one person talking but now I've heard it from others about others not being born in Charlevoix.

It appears to me if a few people can not be happy about something that was clearly done properly regardless of what they think, and also can cause this much grief for everyone, that they are actually the problem, not city council or the fireplace. If the select few handled themselves professionally and raised the issues when they were supposed to, none of this would be happening. They still might have not gotten their way, but you never know.

The fireplace and its location will be very successful for the town and its people. Many of the local merchants will enjoy seeing people sitting around the fireplace with packages from their stores and eating ice cream or drinking coffee also from just across the street.

Thank you for taking the time to read this and hopefully Charlevoix keeps moving forward with its charm and most important friendly people.

Minsterial association offers thanks for community support

Editor:

The pastors and churches of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association would like take a moment during this busy holiday season to express our thanks and gratitude for the continued support we receive from our local organizations, churches, individuals and businesses in this community that allows us to serve those who are suffering financially through unemployment, underemployment or other factors that foster the need to assist the needy with their heating, utility, prescription or other living expenses. The donations you give to the Charlevoix Ministerial Association Benevolence Fund allow us to minister in the name of Jesus to those who are downtrodden, overwhelmed and marginalized, sharing the hope of the gospel as well as giving hope out in the form of benevolence. We are very grateful for your generosity and support during this past year and are looking forward to continuing to serve our community in the years to come.

Happy holidays and may God bless you for your giving!

Should You Prepare for "Fiscal Cliff"?

As an investor, you can sometimes feel you're at the mercy of forces beyond your control. This may be especially true today, when the entire country appears to be on edge about the approaching "fiscal cliff." What can you do in the face of such a dire prediction?

First of all, you'll need to understand what initially led the Federal Reserve to issue the fiscal cliff warning. Here's the story: Some $1.2 trillion in spending cuts are scheduled to begin in 2013, while, simultaneously, the Bush-era tax cuts including the reduction in capital gains and dividend taxes are set to expire. This combination of spending cuts and higher taxes could take some $600 billion out of the economy, leading to a possible recession and maybe something much worse, at least in the eyes of the Fed.

Still, there's no need for panic. Despite its political infighting, Congress is likely to reduce the "cliff" to a smaller bump. But as an investor, you may need to be prepared for two significant events: market volatility, at least in the short term, and higher taxes, probably for the foreseeable future.

To combat market volatility, you may want to take these steps:

* Rebalance — You may need to rebalance your portfolio to ensure it still reflects your target mix of investments, based on your long-term goals and your risk tolerance.

* Diversify — A broadly diversified portfolio can help you navigate "bumps," "cliffs" and other rugged investment terrain. (Keep in mind, though, that while diversification can reduce the impact of market volatility, it can't guarantee profits or protect against all losses.)

* Upgrade investment quality

Generally speaking, higher-quality investments are better positioned to withstand the tempests of volatile financial markets. Consequently, when investing in stocks, look for companies with solid track records, strong management and competitive products. And when purchasing bonds, seek those that earn the highest grades from the independent rating agencies.

Now, let's turn to taxes. Even if taxes on income, capital gains and dividends do rise, they will still, in all likelihood, be much lower than they've been at various points in the past. Nonetheless, you may want to consider a variety of steps, including the following:

* Take advantage of tax deferred vehicles. Contribute as much as possible to your traditional IRA, your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan, and any education savings accounts you may have, such as a 529 plan.

* Convert your traditional IRA to a Roth IRA. A Roth IRA provides tax-free earnings, provided you don't start taking withdrawals until you're 59-1/2 and you've had your account for at least five years. (Be aware, though, that this conversion is taxable, and may not be appropriate if you don't have money readily available in other accounts to pay the taxes.)

* Consider municipal bonds. If you're in one of the upper tax brackets, you could benefit from investing in "munis," which pay interest that's free of federal taxes, and possibly state and local taxes as well.

Above all else, don't abandon your long-term plans due to short-term uncertainty — and avoid making unwarranted and extreme changes to your portfolio. By staying focused on your goals, and by making well-thought-out moves at the right time, you can help prevent your financial goals from going "over a cliff."

Students, community donate to Sandy victims

Students at Charlevoix Elementary School recently collected about 700 pounds of various donations for the victims of Superstorm Sandy on the East Coast.

Fourth grade teacher Nicole Sterrett said the items were collected from the community over a recent two-week period. She said each shelter asked for different items, so each grade level was assigned different items to make sure all needed items were collected.

But after all the items were collected, the school needed to find a way to get them there.

Enter more donors.

Sterrett noted that in addition to the many items, "We had generous donations from, Sophie Haan, fourth grader, Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene, Fred Taylor of Charlevoix Country Club, the Dan Buday/Deb Smith, and Carl Moser of Petoskey. Nancy LaCroix was also very helpful and donated her time and energy to the project. ... the Charlevoix Post Office was also very helpful through the process."

The donated items were sent to four different shelters in New Jersey.

Charlevoix Assembly of God church changes name

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The leadership at the Charlevoix Assembly of God church recently announced that a name change is in process for the church. The church will now be called Center Point Assembly.

The church has been called Charlevoix Assembly of God since its inception in 1947. It was re-located in 1977-78 to its current location on M-66 just South of Charlevoix. This year the church is celebrating its 65th anniversary and 35th year in its present location.

Explaining the reason behind the name change Center Point Assembly pastor The Rev. Mike way said, "As a church, we are not changing our foundational beliefs nor our association with the Assembly of God denomination. Rather, we see the name change as a way to further strengthen our belief in

Winn addresses fireplace concerns

Editor:

There is a difference between needs and wants, for us as individuals and government at all levels. We need police, fire, roads, utilities, schools, etc. We want Mount McSauba, the municipal golf course, parks, marina, fountain, beaches, baseball diamonds, etc. A fireplace is the same, to be enjoyed by those sitting around it.

Some fireplace concerns are:

1. "Liability." Can one really compare this liability to Mount McSauba or the marina? Last year a teenager was electrocuted swimming in the Traverse City marina. Holland has had no liability issues with their fireplace. East Lansing just built a fireplace as well.

2. "It gives no heat." It is not glass-enclosed, but rather has bolted on screens with a 500,000 BTU log set.

3. "You can't see through it." It is open on all four sides.

4. "It is sitting on a pedestal." The hearth is the same height as the surrounding benches.

5. "The cost of the gas is too high." The cost of running the gas line by DTE is based on usage. We estimated our usage high and the installation cost is only $300. Even with the high estimated gas usage, relative to the city budget, it is like your home gas bill going up $10 annually. It costs way more to mow the grass in the park than the annual gas cost. The fountain maintenance is three times this figure and there are no complaints. Mount McSauba is subsidized. Also we have a pledge to pay the gas bill for the next five years and, remember, the construction costs are donated as well.

There is only one fireplace concern from a couple of merchants that has any merit. It does block a slight amount of their view from across the street. However it is only 8 feet wide at the base and you can see through it. Parked cars on both sides block way more than 8 feet. To my knowledge, not one merchant in the block south has ever complained about the band shell blocking their view. Maybe they see the bigger picture in that if it is good for the community, it is good for them.

I have had countless people tell me they are in favor of the fireplace but are not subjecting themselves to the viciousness of some on the other side. Many at past meetings have stayed silent for that reason. I think the city counsel has the right to assume if there are 50 or so people at the meetings against the fireplace, there must be 2,500 at home either for it or don't care either way.

Reader: Don't sign recall petitions

Editor:

As you may have seen in the paper three individuals are attempting to recall three of our city council persons. What I have learned through this process is that the reasons do not have to be truthful. The Charlevoix County Election Commission's only job is to determine if the language of the petition has sufficient clarity to be understood. Also state law mandates a special council meeting must be posted at least 18 hours prior to the special meeting. The notice in question in the recall petition was posted more than 48 hours prior to the special counsel meeting. It is not the responsibility of a city council person to do the posting. The city clerk is responsible for all postings.

Our forefathers designed a recall to remove an elected official for doing something illegal, immoral or unethical, not because you didn't get your way. This is the purpose of elections. If the petitioners get the required signatures a recall election will cost taxpayers approximately as much as $5,000.

Mrs. Picha has an additional charge in her recall petition of not picking up curb side debris in a timely manner. I am told Petoskey, Boyne City and East Jordan do not provide this service at all. In addition to collecting yard waste our city will collect everything from a refrigerator to a couch every other Monday. I think we are lucky to have this service.

I urge you not to sign a recall petition if asked. Nothing illegal, immoral or unethical has taken place. Thank you.

Zita Winn
Charlevoix

Editor's note: According to its wesbite, the City of Boyne City offers curb side leaf collection in the fall, and twice annual rubbish pickups.

Why a recall election?

Editor:

I understand that three separate recall petitions have been filed with the Charlevoix County Clerk's office to recall Charlevoix City council members Jill Picha, Bryan Vollmer and Dennis Kusina, respectively. The reason articulated in the recall petitions: The three of them showed up at a joint meeting of the City Council and DDA in violation of the Michigan Open Meetings Act. And, in the case of council member Picha, the petition claims that Ms. Picha failed to have debris and other trash removed since June 2012 pursuant to City ordinance.

I live on Dixon Avenue, and my leaves were picked up by the city all fall. Did anyone not get the leaves and other debris picked up? I am happy we have this service in our city, as my friends who live outside the city limits do not get this free service at all.

I am a member of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority board, and received notice as required more than 18 hours prior to the joint meeting from city clerk Carol Ochs. In fact, it was timely posted at city hall. If, as claimed by the recall petitions, the meeting was held in violation of the Open Meetings Act, would not the city attorney and clerk have known this fact and had the meeting rescheduled?

Let's call a spade a spade. This is not about trash pickup or Open Meetings Act violations. This is about the proposed fireplace. Anyone else tired of hearing about this fireplace?

If the recall election is held it will cost the city up to $5,000 to have a recall election. If any elected official is successfully recalled, state law requires the city of Charlevoix to have another special election on the next regular election date to fill the vacancy. This special election could cost the city up to an additional $5,000. Anyone elected in the special election would only serve until November 2013, because all three of the people being targeted for recall would be up for re-election at that time anyway. So, conceivably we could have a special election to fill a recalled seat in August 2013 to fill the term that expires in November 2013.

Seems like a big waste of time and money to me.

Marie Lucille Osterberg, beloved wife, mother, grandmother, teacher and coach, passed away peacefully Dec. 2, 2012, with family by her side.

Marie will be remembered by family and friends for her warm smile, encouraging words, kind and joyful spirit, and love of song and laughter.

Survivors include five children, Kristine, Paul, John (Kiyomi), Brian, and Carole (Dwayne); grandchildren, Nicholas, Sophia, Kelly, Mariko, Matthew, Lena; siblings, Arthur (Marge), Rita (Dom); and in-laws, Jay, Lotta, Kaarina, Gary, Maurie, all touched by her loving and giving nature.

Marie was preceded in death by her husband, Paul; brother, Louis; and sister, Evelyn.

Marie was born in 1926 to Arthur and Mary (Perino) Frankini in Iron Mountain.

A graduate of Northern Michigan University, Marie was a dedicated educator in the Michigan Public Schools for nearly 30 years. In 1969, she joined Charlevoix Public School System, teaching physical education, health and English. Marie encouraged girls to be involved in sports and in the early 1970s she would open the high school gym in the evenings to teach gymnastics, dance and volleyball. Marie spearheaded girls' athletic team opportunities at Charlevoix High School, coaching the school's first girls' basketball, volleyball and track teams. Marie and her teams brought home many titles and honors over the years. She was known to many as, "Mrs. O," "Mom" and "Coach." Always motivating and kind, Marie didn't care if you were the best, but that you tried your best.

For many years, Marie had been a member of St. Mary's of Charlevoix and sang in the choir.

A memorial Mass will be given at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 15, at St. Mary.

Gifts of tribute may be directed to the Music Ministry, St. Mary's Church, 1003 Bridge St., Charlevoix, Mich. 49720; or McLaren Northern Michigan Foundation, 360 Connable Ave. Petoskey, Mich. 49770.

In lieu of flowers, join friends or family "to toast Maria" with song and dance.

DNR announces burn permit changes

Beginning Friday, Dec. 7, residents in Northern Lower Michigan and the Upper Peninsula now have a different way of filing for burn permits.

Now, callers will be connected with a new, automated, interactive voice-recognition system.

Bill O'Neill, chief of the DNR's Forest Resources Division, said the cost-saving system allows users to identify their burning location through speech or touch-tone entries. The information will be processed, and if conditions are favorable, burn permit issuance will be confirmed. The automated system will also inform callers if any burn restrictions are in place for that day.

"The new system will speed up the permit process, yet continue to provide users the guidance needed to complete their burns safely," said O'Neill, who also serves as state forester. Residents are required to check if the DNR is issuing burn permits before conducting any open burning — recreational campfires and fires used for cooking are the exceptions to this rule.

Paul Kollmeyer, DNR fire prevention specialist, said burn permits are especially important with residents doing final yard cleanup before heavy snowfall.

"Burning yard debris requires more than a rake and a match," Kollmeyer said. "Carelessness remains the leading cause of wildfires in Michigan, which is why precautions need to be taken."

The DNR encourages residents with Internet access to visit www.michigan.gov/burnpermit to get their burn permits online. Residents can use the interactive map to find the burn conditions in their area. If a "yes" is shown in the "burning permits issued" column, burning is allowed for that day. There is no need to print anything; this serves as a burn permit. For those who prefer to get their burn permits by phone, the DNR's toll-free burn permit number is (866) 922-2876.

For more information on wildfire prevention, burn permits and fire preparedness, visit www.michigan.gov/preventwildfires.

Lottie Stockman

By 1861, the little but slowly growing community of Pine River, later called Charlevoix in 1879, realized something had to be done to control its rambunctious offspring. As Lottie Stockman (pictured), who had arrived in 1857, stated in her Reminiscenses of Pioneer Life, 1916: " ... with children running wild ... the talk then was that a school should be started." The local men selected a site on her husband Morris' property overlooking Pine Lake (Lake Charlevoix), later the Belvedere Club, and in one day volunteer labor erected a log building that contained rough benches, a rude door with a string latch, and a dilapidated box stove. ". . . between the logs the holes were filled with moss and mud, that was our schoolhouse." Lottie became the first teacher, and was paid one dollar per week for a job that also evolved into, much to her chagrin, after hours babysitting and meals. The Traverse Region, 1884 book said of the schoolhouse: "It was a humble structure, but then, men have emerged from similar ones to enter upon illustrious careers, and dying transmit honorable names to posterity."

Thiese images are two of 850 in the Charlevoix Historical Society's most recent DVD titled "Charlevoix, Michigan — A Pictorial Journey through 16 Decades."The disc is available at the Society's Harsha House Museum, 103 State St. next to the Congregational Church, from 1-4 p.m. Tuesday -Saturday. Special holiday farmers market set for Dec. 20

The Charlevoix Farmers Market will host a special holiday celebration during the regular Thursday, Dec. 20 farmers market at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Santa will be present from 11 a.m.-noon, immediately following story hour, to take pictures with the Children. Free cookies, cocoa, and coffee will accompany live holiday music by local artist Charlie Millard.

Chef Paul Ramey of Roquette Burger Bistro will do a live cooking demonstration featuring a winter salad for holiday dinners, featuring local products found at the market.

"The Charlevoix Farmers Market is a great family friendly atmosphere," said market manager Bethany Pearson. "It's also a smart way to shop local this holiday season and keep money in our community. Everybody loves the gift of great food!"

More than 20 farmers will be present to help celebrate the season. As always, Bridge Cards and credit/debit cards will be accepted.

The market will continue to take place every Thursday from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. at the Charlevoix Public Library until June. For more information, contact the Charlevoix Chamber at (231) 547-101.

Food and shelter grants awarded

Char-Em United Way and the local board of the federal Emergency Food and Shelter Program recently completed distribution of more than $36,937 in federal funds to support local food and shelter programs in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. United Way is the local administrator of the federal Emergency Food and Shelter Program.

The local program board met recently to review requests for funds and award grants. Emmet County agencies received a total of $22,398 which will be distributed to the Women's Resource Center, Salvation Army, Manna Food Project, Brother Dan's Food Pantry, and St. Francis Church. In Charlevoix County $14,539 has been awarded to the Women's Resource Center, Salvation Army, Manna Food Project, Good Samaritan Family Services, Boyne Valley Food Pantry, and East Jordan Care and Share.

"Unfortunately the funding was cut 16 percent from last year, despite the increased need in our community," Martha Lancaster of United Way and chair of the local program board. "This made the decision of the local board very difficult."

The awards were made by a local board that is chaired by United Way and includes representatives from the Salvation Army, American Red Cross, Temple B'Nai Israel, Catholic Human Services, Emmanuel Episcopal Church, the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians, representatives of government, the Department of Human Services, both Community Foundations, and the Nehemiah Project.

"These funds will be used to expand the capacities of these local agencies to meet emergency needs for food and shelter," continues Lancaster. "Reports from our 2-1-1 call center for the past year show that the need for rent and utility assistance, as well as food, have been very high. Approximately 40 percent of the calls to 2-1-1 are for help with housing and utilities. The EFSP helps meet that need, and United Way is pleased make this possible by administering the program."

For more information, contact United Way at (231) 487-1006 or info@charemunitedway.org.

wrote to me directly and said he didn't care if the fireplace went through. So stop the fireplace. Stop saying this is dividing the community. We the people of and in Charlevoix are very united behind this cause. We keep telling you that we do not want the fireplace."

Roth said she and others are not only seeking the recall of Picha, Vollmer and Kusina, they may also pursue legal action against the city or its officials. Roth said, and city clerk Carol Ochs confirmed that Roth has filed an extensive Freedom of Information Act request with the city seeking any and all documentation regarding the community fireplace.

"We have a two prong approach to this issue. One is the recall so our citizens can be heard and the other is legal because we have not been told the truth," Roth said in the release.

Both Picha and Kusina have denied any open meetings act violations took place at the Aug. 9 meeting. Vollmer has not commented on the matter to the Courier.

The next step in the process will be for the each petition sponsor to start collecting signatures of registered voters from each council members' respective wards.

According to state law, the number of signatures from registered voters in each target member's respective ward required to force a recall election is at least 25 percent of the number of people from that ward who voted in the last gubernatorial election (November 2010). Those number are: 1st Ward 103 signatures, 2nd Ward 83 signatures, 3rd Ward 92 signatures.

While the approved petition language remains valid for 180 days, Ochs, the city clerk, said the petition sponsors effectively have until Feb. 1 to have the petitions filed with the Charlevoix County Clerk's office with the required number of signatures to meet the necessary deadlines to have the recall election on the next available regular election date which is May 7. If they miss that deadline, the point becomes moot, because the next available election date would be Aug. 6, which would be less than six months from the end of Picha's, Vollmer's and Kusina's terms, which expire in November.

The costs

Charlevoix City Clerk Carol Ochs said at a recent city council meeting that if one or all of the petitions proceed through the process far enough to prompt a recall election, it will cost the city roughly $3,000-$5,000 to conduct the special election in May. The cost range, she explained, would depend on how many council members are on the ballot to be recalled. If all three wards are involved, it will be closer to $5,000 and if just one ward is involved, it will be closer to the $3,000 figure, Ochs said.

If any of the recall efforts are successful, that council member would immediately be removed from office and, according to city charter, the remaining council members would appoint someone from the recalled member's ward to serve the remainder of his or her term.

However, Ochs also noted that if all three — Picha, Vollmer and Kusina were successfully recalled in May, it could leave the city in a position where it couldn't conduct business for a time. She pointed out that to conduct business, the city council must have a quorum — or four members — present at a meeting. If half the council were removed at one time, the council would not have a quorum to conduct business, including the business of appointing replacement council members.

It appears that state law may allow the governor to make temporary appointments to the council to serve until the next election date (which would be Aug. 6). Section 168.970 of the Michigan Compiled Laws reads, in part, "Where power to fill a vacancy by appointment exists, then in such case such office shall be filled in the same manner by temporary appointment effective until a successor shall be duly elected and qualified as herein provided, otherwise, the governor of the state may fill such vacancy until said recalled officer's successor is elected and qualified."

The language approved Monday for the petitions to recall Charlevoix City Council members Jill Picha, Bryan Vollmer and Dennis Kusina reads:

Jill Picha

"Had a meeting with other city council members in violation of the Open Meetings Act on August 9, 2012; and has failed to ensure compliance with the Charlevoix Ordinance of 2007 requiring timely collection of debris and other trash since June 2012."

Dennis Kusina

"He was involved in a meeting with other city council members to discuss the fireplace, in violation of the Open Meetings Act, on August 9, 2012."

Bryan Vollmer

"We wish to recall Brayn Vollmer from the 2nd Ward City Council, because he met with other council members regarding the fireplace in violation of the open meetings act on Aug. 9th, 2012."

the necessity and relevance of Jesus Christ becoming and remaining the 'center point' of our lives."

He added, "The church leadership is challenging its members to make the changes God requires to be active followers of Christ. Becoming and living as a Christian causes changes in our lives as the Holy Spirit enables us to become more Christ-like as we grow in our faith.

A name identifies a church and gives it its identity within the community as well as with its members. If properly chosen, a name can bring a calling and a challenge. That's why care needs to be taken to reflect the calling and desire of the church."

board president Jessica Anderson said the board encourages the community to attend the public interview process. If time permits, public questions may be entertained.

"We were very pleased with the caliber of candidates who applied," Anderson said, adding it was a difficult process to narrow down the number of candidates selected for interviews. "I want to thank each candidate for giving us the opportunity to review their applications," she added.

A total of 20 candidates applied for the administrative position, which is being vacated at the end of the school year by Kathleen "Kitty" McNamara who had been superintendent for more than 24 years.

With assistance from Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, which is coordinating the search, a brochure for the position was mailed to all 523 school districts in the state, and advertisements were on state and national websites.

Forums took place with school staff and the community to gather input on qualities the community is seeking in their superintendent. Comments ranged from good communication skills to someone who will interface easily with students, parents, and the community.

Tentatively, the school board has set second interviews for the week of Jan. 14 with the hopes to have the new superintendent begin in mid-June 2013.

30 YEARS

year, which may have allowed more people to afford a few more gifts for their kids.

And just because the numbers have dropped a bit, that doesn't mean there aren't people in desperate need, Boss emphasized.

It also doesn't mean the community's generosity to support the program as waned at all.

Boss said this time of the year, her home is awash in coats, clothes, toys and all manner of things that people have donated for the project.

On one recent trip to town from her home south of Charlevoix, Boss left with her car empty and returned with it nearly bursting with donations. She regularly has people stop her and hand her cash or checks.

"Yesterday, I had a fellow walk up to me and hand me a nice check and gift cards for McDonald's and Subway," Boss said.

"Our main concern right now is having enough money," Boss added. "The cost of groceries has gone up a lot. We might not be able to give them milk."

She said each year the program spends more than $10,000 just on groceries for the distribution.

Boss said she is overwhelmed each year by the generosity the community shows for the program.

"The good news is that, the people of Charlevoix are wonderful people. They just come through every year. We live in a wonderful town."

Donations to the program can be made in many ways. Many area churches, service clubs, businesses and other organizations have set up collection boxes, mitten trees and other collection options. The toys collected in the area through the local Toys for Tots campaign go to the program. And if all those options don't work, those wishing to donate to the program can contact Boss at (231) 547-2078. Checks may also be sent to the program's treasurer, John Coolman, at the Charlevoix Community Reformed Church, 100 Oak St. in Charlevoix.

Holly Daze 2012 kicked off the holiday season on Saturday, December 1st

It was a memorable evening benefiting the Charlevoix Area Hospital with 260 guests in attendance and over $100,000 in generous contributions.

The tremendous support of our sponsors, guests, volunteers and donors to the live and silent auctions made this year's event a great success.

A special thanks to our event sponsors. This event would not be possible without your involvement.

BOYS VARSITY BASKETBALL

Hamilton's three-pointers lead Rayders in win over Gaylord

DREW KOCHANNY
Northern Michigan Review

For Charlevoix senior Charlie Hamilton, three isn't just a number on his jersey.

It's also how he likes to play the game.

Hamilton knocked down five 3-pointers to lead the Charlevoix High School boys' basketball team past Gaylord, 61-54, in a non-league contest Tuesday.

The Rayders, 2-0 overall, hit nine triples in all on the night as Hamilton finished with 24 points to go along with his five 3-pointers.

"It was fun to see," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "I give a lot of the credit to all of his teammates, they did a lot of the work to create openings for him.

"They know that when Charlie is feeling it, it's going to be beneficial to our team to try to get him open."

Gaylord, 0-4 overall, was led by 6-foot-7 senior center Zachery Lundell's 17 points. The Blue Devils also hit eight 3-pointers of their own.

The Blue Devils opened the night with the hot hand, closing out the first quarter with a 14-10 lead.

Charlevoix would steal the lead back after an 11-5 run fueled by five points by Hamilton to make it a 25-19 game with just under two minutes remaining in the first half.

A late push by Gaylord would tie it up 27-27 at the half.

After the teams traded baskets throughout the third quarter, Charlevoix closed out the third with a 44-43 lead thanks to an in increase in defensive pressure.

"We started pressing right off the bat and I thought (Gaylord) handled it pretty well," Wood said. "We actually backed off and just played man and we increased our ball pressure in the half court once we did that."

Hamilton would take over in the fourth for the Rayders as he connected on three 3-pointers including two on back-to-back possessions.

Hamilton's last 3-pointer of the night gave Charlevoix a nine point lead with just over two minutes remaining, seemingly closing out the game for the Rayders.

"He likes to play at high speed and he likes to get the shots up quick," Wood said. "It's pretty fun to watch."

Also for Charlevoix, senior Tanner Catt finished with 15 points including a pair of 3-pointers of his own. Sawyer Russell added eight points.

Gaylord senior Tyler Frisch finished with 12 points to go along with Lundell's 17 points.

Charlevoix opens Lake Michigan Conference play Friday with a trip to Boyne City. 1-1. The Rayders sit undefeated after two games, but Wood knows there's plenty of room to improve before conference games begin.

"It's great to get these two under our belt," Wood said. "We definitely haven't peaked, we got a lot of things to fix up, but it's great for our confidence."

Gaylord won the JV game 62-60 over Charlevoix as sophomore Marcus O'Rourke led the way with 22 points for the Blue Devils. Charlevoix's Ryan Joy finished with 23 points.

DREW KOCHANNY/NEWS-REVIEW

Charlevoix's Chendler Novotny (left) takes a shot Tuesday as Gayford'e Cemeron Teylor defends, during the Rayders' win over Geylor on their home court.

Rayders open with a win

On Friday, Dec. 7, the Rayders opened their season with a 53-45 win over Kingsley.

Tanner Catt scored a game high, 16 points and added four assists for the Rayders during a Lake Michigan/ Northwest Conference Crossover Classic win over the Bucks at the Kalkaska High School gym.

Charlevoix led 10-7 at the end of the first quarter, and 23-21 at halftime.

"We played a strong defense tonight, especially in the second half," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "For our first game of the season, the guys played real well."

The Rayders pulled away in the third, outscoring the Bucks, 19-12.

For Charlevoix, Sawyer Russel added eight points and five rebounds, while Zack Hankins scored eight and grabbed six rebounds.

For Kingsley, Scott McPeherson scored eight points.

"It was a great atomnshphere and an opportunity to play teams that are not normally scheduled," Wood added.

Charlevoix won the JV basketball game, 72-45, over Kinglsey.

Nick Plude scored 24 points, Austin Putman added 13 points, and Ryan Joy had 12 points for the

On Friday, Dec. 14 the Rayder boys and girls varsity teams travel to Boyne City to take on the Ramblers.

Wins don't come easy in the Lake Michigan Conference.

Wins in conference openers come even harder to get and certainly not without a fight.

Sophomore center Madeline Boss led the Charlevoix Rayders girls' basketball team to victory against Harbor Springs, 59-48, in both schools' conference opener Friday at the Charlevoix High School gym.

Boss finished with 25 points and 14 rebounds as the Rayders improve to 2-1 overall, 1-0 league.

"Any win is great, but a conference win is huge," Charlevoix coach Liz Shaw said. "I thought my girls really came out to play hard. We played with a lot of intensity and it paid off in the long run."

The Rayders led the entire game as they opened the night with an a 12-3 run.

Harbor, 2-2 overall, cut the first quarter lead down to two points as junior Stephanie Sylvain drained a deep 3-pointer as the buzzer sounded.

The Rams finished the quarter on a 9-2 run.

"The games have highs and lows and peaks and valleys," Harbor Springs coach Jennifer Foley said. "One team is going to make a run, the other is going to make a run too."

Foley wasn't far off as Harbor's run would come to an end in the second.

The Rayders finished off the quarter with a 21-14 halftime lead.

Charlevoix forced Harbor into 14 first half turnovers with 11 coming off steals.

"Our style of play is being smart and trying to intercept and I thought we did that tonight," Shaw said. "We just keep getting better in practice and I think it shows because Harbor is a great team and they played with a lot of intensity too."

The Rams fought back in the third, cutting the lead to two making it a 27-25 game after an 11-6 push led by sophomore Shallon Grawey.

A 16-4 run by the Rayders ending the third and into the fourth would push the game to 43-29 with just over six minutes to play.

"We didn't come out with the same intensity as we did in the first half and so I called a time out and thought the girls turned the switch back on," Shaw said.

The Rams would once again chop away at the lead in the fourth on a 9-0 run as the Rayders lead was cut to just five.

Boss took over late in the fourth, however, tallying 12 fourth quarter points to close out the victory for the Rayders.

"Madeline Boss is an unbelievable athlete and a great player," Foley said. "We didn't do a particularly good job of boxing her out and keeping her in check."

Also for Charlevoix, junior Kourtney Putman finished with 10 points and three rebounds, while senior Paige Ager added six points. Boss added five steals and three blocks on the defensive end.

For Harbor, 2-2 overall, 0-1 league, Sylvain finished with 12 points. Grawey and senior Katie Barkley each had nine points.

On Tuesday the Rayders traveled to Gaylord for a non-leauge contest.

Madeline Boss scored 12 points for Charlevoix in a 34-22 loss to Gaylord.

In a defensive struggle, Gaylord held the lead at the end of the first quarter, 11-7.

Both teams struggled for points in the second quarter as the Blue Devils increased its lead to 15-9 at the half.

"We just had a hard time putting our shots in the hoop tonight," Charlevoix coach Liz Shaw said.

Charlevoix is 2-2 overall and will face Boyne City on the Ramblers' home court Friday, Dec. 14.

WRESTLING

Rayders take fifth at Manton Invite

KURT GRANGOOD/ NEWS-REVIEW

Charlevoix's heavyweight, Andrew Mitchell scores two as Grayling's Mitch Thompson tries to work during the Charlevoix Tri-Meet at the Charlevoix High School gym.

Four Charlevoix wrestlers made it to the championship round and the Rayders took fifth place overall as the team traveled to Manton on Saturday, Dec. 8 for a nine-team Manton Invitational tournament.

Junior Jake Novotny and sophomore Sammy Hovie each took second place, while senior Alex Brown and junior Austin Cesaro were tournament champions. Hovie pinned D.J. Reiter of Lake City in 35 seconds and then pinned John Crowell of Holton in 29 seconds. One of Novoty's wins included a pin of Waylon Henning in 1:49.

Brown improved his record to 7-0 for the season while Austin Cesaro was 5-0 for the day, and pinned one of his opponents in seven seconds – possibly a school record.

Sophomore Devin Largent earned three wins during the tournament while sophomore Spencer Bruce and freshman Justin Adkins had one win each.

"Our seasoned wrestlers really did well. Brown continues his undefeated streak and Cesaro is beginning to hit stride after missing some practice early in the season," Charlevoix Coach Mike Hinkle said. "Both Novotny and Hovie took second, but lost in the finals by very narrow margins and showed great stamina after wrestling four or five matches. Devin Largent had a breakthrough day, winning three after losing his first two. It's always exciting to watch when new techniques begin to work for a wrestler."

"Manton held a competitive tournament with teams ranging in skill and experience from Lake City (with a new program) to Holton who had six wrestlers go to

JV BOYS BASKETBALL

Rayder JV falls just short of comeback win

The Charlevoix Rayder junior varsity boys basketball team lost a hearthreaker Tuesday to the Gaylord Blue Devils 62-60.

The Rayders dug themselves out of a big hole from early in the game, coming back from being down by as much as 15 points to close within 2 points with less than a minute to play. But two turnovers in the closing minute w were too much to overcome.

Leading the JV squad was sophomore point guard Ryan Joy with 23 points, including a half-court shot at the end of the first half. Sophomore center Nick Plude chipped in 15 points, while freshmen forward Austin Putman scored 12. Noah Jeakle also drilled a couple of clutch 3-pointers during the Rayders' rally.

The Rayder JV was slated to take on Boyne City at home on Thursday, Dec. 13.

FRESHMEN BOYS BASKETBALL

Rayders win season opener

The Charlevoix Rayder boys freshmen basketball team opened the season in strong style on Friday, Dec. 7 as the Rayders defeated East Jordan 39-33 in a Lake Michigan Conference matchup at home.

The Rayders were able to post a three-point lead by the end of the first quarter, 11-8, and then were able to extend the lead a bit taking a 21-13 advantage into halftime.

Both teams put up 10 points in the third, and the Red Devils were able to narrow the gap to six by the game's end.

Walker Drost and Jordan Adkins led the Rayders' scoring with 11 points each, while Alex Kleiber had 6 and Hunter Cox had 4.

"We got off to a good start in this game with Walker Drost using his quickness to penetrate and get some early lay-ups.," Charlevoix coach Joe Solomon said. "His quickness, I believe, forced them to have to play zone, which left us attempting more three-pointers than I would have liked, but fortunately Jordan Adkins and Walker Drost and Jonathan Pischner were able to knock a few down.

Solomon said the keys to the win were the team's full-court defense. He pointed to a strong press and "hustle plays" by Weston Ramsey and Hunter Cox which led to several East Jordan turnovers and the "outstanding play of Alex Kleiber on the boards."

The Rayder freshmen squad is next slated to take on Boyne City at home (in the Charlevoix Middle School gym) at 6 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 14.

Veryser granted early release

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The former principal of St. Mary School in Charlevoix who pleaded guilty earlier this year to embezzling thousands from the school coffers was recently released from jail after a judge granted her request for early release.

On April 17, Keisha Kay Veryser, 37, of Hayes Township was sentenced to serve one year in jail after she pleaded guilty to two counts of embezzlement, $1,000-$20,000, a five-year felony. Under the state's sentencing guidelines, it was the maximum sentence available to Otsego County Circuit Court Judge Dennis Murphy, sitting in for Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard M. Pajtas. (Judge Pajtas had recused himself from the case because he is a member of St. Mary Church.)

Veryser pleaded guilty to the charge as part of a plea agreement with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office. In exchange for her pleas, three more identical charges and two counts of perjury in a non-court proceeding were dismissed. Another part of the plea agreement with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office was that Veryser agreed to a restitution amount of $75,000, with $37,500 to be paid at the time of sentencing. A check for that amount was turned over to Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema at the time of the sentencing hearing.

Veryser

At the time of her sentencing, Veryser received credit for one day served in jail, but none of the jail time was held in abeyance. (Sometimes for jail sentences, a judge will only require a defendant to serve a portion of the jail time immediately and then will hold the remainder of the time "in abeyance" meaning the defendant would only have to serve the rest of the time at the judge's discretion should the defendant not comply with his or her probation.)

However few defendants serve the entire jail term to which they are sentenced.

That's because under state law, a jail inmate is entitled to one day of "good behavior" credit for every seven days he or she serves without disciplinary problems in the jail.

At the time of her sentencing, Judge Murphy had denied Veryser's request for work release, saying he would reconsider after she had served half her sentence. On May 30 she filed a request for work release and that request was denied by another judge who cited Murphy's original time frame.

On Sept. 21 Veryser filed another motion, this time asking to have her sentence reduced for good behavior, and/or for work release. At that time, Veryser presented several letters of support from people such as her counselor who wrote that Veryser had done very well in counseling and other programs in the jail. Charlevoix County Sheriff Don Schneider also wrote a letter in which he indicated he did not oppose her request for early release and noted Veryser had been a "model prisoner," participating in many programs and had no disciplinary issues.

Although that original request heard by Emmet County Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Johnson on Sept. 25, was not approved, on Nov. 28 Judge Johnson signed an order, that was stipulated to by both Schneider and Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema, granting Veryser a 25 percent reduction in her sentence, and that based on the reduction and the "good time" she had earned, she would have completed her sentence on Nov. 30.

Michigan law, section 801.257 says, "a prisoner may receive, if approved by the court, a reduction of 1/4 of his or her term if his or her conduct, diligence, and general attitude merit such reduction."

Jarema told the Courier, that although he does not recall ever having been presented with a request for

Fireplace frustrations crop up at city council meeting

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Even though it wasn't on the agenda, the month's long controversy surrounding a proposal to build a community fireplace had tension rising at Monday's regular semi-monthly city council meeting as some, including a council member, expressed frustration with the process the city is following to mediate the debate.

All of the discussion on the fireplace, came during the miscellaneous business portion of the meeting.

First came First Ward city council member Lyle Gennett who expressed his growing frustration with the process — specifically the steering committee mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson Jr. has appointed to help develop potential options for the fireplace project in East Park.

The controversy centers around a proposal to build a gas-fired outdoor fireplace on the eastern edge of East Park near Bridge Street. The proposal came when an anonymous donor offered to pay for the construction of the fireplace, which was intended to serve as a gathering space in the downtown. After discussing the matter at a few meetings, the council approved the construction project at a special meeting on Aug. 9. Community members, beginning with some downtown merchants, began objecting to the project when construction started days later. After hearing extensive complaints about the project at packed-house meetings, the council put the project on hold to allow time to determine how it wishes to proceed.

As part of that process, Carlson recently appointed a steering committee — comprised of one city resident each who is for, against and indifferent to the fireplace project — to provide input to architect Mark Buday, who offered to serve as a consultant to the council and bring back a recommendation for options for the project. The committee has not yet met, and Gennett said Monday he feels in the dark when people call him and ask him what's going on with the fireplace issue.

So far, Gennett has been the lone council member to voice a desire for the council to simply wash its hands of the whole project. In fact, he cast the sole "no" vote on the motion in September to put the project on hold, saying he'd rather just see it go away.

Gennett said he thinks the process is taking too long and occupying too much of the city's attention.

"Time wasting. I can't believe ... we are into this for like four months and where do we sit? ... You know we've got to start a budget for next year ... Jan. 1 is coming around... I think it's time to be putting stuff like this behind us."

Board accepts coach's resignation

MORGAN SHERBURNE
Northern Michigan Review

It's soon on to a new search for a new football coach after the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education accepted high school football coach Joe Pruchnicki's resignation.

Pruchnicki resigned in late November, citing "personal reasons," reported the Charlevoix Courier in early December.

Karen Lape, administrative assistant for the district, said the district was expected to post an advertisement for the position Thursday, Dec. 20.

Too, the district will add 130 iPads to grades 9, 11 and 12 at a cost of $50,000, which comes from the district's techno

Police investigate girl's suspicious situation report

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

Police in Charlevoix are continuing their investigating a possible suspicious situation reported by a girl who said the incident happened as she was walking along Bridge Street on the afternoon of Friday, Dec. 14.

City of Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan said at about 3:30 p.m. Friday, an 11-year-old girl reported that she was walking on the sidewalk headed north on Bridge Street near the Real Estate One and the Third Day Fellowship and Outreach office locations, at 1200 Bridge St., when a man driving a red pickup truck with and eagle and American flag covering the entire rear window of the truck entered the parking lot from behind her and parked. Doan said the girl told police that a "wrinkly, bald, short male about 80 years old" got out of the pickup truck and began walking towards her. She reported that the man said nothing to her. The girl then ran to the Charlevoix Middle School and reported the incident to the principal, who then called police.

Doan said a "be on the lookout" advisory was immediately aired by central dispatch to all law enforcement officers in the county with the description of the vehicle.

Doan noted that several city and county police officers were in the area at the time of the call and began a search, but found no person or vehicle matching the description. Police also conducted interviews with people working at the Real Estate One and Third Day offices and no one at any of those locations reported anything unusual happening.

On Wednesday police were still doing following up work on their investigation into the incident.

Police are asking anyone who has any information about the vehicle described by the girl to call the City of Charlevoix Police Department at (231) 547-3258.

City welcomes new airport manager

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Scott Woody stands in front of the Charlevoix Municipal Airport where he took over as manager last month.

The City of Charlevoix recently welcomed a new manager to its municipal airport.

Scott Woody, 52, landed in the manager's chair on Nov. 19 filling a vacancy created when the former manager Matt Bailey was fired in August.

Woody is looking for his enjoyment and experience in both aviation and information systems to serve him well in his new position.

A native of Plymouth, Woody has been a pilot since 1989, and in 1994, he decided that he like aviation so much, he wanted to make a career out of it. In 1997 he earned a degree in aeronautical science with a minor in airport management from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. While pursuing his degree he also became skilled in informatinn technology, a field in which he worked until he landed a job as the manager of the Gaylord Regional Airport in 2006. He remained in that position for two and a half years until his father's health prompted him to move to Florida and resume working in the information technology field as a consultant.

During Woody's tenure as the airport manager in Gaylord, the airport undertook a project to construct a new terminal.

That experience will likely also be an asset to Woody in his new position, as the city is poised to make several improvements at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport in the coming year — among those projects is a new terminal building.

Woody said he is looking forward to the challenges his new position will offer him — from overseeing several construction projects to being in charge of a much busier air[illegible] mer season. He said one of his top priorities is to find ways to streamline operations – likely using various technology tools to improve the experience at the airport for both passengers and pilots.

Woody making sure the airport is an inviting and easy to use facility is important for the city — not only to keep revenue strong for the airport itself, but because the airport serves as a first impression for many visitors and conduit to the rest of the community's economy.

Woody said he'll be moving to Charlevoix soon and is looking forward to enjoying all that the community has to offer. In his free time Woody enjoys playing hockey, ride motorcycles [illegible] off-road, and tinkering with anything mechanical.

College credit enrollments surpass expectations

JAMIE BAUMANN
Northern Michigan Review

Charlevoix High School junior Rosalynd Cassidy is taking human anatomy, her third high school class for direct college credit through Baker College.

"I took these classes, because it saves money and gives me a head start on college. Taking a college class when you are in high school makes you feel smart."

Rosalynd plans to go to a medical school in the United Kingdom after she graduates. She is just one example of many students served by Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District who is taking advantage of early college credits.

Enrollments in early college, classes that students can take in high school for college credit, have increased from 70 in 2010 to more than 800 for this school year, according to Jim Rummer, Char-Em ISD director of career and technical education.

Char-Em helps 11 local school districts to give students early college options," said Jim Cooper, Char-Em ISD early college coordinator.

"Education isn't just about educating kids, but it's what they do with those skills," Cooper said. "A number of our students never had a notion about going on to school after high school."

"Our biggest barrier," added Rummer "is first generatinn college students. Our programs are bringing the conversatinn of going on to college to many families in which this student will be the first to attend college classes."

Cooper and Rummer have worked with local districts, local businesses and colleges to give students the opportunity to take college classes. They work with the Michigan College Access Network and the Local College Access Network to give students affordable, post-secondary opportunities while they are still in high school. Three years ago when the program began, the classes offered were primarily career and technical classes. However, as more colleges have become partners, the classes have expanded into general education classes.

"Geography and cost are two factors that have hindered our students from going on to college," Cooper said. The Early College Program has sought out college partnerships, negotiated for low tuition rates, and offered the classes locally in the school day and after school. Char-Em picks up the cost of career/technical education classes and local districts pay the tuition costs for the general education classes.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for students to try that first college class to see that they can succeed in it," Cooper said.

There are several ways to earn college credit while in high school. Students can take traditional advanced placement classes which colleges accept for credit. Students can take articulated credit classes, in which they follow a career/technical

City welcomes new airport manager

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The City of Charlevoix recently welcomed a new manager to its municipal airport.

Scott Woody, 52, landed in the manager's chair on Nov. 19 filling a vacancy created when the former manager Matt Bailey was fired in August.

Woody is looking for his enjoyment and experience in both aviation and information systems to serve him well in his new position.

A native of Plymouth, Woody has been a pilot since 1989, and in 1994, he decided that he like aviation so much, he wanted to make a career out of it. In 1997 he earned a degree in aeronautical science with a minor in airport management from Embry Riddle Aeronautical University. While pursuing his degree he also became skilled in information technology, a field in which he worked until he landed a job as the manager of the Gaylord Regional Airport in 2006. He remained in that position for two and a half years until his father's health prompted him to move to Florida and resume working in the information technology field as a consultant.

During Woody's tenure as the airport manager in Gaylord, the airport undertook a project to construct a new terminal. That experience will likely also be an asset to Woody in his new position, as the city is poised to make several improvements at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport in the coming year — among those projects is a new terminal building.

Scott Woody stands in front of the Charlevoix Municipal Airport where he took over as manager last month.

Woody said he is looking forward to the challenges his new position will offer him — from overseeing several construction project to being in charge of a much busier airport — especially in the summer season. He said one of his top priorities is to find ways to streamline operations — likely using various technology tools to improve the experience at the airport for both passengers and pilots.

Woody making sure the airport is an inviting and easy to use facility is important for the city — not only to keep revenue strong for the airport itself, but because the airport serves as a first impression for many visitors and conduit to the rest of the community's economy.

Woody said he'll be moving to Charlevoix soon and is looking forward to enjoying all that the community has to offer. In his free time Woody enjoys playing hockey, ride motorcycles both on and off-road, and tinkering with anything mechanical.

College credit enrollments surpass expectations

JAMIE BAUMANN
Northern Michigan Review

Charlevoix High School junior Rosalynd Cassidy is taking human anatomy, her third high school class for direct college credit through Baker College.

"I took these classes, because it saves money and gives me a head start on college. Taking a college class when you are in high school makes you feel smart."

Rosalynd plans to go to a medical school in the United Kingdom after she graduates. She is just one example of many students served by Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District who is taking advantage of early college credits.

Enrollments in early college, classes that students can take in high school for college credit, have increased from 70 in 2010 to more than 800 for this school year, according to Jim Rummer, Char-Em ISD director of career and technical education.

Char-Em helps 11 local school districts to give students early college options," said Jim Cooper, Char-Em ISD early college coordinator.

"Education isn't just about educating kids, but it's what they do with those skills," Cooper said. "A number of our students never had a notion about going on to school after high school."

"Our biggest barrier," added Rummer "is first generation college students. Our programs are bringing the conversation of going on to college to many families in which this student will be the first to attend college classes."

Cooper and Rummer have worked with local districts, local businesses and colleges to give students the opportunity to take college classes. They work with the Michigan College Access Network and the Local College Access Network to give students affordable, post-secondary opportunities while they are still in high school. Three years ago when the program began, the classes offered were primarily career and technical classes. However, as more colleges have become partners, the classes have expanded into general education classes.

"Geography and cost are two factors that have hindered our students from going on to college," Cooper said. The Early College Program has sought out college partnerships, negotiated for low tuition rates, and offered the classes locally in the school day and after school. Char-Em picks up the cost of career/technical education classes and local districts pay the tuition costs for the general education classes.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for students to try that first college class to see that they can succeed in it," Cooper said.

There are several ways to earn college credit while in high school. Students can take traditional advanced placement classes which colleges accept for credit. Students can take articulated credit classes, in which they follow a career/technical Could auto rules serve as a model for gun regulation?

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Are we an incurably violent society or is it just that there are some number of violent individuals in our society? Each time there is some unspeakable tragedy of killing in our country we face the question.

Did watching all those episodes of "Miami Vice" (I remember a particular one in which 26 actors, all bad guys, presumably, were killed) so inure us to violence that we are desensitized compared to folks without that exposure? Have we come to think of killing people as a way of solving personal or societal problems? Maybe it was those childhood Western movies in which dozens of actors (all bad guys) faked falling off their horses or clutched their chests and fell to the ground.

Certainly our country's history is filled with violent death on a large scale. Our Civil War ranks as one of the deadliest in any nation's history.

According to some accounts, about 30,000 people each year die in gun violence in our country. And it is certainly true that as a society we privately own more guns than any other country on Earth. Still, that's less than one death per year for each 7,000 guns. Can we take some solace in the thought that most of the guns available are not used to kill people?

It seems clear that individual action by each of us can hardly solve the problem. Even if every one of us carried our own personal weapon of choice at all times, the societal problem would not be solved.

The way society handles the problem of automobiles provides what may be a useful analogy for examining the firearms problem. The founding fathers could not have imagined our country filled with giant metal machines capable of traveling at the incredible speed of a mile a minute. We have learned to regulate such potentially dangerous vehicles. No one is prohibited from buying or selling an automobile, but we make sure that each one of them is registered, licensed, and in many states, inspected periodically to insure its safety. We prohibit people from driving at certain speeds, in certain places, we require insurance against accidents, we require training and licensing before allowing operation. We require manufacturers to install safety devices. In many communities we do not allow someone to store numerous vehicles even on their private property. The list of regulations is long.

The founding fathers could not have imagined automobiles, yet we manage to regulate them carefully and constitutionally, saving many lives by such actions. I am certain that the founding fathers could not have imagined semi-automatic rifles with fifty round magazines. Maybe we could learn to appropriately regulate those as well as we do automobiles.

LETTERS to the editor

Commissioners should recind resolution

Editor:

WATCH (Water And Air Team Charlevoix) has been active in protecting the environment of Charlevoix County for almost 30 years. We appreciate the jewel we have in Northern Michigan and we want to keep it that way. So we were very much alarmed at the recent decision of the Charlevoix County Commissioners to pass a resolution opposing U.N. Agenda 21, especially considering that it was done with little thought and with no research.

Agenda 21 is about sustainability, conservation and management of our natural resources for development, among other worth goals. We wonder why our commissioners are against that!

Many commissioners have been causing us great concern for some time with their habit of being against issues that would promote a more environmentally sound community, however we feel there is reason to be optimistic. With one unfortunate exception, the commissioners recently passed a resolution supporting the Boyne City Road Non-Motorized Trail. With two new commissioners coming in January there will likely be change for the better.

We have a suggestion for starting the year out right. We would like the commissioners to put the latest mistake behind them by passing a resolution rescinding the one on Agenda 21.

In the meantime we will continue to "reach out to them, and all day long."

Bridging our past with our future

LOOKING BACK...

As a shoal off the southern end of North Manitou Island southwest of Charlevoix began to grow larger in the early 20th century, the need for a lightship to guide maritime traffic through the Manitou Passage between the north and south islands and the mainland became apparent. So the first Manitou lightship, constructed in 1891, was placed in the waters in 1910 after having served up at White Shoals near the Straits of Mackinac. It lasted until 1926. The second served from 1926 to 1933, and the final one from 1934 to 1935 when the North Manitou Lighthouse was constructed and a lightship was no longer needed. During the winter months when ice covered the maritime lanes, one or more of these boats sought haven in Charlevoix, here the Manitou seen in Round Lake in late spring, until they could go out again. The Manitou often berthed at the U.S. Coast Guard buoy and supply depot on the upper channel with the Gray's Reef vessel. As automation gradually reduced the need for them to service replacement lighthouses, these once highly important guardians of the waters were phased out by the mid-1950s.

Esperance hosts benefit events for winter farm market

SHERI MCWHIRTER
Northern Michigan Review

Wine and specialty grocery shop Esperance on Charlevoix's northern side is toasting the season for the local winter farmers market.

Special wine tasting events are offered from noon-6 p.m. every Saturday this month, each event a fundraising benefit for the Charlevoix winter farmers market. The market takes place indoors on Thursdays at the Charlevoix Public Library.

"That is something we strongly believe in," said Suzanne Acharya, co-owner of Esperance.

The wine and specialty grocery business also operates a restaurant, Esperance Café, on site as well. The business uses local produce "through the season" and very much supports the local food movement, Acharya said.

"It's getting back to the fact we are what we eat," she said.

Through summer months, area farmers pay rental fee to set up a table or stall at the regular farmers market each week at East Park in downtown Charlevoix. But during the winter, farmers don't tend to reap the same kind of profits as they do during peak growing season. That's why the folks at Esperance opted to host these benefit wine tastings to raise the needed funds to pay for the library rental fees for the winter market, Acharya said.

"The goal is to raise $750 and we've already passed the $500 mark," she said in mid-December.

The remaining wine tastings to benefit the winter farmers market will take place on Dec. 22 and 29. Reservations are highly recommended for the growing events, Acharya said.

The $10 charge is shared 50/50 with the farmers market. Reservations can be made by calling Esperance at (231) 237-9300.

Acharya said since the events proved so popular, they may start them up again in January to raise money for another worthy local charitable organization, Acharya said.

American House buys Sunnybank

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

The Charelvoix Sunnybank Asisted Living center is one of two Northern Michigan Sunnybank facilities recently purchased by American House Senior Living.

American House Senior Living Communities have expanded into Northern Michigan, with the addition of Sunnybank Assisted Living. The acquisition, which became effective Dec. 14, will include two senior living properties, located at 2000 East Mitchell Rd., in Petoskey, and 615 Petoskey Ave., in Charlevoix, American House officials said in a news release issued earlier this week.

Sunnybank Assisted Living opened its doors in Petoskey, in 1999, under the leadership of Diane Gillette and Ruth Bellissimo. As former members of American House themselves, the pair brought their expertise to Northern Michigan. Following their success in Petoskey, Sunnybank Charlevoix opened in 2006. Not soon after, in July 2009, Diane Gillette succumbed to cancer. Her son, American House Chief Operating Officer Rob Gillette, has stepped in to carry on the family business.

"American House is and always has been a family business. I'm glad we have the opportunity to keep my mother's company in the family too," said Rob Gillette. "My mother and Ruth laid a great foundation here in Northern Michigan, with two caring and vibrant senior communities. I look forward to preserving their legacy, and celebrating the heritage of Sunnybank."

The acquisition of Sunnybank Assisted Living will bring the total number of American House locations to 32 statewide, further solidifying American House's status as the largest provider of senior housing in Michigan.

Both communities will include restaurant-style dining experiences, and a full life enrichment program, with as diverse activities, social opportunities and special

Libaray bond refinancing will save more than $400,000

The Charlevoix Public Library board will save more than $400,000 in interest costs thanks to its recent refinancing of the bonds originally sold in 2004 to fund the renovation of the new library used to pay for the cost of its current building.

Library director Valerie Meyerson said the refinancing of the bonds at this time generated a 2.06 percent true interest cost instead of the original 4.28 percent true interest cost. The total net cumulative savings of this change will generate a savings of $412,048 over the remaining life of the bonds for the district library's tax payers.

The bonds, set to mature in 2024, were sold to fund the renovation of the former Charlevoix Middle School building into what is now the Charlevoix Public Library. The bonds are paid through a millage that the district library levies each winter.

"This is great news for Charlevoix," Meyerson said, "This will mean an overall reduction in the millage that will have to be levied on our tax payers throughout the remaining life of the bonds."

Meyerson noted that the bond refinancing comes at an ideal time for the library because the decreases in taxable values in the city have kept the millage levy higher than the library board originally anticipated. The reduction will help ease the tax burden, she noted.

For more information about the finances at the library contact Meyerson at (231) 237-7360.

Regional Catholic high school board begins site search

JAMIE BAUMANN
Northern Michigan Review

After 18 months of planning and presentations, the Regional Catholic High School Committee is beginning the search for an appropriate site to house the 75,000 square-foot building that will house 350 seventh through 12th grade students.

The board members have put in countless hours planning for the school, doing interest surveys, gaining diocese support, and doing a market analysis, according to Deborah Gagnon one of the committee co-chairs.

"Our next steps are to hire an independent contractor to conduct a capital campaign feasibility study and to begin to search for a site within two to three miles of the U.S. 31 and 131 intersection," said co-chair Jeff Bacigalupi. "The capital feasibility study should take a few months, and we plan to start fundraising this summer."

The committee plans to do a capital campaign that will cover the projected $12 million cost of the building, site improvements, landscaping, furniture and equipment. The site is projected to include a gym, cafeteria, chapel, as well as classrooms and offices.

"The amount of land we will need depends on what is available and whether it is right downtown or not," Bacigalupi said. "It could vary from the smallest at two acres to a larger 20-acre site that could accommodate playing fields."

To get to this point, the committee presented to and received diocesan vickers' support in May. In June, they made presentations to all the priests and pastors in the region. They gained support to further explore the issue and present to parish councils and parishioners to gather local support which have been ongoing since June. They have developed an informational website at www.regionalcatholichigh.com.

> "The vision of the school is a truly competitive high school with good academics, co-curriculars and sports, modeled after St. Francis in Traverse City,"
> — Deborah Gagnon, committee co-chair

"We have had over 300 unique visitors to our website with an average of five minutes per visit," Marie Law, marketing volunteer for the committee said. "We also have 118 signed statements of support from our immediate region, as well as from Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and Colorado. There have even been comments from people with second homes in our area saying that if this educational option were available for their children, they would move here full-time."

The committee is continuing to gather statements of support which can be found on the website.

The current plan is to try to complete the building in the next three years. Dear Santa Claus,
What I want for Christmas is ... legos, a basketball, a american girl doll, an ipad. But what I really want for Christmas is for you to give people the Christmas Spirit and give little kids and everyone who doesn't have any food, toys, houses or even any clothes a toy for Christmas. I know Christmas isn't about the toy or getting. It's about giving, Jesus and family.

COUNCIL

Carlson explained to Gennett that the idea for the steering committee was Buday's, not his, and that it wasn't until recently that Buday was available to take on the project, as he offered to do in September for no charge to the city.

And when Gennett finished, downtown business owner Jodi Bingham, took her turn questioning the council on the process it is using. Bingham, whose business and residence are located directly across the street from the fireplace site, was among the first to raise objections to the project when work began. She also agreed to serve on the steering committee to represent those opposed to the project.

Speaking to the council Monday, Bingham questioned the council on several points.

Specifically she wanted to know where each council member stands in his or her position on the project. She said she's heard from many in the community that the council members are "dug in" on the matter and plan to move forward with the project regardless of what happens with the steering committee.

After several minutes of back-and-forth with council and Carlson, the council members all weighed in. Members Greg Stevens, Shane Cole, Dennis Kusina and Jill Picha all said generally that they have received many calls and emails from community members and generally the sentiments are about equally split between the "for" and "against." All four also said they still generally think the fireplace could be a nice amenity for the park, but they all said they are willing to listen to options — and if the consensus of the community is that it should not be built, they are willing to consider that option as well.

Council member Bryan Vollmer, was more pessimistic on the proposal saying that he's heard far more from people who are against the project and while he's not completely opposed to some kind of a project like a fireplace in the park, he conceded that the council may have made the wrong decision when it approved the project in August. He said at this point, he's not sure that any option short of reversing the decision will make everyone happy.

"At this point, my vote (on the fireplace) would be 'no,'" Vollmer said.

Under its rules of procedure, for the council to rescind a previous decision, the council would have to make two successful 2/3 votes. One would have to be on a motion to suspend the council rule against revisiting a decision after the next regular meeting has passed, and then a second would have to be on a motion to rescind the decision.

a sentence reduction under that section of the law in his years working as a prosecutor, he noted that his policy has been to typically not take a position on requests, such as work release, or other types of release — such as for a medical procedure, instead deferring to the judgement of the sheriff and the judge.

Schneider told the Courier that he, too, recalls few, if any requests for the 25 percent good behavior reduction, but noted that when prisoners make other requests, he typically researches with his corrections officers and other staff before weighing in on the request. He said in this case — as he noted in his letter — Veryser had been a good prisoner and he had no reason to oppose the request.

According to police and court documents, in March of 2010 Diocese of Gaylord officials asked Veryser to resign position as the school's principal after they said they had discovered that she had been misappropriating funds for her own use.

Veryser resigned, but in October of that year, she filed a lawsuit against the diocese claiming she had been wrongfully discharged from her position. Veryser claimed that she was being made the scapegoat for shoddy bookkeeping practices that existed long before she took the principal's job. The diocese not only denied Veryser's claims in its answer, but also counter-sued her for repayment of the money.

Around the same time, the Michigan State Police began a criminal investigation into the matter.

After an 18-month investigation, the criminal charges against Veryser were issued on Oct. 31, 2011. In all, in court documents, police say Veryser embezzled more than $100,000 from the school.

Crash

Two injured in Wed. crash

Two East Jordan residents were injured in a one-vehicle traffic crash south of Charlevoix Wednesday, Dec. 19.

Charlevoix County Sheriff's office officials identified the injured as the driver, Cleta Trumble, 69, and her husband and front seat passenger George Trumble, 67.

Both were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by East Jordan and Charlevoix ambulances respectively, where they were treated for their injuries.

Deputies said the crash happened at about 6:30 p.m. at the intersection of Ranney Road and M-66 in Eveline Township.

Authorities said Cleta Trumble was driving her 1998 Ford Windstar minivan southbound on M-66 when she lost control at Ranney Road. Her vehicle left the roadway to the right, struck a utility pole guy wire, then a tree. Authorities said Cleta Trumble complained of pain in her legs while George Trumble, complained of back pain and a laceration to his lower lip.

Deputies were assisted at the scene by the Charlevoix EMS, East Jordan EMS, and the East Jordan Fire Department.

program. If they earn a "B" or better, North Central Michigan College or Ferris State University will award college credit, as they continue in these programs at the colleges. Direct credit classes are offered for credit both at the high school and college level. Students usually take these classes during their school day, and they are taught by high school teachers who have also been credentialed as college instructors. Partner colleges for these classes in local high schools include Baker College, Ferris State University and North Central Michigan College.

In direct credit classes, students' work is recorded on both their high school and a college transcript from the partner school. College credits may be transferred to other colleges, depending upon the receiving school's transfer policies.

More and more colleges are accepting the direct credits," said Charlevoix High School Principal Suzanne Klinger. "When the schools come here to recruit students for their colleges, we tell them that the student has taken direct credit classes and ask how these will be handled. Their response is taken into consideration as the student is trying to figure out which college to attend."

A direct credit partnership with Baker College is responsible for a total of 643 of the direct credit student enrollments in seven local districts. Classes offered include oral communications, sociology, medical terminology, CAD I and II, personal finance, introduction to business, accounting I and II, structure and function of the human body, human anatomy and physiology, MicroSoft Word, Microsoft Access, MicroSoft PowerPoint, intermediate algebra, pre-calculus, and American political systems. Charlevoix, Ellsworth, Alanson, Boyne Falls, East Jordan, Central Lake and Pellston high schools partner with Baker College.

Ferris State University partners with Boyne City to offer business management and construction trades.

North Central Michigan College offers direct credit classes in body systems and disease, Microsoft Office, personal finance and accounting at Boyne City High School. North Central partners with Petoskey High School to offer marketing, child psychology, Microsoft Office, PC software and hardware, introduction to programming and accounting. The college works with Harbor Springs High School to offer personal finance.

A group of local manufacturers, school personnel and college representatives designed a business and manufacturing program offered at Charlevoix High School and Boyne City High School. These classes can lead to Ferris State and North Central certificate programs.

"Local businessmen told us that if you can implement programs that certify that kids have these skills, we'll hire those kids," Cooper said.

"We work with the Northern Lakes Economic Development Alliance. We ask them, how can we help you get a kid qualified to work in areas that you need to hire? The CAD I and II classes bring kids through the process of design to manufacturing and are a result of trying to meet the local business needs, so our kids graduate and have local jobs," Cooper said.

Some local businesses will not only hire the students, but help them with tuition to further their educations," Cooper said.

"While we are thrilled with the success of the direct college credit programs so far," Cooper said, "as the numbers of students increase, so do the costs to Char-Em and the local districts to meet their tuition expenses. We are now starting to figure out how to raise funds, or contact foundations to help us fulfill the promise to these kids to pay their direct college credit tuition."

ogy bond.

"This will allow us to address many of the mixed grade level issues the high school is experiencing," wrote district technology director Scott Mays in a memo to the board.

The 130 iPads will be added to the 370 the district is already using. These are distributed across students, staff and board members, said Mays' memo.

"After approximately 30 school days of classroom use, we are seeing some very positive results and continue to refine the process to make sure the initiative is successful," said Mays.

Finally, the board approved the hiring of Pete Scholten for the varsity girls soccer coach and Brandon Webb for the position of special education aide.

"He has been subbing in that position for some time," said district superintendent Robert Gendron.

can take advantage of this beautiful area, like ski teams, rowing or sailing," Bacigalupi said.

Informational presentations to include a discussion of the progress to date on the reopening of a Catholic high school in this region, a review of the market analysis compiled by the committee, and a discussion of what this high school could potentially offer the children in local communities are slated in January. One meeting is at St. Mary Parish in Charlevoix at 10 a.m. on Sunday, Jan. 20. On Sunday, Jan. 27, presentations will be held at St. Augustine Parish in Boyne Falls at 10:15 a.m. and at St. Matthew Parish in Boyne City at 12:15 p.m. All meetings are open to the public.

"We would like to raise enough in the capital campaign to pay for the high school outright," Gagnon said.

They plan to support the operational costs of the school with ongoing fundraising, tuition, an endowment, profitable ministries and ongoing parish support, according to Gagnon.

Making a difference

Northwest Academy students recently took part in a bullying assembly, said middle and high school social studies teacher Christina Eanes. "Students have even atsrted to commit random acts of kindness in our school and community," she said. The students pictured are reading stories to each other about a time in their lives when they were bullied, and discussing how the experience affected them. COUNCIL

Carlson explained to Gennett that the idea for the steering committee was Buday's, not his, and that it wasn't until recently that Buday was available to take on the project, as he offered to do in September for no charge to the city.

And when Gennett finished, downtown business owner Jodi Bingham took her turn questioning the council on the process it is using. Bingham, whose business and residence are located directly across the street from the fireplace site, was among the first to raise objections to the project when work began. She also agreed to serve on the steering committee to represent those opposed to the project.

Speaking to the council Monday, Bingham questioned the council on several points.

Specifically she wanted to know where each council member stands in his or her position on the project. She said she's heard from many in the community that the council members are "dug in" on the matter and plan to move forward with the project regardless of what happens with the steering committee.

After several minutes of back-and-forth with council and Carlson, the council members all weighed in. Members Greg Stevens, Shane Cole, Dennis Kusina and Jill Picha all said generally that they have received many calls and emails from community members and generally the sentiments are about equally split between the "for" and "against." All four also said they still generally think the fireplace could be a nice amenity for the park, but they all said they are willing to listen to options — and if the consensus of the community is that it should not be built, they are willing to consider that option as well.

Council member Bryan Vollmer was more pessimistic on the proposal saying that he's heard far more from people who are against the project and while he's not completely opposed to some kind of a project like a fireplace in the park, he conceded that the council may have made the wrong decision when it approved the project in August. He said at this point, he's not sure that any option short of reversing the decision will make everyone happy.

"At this point, my vote (on the fireplace) would be 'no,'" Vollmer said.

Under its rules of procedure, for the council to rescind a previous decision, the council would have to make two successful 2/3 votes. One would have to be on a motion to suspend the council rule against revisiting a decision after the next regular meeting has passed, and then a second would have to be on a motion to rescind the decision.

a sentence reduction under that section of the law in his years working as a prosecutor; he noted that his policy has been to typically not take a position on requests, such as work release, or other types of release — such as for a medical procedure, instead deferring to the judgement of the sheriff and the judge.

Schneider told the Courier that he, too, recalls few, if any requests for the 25 percent good behavior reduction, but noted that when prisoners make other requests, he typically researches with his corrections officers and other staff before weighing in on the request. He said in this case — as he noted in his letter — Veryser had been a good prisoner and he had no reason to oppose the request.

According to police and court documents, in March of 2010 Diocese of Gaylord officials asked Veryser to resign position as the school's principal after they said they had discovered that she had been misappropriating funds for her own use.

Veryser resigned, but in October of that year, she filed a lawsuit against the diocese claiming she had been wrongfully discharged from her position. Veryser claimed that she was being made the scapegoat for shoddy bookkeeping practices that existed long before she took the principal's job. The diocese not only denied Veryser's claims in its answer, but also counter-sued her for repayment of the money.

Around the same time, the Michigan State Police began a criminal investigation into the matter.

After an 18-month investigation, the criminal charges against Veryser were issued on Oct. 31, 2011. In all, in court documents, police say Veryser embezzled more than $100,000 from the school.

Crash

Two injured in Wed. crash

Two East Jordan residents were injured in a one-vehicle traffic crash south of Charlevoix Wednesday, Dec. 19.

Charlevoix County Sheriff's office officials identified the injured as the driver, Cleta Trumble, 69, and her husband and front seat passenger George Trumble, 67.

Both were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by East Jordan and Charlevoix ambulances respectively, where they were treated for their injuries.

Deputies said the crash happened at about 6:30 p.m. at the intersection of Ranney Road and M-66 in Eveline Township.

Authorities said Cleta Trumble was driving her 1998 Ford Windstar minivan southbound on M-66 when she lost control at Ranney Road. Her vehicle left the roadway to the right, struck a utility pole guy wire, then a tree. Authorities said Cleta Trumble complained of pain in her legs while George Trumble complained of back pain and a laceration to his lower lip.

Deputies were assisted at the scene by the Charlevoix EMS, East Jordan EMS, and the East Jordan Fire Department.

program. If they earn a "B" or better, North Central Michigan College or Ferris State University will award college credit, as they continue in these programs at the colleges. Direct credit classes are offered for credit both at the high school and college level. Students usually take these classes during their school day and they are taught by high school teachers who have also been credentialed as college instructors. Partner colleges for these classes in local high schools include Baker College, Ferris State University and North Central Michigan College.

In direct credit classes, students' work is recorded on both their high school and a college transcript from the partner school. College credits may be transferred to other colleges, depending upon the receiving school's transfer policies.

"More and more colleges are accepting the direct credits," said Charlevoix High School Principal Suzanne Klinger. "When the schools come here to recruit students for their colleges, we tell them that the student has taken direct-credit classes and ask how these will be handled. Their response is taken into consideration as the student is trying to figure out which college to attend."

A direct-credit partnership with Baker College is responsible for a total of 643 of the direct credit student enrollments in seven local districts. Classes offered include oral communications, sociology, medical terminology, CAD I and II, personal finance, introduction to business, accounting I and II, structure and function of the human body, human anatomy and physiology, MicroSoft Word, Microsoft Access, MicroSoft PowerPoint, intermediate algebra, pre-calculus, and American political systems. Charlevoix, Ellsworth, Alanson, Boyne Falls, East Jordan, Central Lake and Pellston high schools partner with Baker College.

Ferris State University partners with Boyne City to offer business management and construction trades.

North Central Michigan College offers direct credit classes in body systems and disease, Microsoft Office, personal finance and accounting at Boyne City High School. North Central partners with Petoskey High School to offer marketing, child psychology, Microsoft Office, PC software and hardware, introduction to programming and accounting. The college works with Harbor Springs High School to offer personal finance.

A group of local manufacturers, school personnel and college representatives designed a business and manufacturing program offered at Charlevoix High School and Boyne City High School. These classes can lead to Ferris State and North Central certificate programs.

"Local businessmen told us that if you can implement programs that certify that kids have these skills, we'll hire those kids," Cooper said.

"We work with the Northern Lakes Economic Development Alliance. We ask them, how can we help you get a kid qualified to work in areas that you need to hire? The CAD I and II classes bring kids through the process of design to manufacturing and are a result of trying to meet the local business needs, so our kids graduate and have local jobs," Cooper said.

Some local businesses will not only hire the students, but help them with tuition to further their educations," Cooper said.

"While we are thrilled with the success of the direct college credit programs so far," Cooper said, "as the numbers of students increase, so do the costs to Char-Em and the local districts to meet their tuition expenses. We are now starting to figure out how to raise funds, or contact foundations to help us fulfill the promise to these kids to pay their direct college credit tuition."

ogy bond.

"This will allow us to address many of the mixed grade level issues the high school is experiencing," wrote district technology director Scott Mays in a memo to the board.

The 130 iPads will be added to the 370 the district is already using. These are distributed across students, staff and board members," said Mays' memo.

"After approximately 30 school days of classroom use, we are seeing some very positive results and continue to refine the process to make sure the initiative is successful," said Mays.

Finally, the board approved the hiring of Pete Scholten for the varsity girls soccer coach and Brandon Webb for the position of special education aide.

"He has been subbing in that position for some time," said district superintendent Robert Gendron.

can take advantage of this beautiful area, like ski teams, towing or sailing," Bacigalupi said.

Informational presentations to include a discussion of the progress to date on the reopening of a Catholic high school in this region, a review of the market analysis compiled by the committee, and a discussion of what this high school could potentially offer the children in local communities are slated in January. One meeting is at St. Mary Parish in Charlevoix at 10 a.m. on Sunday, Jan. 20. On Sunday, Jan. 27 presentations will be held at St. Augustine Parish in Boyne Falls at 10:15 a.m. and at St. Matthew Parish in Boyne City at 12:15 p.m. All meetings are open to the public.

"We would like to raise enough in the capital campaign to pay for the high school outright," Gagnon said.

They plan to support the operational costs of the school with ongoing fundraising, tuition, an endowment, profitable ministries and ongoing parish support, according to Gagnon.

Further information about the school can be found at www.regionalcatholichighschool.com or by emailing regionalcatholichighschool@gmail.com.

Payback time

Rayders down rival Ramblers in Lake Michigan Conference opener

DREW KOCHANNY
Northern Michigan Review

BOYNE CITY — The last time the Charlevoix High School boys' basketball team met up against rival Boyne City, the Ramblers sent the Rayders home for the season.

That matchup — one in which Boyne City won 71-60 in last season's Class C district meeting — apparently resonated on the minds of Charlevoix's team for far too long.

On Friday, Dec. 14, payback was severed as Charlevoix downed Boyne City, 51-40, at the Boyne City High School gym in the first Lake Michigan Conference game for both schools!

"I think every game in this rivalry is considered a payback game," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "They got the better of us in districts the last few years and so I think that's always on the back of our mind."

Senior guard Charlie Hamilton led the Rayders in scoring once again, posting 16 points including four 3-pointers. Junior forward Zach Hankins added an inside presence for the Rayders, bringing in 10 points and 11 rebounds.

"I think it's a great way to start out the conference run and it's a big win," Wood said. "Our conference is a tough conference, so every win is going to be critical."

Charlevoix, 3-0 overall, 1-0 league, and Boyne City, 1-2 overall, 0-1 league, went shot-for-shot throughout the first quarter, but Rayders junior Justin Pearl pushed Charlevoix to a 13-11 lead on a deep 3-pointer to end the first.

The Rayders opened the second on a 9-0 run with five points off the stroke of Hamilton.

Boyne pushed back to close the quarter on an 8-2 run, however, leaving the game at 24-19 at the half.

"I thought our enthusiasm was great early, we had a good crowd and a good atmosphere," Boyne City coach Nick Redman said. "We just have to do a better job of playing against physical players."

Neither team came out strong in the third as the first points wouldn't come until

GIRLS VARSITY BASKETBALL

Despite early lead, Rayders fall to Boyne

BOYNE CITY — Rainy McCune's 23 points led the Boyne City girls' basketball team past Charlevoix, 65-39, Friday in the Lake Michigan Conference meeting.

"I am so happy and proud of our girls," Boyne City coach Kevin Fitzpatrick said. "They had a tough week, they've had a tough couple of weeks. This is probably the best we've played."

Charlevoix, 2-3 overall, 1-1 league, led at the end of the first, 12-8, but weren't able to hold on to the lead.

Boyne, 2-5 overall, 1-0 league, would go on a late second quarter run to grab the lead, 22-20 at the half on a last minute basket.

The second half was all Ramblers as McCune would give the Ramblers a 40-24 lead at the end of three, thanks in part to a pair of big 3-pointers by McCune and junior Taylor Baker.

"We are still learning how to win," Fitzpatrick said. "Each and every player stepped up. Rainy is a very skilled player and has to do a lot of things for us. Tonight she played within herself."

The fourth would again be dominated by the Ramblers, who picked up just their second win of the season.

Charlevoix senior Sydney Carlson led the Rayders with nine points and six rebounds. Madeline Boss and Ellie way had seven points and five steals each and Karley Pearsall had five rebounds and Katie Hybl had five steals.

"We will continue to grow as a team in practice," Rayder coach Liz Shaw said. "Change doesn't happen overnight but these girls are fighters and willing to work hard to make good things happen. It's early in the season and I am confident we will find our stride as we continue to move forward."

Weather permitting, the Lady Rayders are slated to host Kalkaska on Friday, Dec. 21.

Around the conference

In other recent Lake Michigan Conference girls basketball action, Elk Rapids defeated East Jordan 50-46 on Friday, Dec. 14 in East Jordan. Michelle Costa and Rachelle Hintz each scored 12 points to lead Elk Rapids While Valerie Peters scored 22 points to lead all scorers while Tori Goodrich added 10 points and five rebounds and Allie Sutton had five rebounds for the Red Devils.

East Jordan trailed 27-24 going into halftime.

The Red Devils kept the game close in the second half, but were unable to trim the Elks lead.

DREW KOCHANNY/NEWS-REVIEW

Charlevoix's Elizabeth Way plays defense on a Boyne City player during the Rayder's game against the Ramblers on Friday, Dec. 14.

"The difference in the game was offensive rebounds," East Jordan coach Steve Hines said. "We shot better from the floor and from the line and played a good defensive game, it was our best of the season."

East Jordan is 0-4 overall, 0-1 league.

Also on Friday, Dec. 14, Grayling defeated Harbor Springs 66-45 in Grayling.

Hailey Whittaker had 11 points and Maddie Benardo added 10 points as the Vikings improved to 3-0 overall, 1-0 league. For Harbor Springs, 2-3 overall, 0-2 league, Katie Barkley had a game-high 21 points, while Morgan Reeves added seven and Maddy Savard finished with six points.

BOYS JV BASKETBALL

JV bounces back from tough loss with two wins

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The Charlevoix Rayder boys junior varsity basketball team bounced back in fine style from a heart-breaking last-second loss last week with two convincing wins over conference foes.

On Thursday, Dec. 13, the Rayders hosted Boyne City winning that contest 71-50.

Charlevoix posted a small lead early and then gradually widened the gap as the game progressed. The Rayders led 15-12 at the end of the first quarter, but had stretched it to a 40-29 margin by halftime. At the end of the third, Charlevoix led by a 55-39 margin.

The Rayders were led by Nick Plude who had 19 points, Ryan Joy who had 15 and Austin Putman with 13.

Charlevoix coach Bryan Hawkins was happy to see his players come back strong after a tough loss.

"We came out with a strong start. They had a lot of energy. I think the felt like they left something on the table against Gaylord," Hawkins said.

He noted that a defense change by the Ramblers from man-to-man to zone, slowed the tempo of the game some and that the game was closer than the score might make it appear.

"It wasn't until the last three minutes or so of the game that we really had a comfortable lead.

The Ramblers were led by Tanner Kruzel with 17 and Dalton Gardener with 10.

Wednesday, the Rayders Traveled to Elk Rapids, where they defeated the Elks 70-55.

Charlevoix, now 3-1 overall and 2-0 in the league, were led by Putman with 15, Nate Moon with 14, Will Telgenhof with 11 and Plude with 10.

Again the Rayders jumped out to an early lead and never looked back. Charlevoix led 18-11 at the end of the first, 35-21 at the half and 42-32 ad the end of the third before blowing it open with a 28-point fourth quarter.

Hawkins said his team again came out with fire in their bellies holding the Elks scoreless until about two minutes remained in the first quarter.

Then the fouls started piling up — for both teams, but especially for Charlevoix. The teams combined for 67 free throws on the night — 38 for Elk Rapids and 29 for Charlevoix. Again, Hawkins said the opponents kept themselves in the game until the fourth quarter when the Rayders' press started paying dividends.

Hawkins said he's happy with the team's efforts early in the season, but noted that they have a number of things to work on, including improving play from the bench.

"We've seen some good things, but we are still looking to put together four quarters of Rayder basketball.

The JV squad is set to play Kalkaska, weather permitting, on Friday, Dec. 21 and then will be off until after the Christmas break.

BOYS FRESHMEN BASKETBALL

Fouls plague Rayders in loss to Ramblers

Early foul trouble and some timely outside shooting by their opponents hampered the Charlevoix Rayder boys freshmen basketball team in a 48-39 loss to conference rival Boyne City on the Ramblers home court on Friday, Dec. 14.

The game was close early, as the teams finished the first quarter knotted at 13 each. Boyne City was able to open up a small lead, taking a 24-18 margin into halftime. That's also when the foul trouble started for the Rayders.

Charlevoix coach Joe Solomon noted that two starters, Alex Kleiber and Walker Drost had three fouls going into the third quarter, which prompted Solomon to npt for a zone defense to help protect his players in foul trouble.

"Unfortunately Boyne made us pay by hitting several open shots including two wide open three-pointers, and on the offensive end we weren't able to convert," Solomon said.

Although the Ramblers outscored the Rayders 17-4 in the fourth quarter, Charlevoix didn't go down without a fight.

"I was very proud of the way my players responded in the fourth quarter," Solomon said. "They never hung their heads or got down on each other and were determined to come back. We forced several turnovers with our full court pressure, outscored them 17-10, but came up a little short."

Walker Drost and Jordan Adkins led the Rayders with nine points each and Alex Kleiber and Ben Boss chipped in with seven each.

The freshmen team's next game is Friday, Jan. 4 at home against Elk Rapids.

PAYBACK

nearly halfway through the quarter when Boyne City's Steven Halstead hit a deep 3-pointer.

Hamilton struck right back for Charlevoix with a three of his own, making it a 27-22 game. The quarter would end at 29-27 Charlevoix.

Hankins would take over in the fourth scoring eight points as the Rayders started the final quarter on a 20-5 run, giving Charlevoix a 49-32 lead.

"I was really proud of him tonight," Wood said of his 6-foot 8 forward Hankins. "He used his length to his advantage and he's going to be helpful to us as the year goes on."

Boyne City wouldn't catch the Rayders from there.

Senior Tanner Catt added 14 points on the night for the Rayders.

For Boyne City, sophomore Curey Redman finished with nine as did junior Brad Fouchia. Junior Ryan Carson had seven points for Boyne City.

It's a long time between now and their next meeting, Feb. 1, but for now, payback has been served. Wood knows the next time the two face off they'll need to be prepared for payback coming from the Ramblers.

"Its always fun to go against (Boyne City). It's a battle every time," Wood said. "It's been a rivalry that's stood for a long time."

The Rayders will have one more game before the Christmas break when they host (weather permitting), Kalkaska on Friday, Dec. 21.

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVCIX COURIER

City of Charlevoix Electric Department crews work in the alley that runs between Park and Clinton streets Friday, Dec. 21, after heavy, wet snow combined with high winds from a winter storm brought down branches and power lines in the alley. Power was out to a section of the downtown, including the Charlevoix County Building and the Oleson's plaza for some time Friday.

Bringing down the year in style

Charlevoix set to host inaugural New Year's 'Bridge Drop'

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

New York City has its Ball Drop, Traverse City has it Cherry Drop and now Charlevoix has its own New Year's celebration event: "Charlevoix Bridge Drop -- A New Year's Celebration"

As its name implies, the event will culminate shortly before midnight New Year's Eve with raising Memorial Bridge (Charlevoix's well-known drawbridge on U.S. 31) and dropping it, timed to close a the stroke of midnight. But the event is planned to actually be a weekend full of special events in the community starting on Friday, Dec. 28

The event's creators Rick Randall and Amanda Wilkin said the event is intended to draw people from near and far to the community to enjoy its many offerings and an opportunity for the community to gather together to celebrate.

One of the key elements of the event will be the sale of wristbands for $5 that will give purchasers special privileges at participating locations around town during the weekend. Proceeds from the wristband sales will be used to offset costs of the event and to create a pool of seed money for next year's event.

Although the list of participating businesses was still growing at the Graphic's press time, the wristbands will get purchasers special discounts at area merchants and other benefits such as a free group ski lesson at Mount McSauba on New Year's Eve, a deck party at the Weathervane Restaurant and a beach party at the Charlevoix Community Pool on Dec. 30. The BASES Teen Center organization will host a showing of the movie "The Frontier Boys" (which was filmed largely in the Charlevoix Area) on New Year's Eve. Doors for the movie will open at 8:30 p.m. with admission set at $3 for those with bracelets, and $5 for those without them

Fireplace most burning story of 2012

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

As 2012 draws to a close, the Charlevoix Courier took a look back at the top five stories that made headlines in the Charlevoix Area over the past year.

Community fireplace controversy

No year-end wrap up of notable Charlevoix-area stories for the year would be complete if it did not include, at its top the ongoing strife in the city surrounding a proposal to construct a community fireplace on the western edge of East Park.

The controversy has it origins in a proposal first brought to the city council at a meeting in early July by city resident John Winn on behalf of a anonymous donor. The donor wished to pay for the construction of a natural gas-fueled outdoor community fireplace to be constructed in the park's Plaza B (located at the top of the top of the steps leading into the park from Bridge Street about halfway between Mason and Clinton streets. Plans called for the structure to be 8-feet wide at its base and taper to a four-foot width at the top of the chimney, which would be about 20 feet tall.

The anonymous donor, a man Winn described as in his 80s and a cancer patient, was eager for the project to take place and made a condition of his offer that the structure be completed in time for Apple Festival in mid-October.

The council ultimately approved the proposal at a special meeting that took place on Aug. 9. The uproar about the project began days later when crews began preparing the site for construction, which included removing a tree. Soon after petitions sprung up asking the council to stop the project. These were followed by city council meetings that drew well more than 100 audience members, many voicing vehement opposition to the project. Among the most voiced of the opponent's complaints were that the fireplace would block views of the park and Round Lake, that the then-estimated $6,700 annual cost for natural gas would be a waste of money, that the fireplace did not fit well into the overall design and feel of the park, and many more.

In response to the outcry, in September the council put construction on hold until spring, taking advantage of offers from architect Mark Buday to serve as a consultant on the project and an offer from the donor that he would be willing to move the construction deadline back to the spring and consider design and location options.

Since then the mayor has appointed a steering committee to provide input to Buday has he crafts his recommendations to the council.

But the council's action to put the project on hold hasn't been enough for some. Three city residents have initiated recall proceedings against three of the six council members, Jill Picha, Bryan Vollmer and Dennis Kusina. The petition language, which was approved by the county election commissioner earlier this month, accuses all three council members (along with the rest of the council of violating the Open Meetings Act when they meet for the special meeting on Aug. 9 at which the fireplace project was approved

The petition sponsors have until the end of January to collect the necessary number of signatures to force a recall election.

Pure Charlevoix

Charlevoix has been a popular summer destination for tourists and resorters for many, many years. But this year the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau was looking for a way to kick that popularity into overdrive

Noting that many of the people who visit Charlevoix and the surrounding area tend to be the same people year-to-year, the bureau was looking for a way to reach new people and entice them to pay a visit. The bureau's board found their answer in taking advantage of an opportunity to partner with the now well-known Pure Michigan program.

The bureau, which gets most of its funding from fees charged on hotel and motel room rentals, along with some help from some other organizations and businesses invested $20,000 (which was matched by the state program) into a Pure Michigan radio advertising campaign

In addition to listings on the state's well-used Pure Michigan website, the centerpiece of the campaign was a Charlevoix-specific radio ad recorded by Michigan native actor Tim Allen in the Pure Michigan style that aired for several weeks in the late spring and early summer in downstate markets outside of Detroit including Kalamazoo, Lansing, Saginaw, and Flint

The bureau's board stayed away from the Detroit and Chicago markets because they are much more expensive

And by all accounts, both anecdotal and statistical, the campaign worked well

In fact, state officials reported last month at the bureau's annual meeting that in the wake of the campaign, "clicks" on the bureau's website by more than 1,000 percent this year. Many in the local lodging industry reported about the campaign from guests.

Two injured in storm-related crash

Charlevoix County Sheriff's officials say the winter storm that hit Northern Michigan last week contributed to a two-vehicle traffic crash south of Charlevoix that sent two people to the hospital.

Sheriff Don Schneider said the crash happened at about 7:40 a.m. Thursday, December 20, on U.S. 31 South near Ferry Road in Norwood Township.

Authorities said Lisa Taylor, 51, of Petoskey was southbound on U.S. 31 in a 2002 Ford Escape when she lost control of her vehicle on icy roads and struck a 2007 Chevy Monte Carlo driven by Ruth Ann Lucas, 35, of Charlevoix who was traveling northbound on U.S. 31. Michael Lucas, her seven year old son, was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital where he was treated for his injuries. Also transported to the hospital was, Sara Lynn Taylor, a passenger in the Taylor vehicle.

The crash remains under investigation. The City of Charlevoix EMS responded along with the Charlevoix City Fire Department.

Schneider is encouraging all drivers to use their headlights during inclement weather and proceed with caution when emergency vehicles and first responders are present.

City council scales back on 2013 airport project

Public hearing on redevelopment liquor licenses set

STEVE ZUCKER
Courier Editor

The Charlevoix City Council recently decided to follow its staff's recommendation to scale back an airport ramp improvement project, citing concerns about budgeting for matching funds for a host of pending projects at the airport.

The city had been planning to undertake an apron expansion and improvement project at the airport in 2013 and a terminal expansion project in 2014.

However, city manager Rob Straebel told the council at its Dec. 17 meeting that city staff has been in discussion of those plans recently and is concerned about the how much the city would have to dip into its cash reserves to pay for the project.

Although 95 percent of both projects is expected to be paid for by the Federal Aviation Administration, the projects are hig enough that just the 5 percent city match would hig a big hit on the reserve fund.

Straebel explained that if constructed as proposed currently, the $2.7 million apron project would cost the city about $135,000 in matching funds next year and the terminal expansion project could be another $100,000-$200,000 the following year.

Straebel said he and city treasurer Rick Brandi have concerns about dipping that much in the city's cash reserves that currently stand at about $1.1 million — especially in light of uncertainty surrounding upcoming revenue from property taxes, the state legislature's elimination of the personal property tax and other concerns.

Straebel said as an alternative, city staff is proposing to scale back significantly on the apron project for now. He said that although something will need to be done with that area in coming years, there is no emergent situation. Instead the city would proceed with a project to move its aviation fuel dispenser and at the same time correct some drainage issues in the same area. The city's cost for that project would be around $10,000, Straebel estimated. The city would also allocate $10,000 to $15,000 for final design work for the terminal expansion project, with plans to do that project in 2014.

The city manager said the move would allow the city to likely be able to proceed with the terminal expansion, viewed by most as a more pressing need, without bonding to pay for the work.

The council approved the change in plans by consensus.

In other business, the council introduced a proposed city ordinance that would address how the city will handle requests for redevelopment liquor licenses in the future.

Earlier this year, a downtown restaurant owner came to the council asking for its blessing for an application to the Michigan Liquor Control Commission for a special "redevelopment" license that is allowed in downtown areas under certain conditions relating to investments made on the specific property and in the district. When the request came before council several downtown restaurant owners who currently have standard liquor licenses expressed concerns about the city setting a precedent of allowing such licenses, citing concerns about competition — especially in the particularly lean off seasons.

The mayor appointed a committee to review the program and make recommendations for a proposed ordinance.

In giving a brief overview of the ordinance at the Dec. 17 meeting, Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority Executive Director Keith Carey explained there were additional requirements that some committee members wished to add to the ordinance, (such as taking into consideration how long a business has been in operation) but were pared back on the advice of the city attorney because there was no basis in the liquor law to which those requirements could be attributed.

Some of the requirements include:

— The applicant must have some ownership interest in the property where the business is located.

— The applicant business must be engaged in dining, entertainment or recreation.

— The business must have a seating capacity of at least 25 seats.

— The applicant must have made at least $75,000 in investments into the property.

— The applicant must have made an effort to obtain standard liquor licenses.

— The council may consider the extent to which the business will contribute a new or unique choice to the mix of businesses in the downtown.

— The council may also consider the extent to which the business will promote economic growth in a manner consistent with goals, plans or policies in place for the downtown district, such as a master plan.

The council set a public hearing for the ordinance for its Monday, Jan. 7 meeting.

The council also approved a contract with MDC Contract for $185,652 to reconstruct the street and underground infrastructure for the section of Clinton Street from Grant to Park streets next year. The approval was contingent upon council giving its final approval to the street design — especially a traffic island that is proposed for the intersection of Park and Clinton. Engineers propose to build the island to make the angled intersection safer, however some property owners in the area have expressed concerns about how the design will affect their coming and going and parking. City staff was expecting to meet with those property owners and bring options for that portion of the project hack to the council.

Snyder signs equipment tax phase out

Area municipalities say they will be hurt

Governor Rick Snyder signed legislation Thursday, Dec. 20, to phase out several hundred million dollars in taxes businesses annually pay on equipment.

The Michigan Legislature voted recently to repeal the industrial personal property tax during a marathon meeting in the final hours of the legislative session.

Snyder and supporters say the move encourages economic growth. Opponents counter it doesn't replace all the money the tax generates for local governments.

The bill would reimburse a portion of the revenue currently raised through the tax on industries through special local assessments.

Althought Charlevoix City officials won't begin extensive budget discussions for the 2013-14 fiscal year until after the new year, officials with the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority have already said the repeal of the tax could make next year's budget tighter.

In a letter to State Senator Howard Walker, R-Traverse City, and State Representative Greg MacMaster, R-Kewadin, East Jordan City Manager Chris Yonker expressed his concerns about the legislation.

Personal Property Taxes bring $262,000 of revenue to the city of East Jordan, or about 16 percent of revenue in the city's general fund. Twenty-two percent of total tax revenue for the city comes from the tax on industrial and commercial equipment.

"Loss of any of this revenue amounts to nothing more than a tax shift from business and industry to our residents and is essentially an unfunded mandate from the state to the citizens of East Jordan," wrote Yonker.

Under the laws, a phase-out of the tax on manufacturing personal property begins in 2016 and all manufacturing personal property will be exempt starting in 2023.

Smaller taxpayers will be exempt from the tax starting in 2014.

Governor signs bill modifying recall process

It's unclear if the law will affect current city council recall efforts

Last week Michigan Gov. Rick Snyder signed legislation giving people less time to collect signatures to recall officials and raising the requirements for language to appear on recall petitions.

The two bills that the Republican governor signed Thursday, Dec. 20, won approval recently during the Republican-controlled Legislature's lame duck session.

It's possible that two of the changes to the state's recall law could have an effect here in Charlevoix, where the county election commission recently approved recall petition language for three of the six members of the Charlevoix City Council.

One change reduces the number of days a signature on a recall petition is valid from 90 to 60.

The second, and perhaps possibly more notable change is that the new law now requires petition language to not only be clear but "factual."

Previously, the law only required that the county election commission determine if the language is sufficiently clear to allow both the people being recalled, and those signing the petition to understand the reasons for the recall. The law previously did not require any findings about the factual-ness of the language.

That could come into play in the three Charlevoix City Council recall election efforts.

The main crux of all three petitions, which seek to recall council members Dennis Kusina, Bryan Vullmer and Jill Picha, is that they along with the rest of the council violated the Open Meetings Act when the council conducted a special meeting on Aug. 9. During that meeting the council voted unanimously to approve a proposal from an anonymous donor who wished to pay for the construction of an outdoor community fireplace in East Park. Since its approval, the fireplace has been a hotly-contested topic between the council and a group of residents who oppose the project.

Although city clerk Carol Ochs has said the meeting was properly posted more than 48 hours in advance, and the city attorney recently opined that the meeting did not violate the Open Meetings Act, the recall petition sponsors still claim the meeting violated the act.

Although the bills, signed by Snyder on Dec. 20 were to take immediate effect, since the language of the petitions has already been approved, it's not clear if the language will now be subject to the new requirement to be "factual."

The new law does have a provision providing that petitions already approved for circulation when the bill takes effect may still proceed, however, that language is under the section dealing with a change to the time during which elected officials are exempt from recall.

Previously no elected official could be recalled in the first or last six months of his or her current term. The bill now differentiates between officials who have two-year and four-year terms. While the exemption remains the same for officials serving two-year terms (such as the city council), now, those serving in four-year terms cannot be recalled in the first or last year of their terms.

Contacted Monday via email, county clerk Cherie Browe said she's not certain yet what, if any impact the new laws will have on the current recall efforts. Browe said she will check with state election officials for direction on the matter.

Because of the holiday, state officials were not available to answer questions about the recall process before press time.

Telgenhof announces appointments

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

Charlevoix County prosecutor-elect Allen Telgenhof has announced the appointment of three attorneys to join him in his office beginning Jan. 1.

The new prosecutor and his staff will taking over after the Dec. 31 departure of outgoing prosecutor John Jarema. Telgenhof secured more than twice as many votes as Jarema in August's Republican primary election and did not face a challenger in November.

Telgenhof

A swearing-in ceremony for Telgenhof and the appointed attorneys will take place 3 p.m. Friday, Jan. 4, at the county courthouse.

Mark Muniak, former assistant prosecuting attorney, will be promoted to chief assistant prosecuting attorney, Katrina Martin will take over as assistant prosecuting attorney and Kerry Zahner will remain as special assistant prosecuting attorney, working in Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan counties.

"Mark has been with the office for eight years and has done a great job. He is well respected by judges and members of the law enforcement community," said Telgenhof.

The prosecutor-elect previously worked with Martin, the new assistant prosecutor, at two law firms, Running, Wise & Ford as well as Joseph, Corcoran, Telgenhof & Snyder.

"She is an extremely hardworking and effective attorney," said Telgenhof. "I am very grateful that she accepted the position."

Although all three of the attorneys will practice in all three of the county's courts — circuit, district and probate — Martin will focus on probate matters, while Muniak and Telgenhof will concentrate on misdemeanor and felony matters. Zahner currently handles domestic violence and criminal sexual conduct cases and will continue to do so in the future.

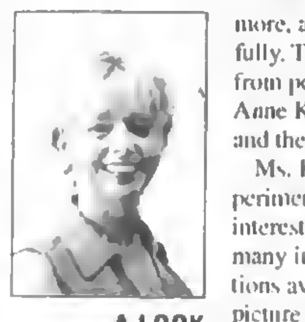
A New Year brings new beginnings



A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennell

Editor's note: Charlevoix Courier columnist Gayle Gennett said as she sat down to write her year-end column this week, she found herself unable to escape contemplating all the bad things that have happened during the past year. So, preferring to ring out the old year and welcome the new on a lighter note, she's resubmitted a humorous column that first appeared in the Courier in December of 2007.

My mind becomes more fuddled these days with age and menopause. Yesterday while getting my regularly scheduled "female," medical check up I received a telephone call from the assisted living complex to verify my 91 year old dad's pedicure.

Mind you, I am displayed like a turkey on a padded stainless steel tray and have a doctor at the helm so to speak. I answer my cell phone and listen to the sweet sounds of a young woman reminding me that dad's appointment is scheduled for "nine forty" (a.m.) My response was Sept. 40th? Did I say that aloud? After she carefully reiterated, "nine forty in the morning ma'm," I did realize my mistake. It's time to talk with the man in charge of my hormones about upping my estrogen intake.

This scenario was a good follow up to the beginning of my morning when I carefully placed my hormone replacement therapy pills into my purse so I wouldn't forget the name of the medicine or how many refills were left. Two questions usually asked and I struggle for the answer as if I were a Jeopardy contestant.

"I'll take medical history for $50 Alex."

To my surprise the lid had come off in transit and I found little yellow pills scattered throughout my purse like tic tacs on a school field trip. It's going to be a long day today.

Saying the wrong word, repeating incorrect information, and losing things were not part of my plan in the aging process.

"This will never happen to me," I would declare as a 20-something when I viewed similar situations with my own mother.

Well, it is happening to me and each day I try to find new ways to cope. I am hopeful no will notice that I've forgotten about a project I thought I hadn't started and much to my amazement I had already completed it. Or on the other hand a project I thought I had completed but actually never started.

Mom did warn me there would be days like this but I didn't listen. A comment I hear much too frequently from my own family members. Yes, I'm listening but my mind changes it around to how I would like it to be said or done.

Along with the aging process comes the flurry of ads to lift, tuck, exfoliate or color various parts of your body as if you were a mistake. At first I fell prey to the glamour and excitement colorfully displayed on the shiny pages of the magazine. All the beautiful 50- and 60-year old women in the ads were staring back at me with the enticement of a miracle product to make me look younger even though my mind was turning to the likes of cooked squash.

I've decided my new beginnings for the New Year will include to worry less, enjoy more, and accept aging gracefully. That graceful part came from perusing the article by Anne Kreamer entitled: "Sex and the Gray-Haired Woman."

Ms. Kreamer ran an experiment by posing as an interested client on one of the many internet love connections available. She posted a picture of herself as a brunette and again as the gray haired woman she truly is. The information she shared about herself was identical. The response came as a surprise when she received more attention from the gray haired photo. After meeting with various gentlemen who responded to her posting, she realized being true to herself is what men found attractive. This information should give a new level of confidence about going gray. Aging naturally lets others know we've lived and are confident with whom we are.

So as the new year is soon to begin, it's time for me to accept the fact that I can't be right about everything. I need to write more information down and refer to it occasionally. It's okay that my hair is changing its color and my youthful glow is dimming. The important thing to remember is that no one can take away my engaging laugh lines and quick smile that melts away the years and helps to soften the hearts of those who are trying to understand me.

Gayle Gennett is a retired educator and counselor with more than 30 years experience. She is currently a licensed professional counselor in private practice focusing on youth and couples counseling. She also oversees the Lay Chaplaincy Program at Charlevoix Area Hospital. She holds a bachelors degree in art education, a masters degree in guidance and counseling and post graduate work in administration all from Eastern Michigan University.

LETTERS to the editor

The fireplace: What's next?

Editor:

Now we are facing a recall of three (city) council members, the reasons vary, but clearly this is because of their support of this fireplace project.

Packed council meetings have proved that there is widespread opposition to this project from local residents and some local business owners.

Why a fireplace in the first place? It's too big. It doesn't go along with the nautical theme of the downtown area, and the idea that it will serve as a gathering spot is questionable at best. I was born in Charlevoix in 1942, and from my experience, most people would prefer shade to a heat source in the warm months.

The gas this will burn, running 24 hours-a-day will be a total waste of money the taxpayers will end up paying for.

As to the design, it reminds me of what is left standing after a house fire.

Let's put an end to this foolishness before it gets any worse.

Parris Halverson
Charlevoix

Editor's note: The plan for the fireplace has never called for it to be in constant operation. Instead, it has been proposed to operate on a timer that could be modified by season or as weather conditions might dictate.

Thanks from Women's Resource Center

Dear Editor:

We are filled with joy and appreciation for the generosity of Women's Recource Center of Northern Michigan donors, volunteers and the community. It brings to mind a quote by Anne Frank from The Diary of a Young Girl, in which she writes, "I don't think of all the misery, but of the beauty that remains."

Every day those of us at the center support individuals and families experiencing some of life's greatest challenges. We see the reverberations of domestic abuse, sexual assault, child abuse and child sexual assault. Yet, we must focus on what we can provide as an agency to support the women, children and families that come to us for help.

Quite simply, we could not provide the quality programs or level of services we do without the support of donors. Because of your generosity, we are able to provide a helping hand to lift people out of a place they may not wish to be. Every year our donors help us provide thousands of individuals with the opportunity for a better, happier life.

We thank dedicated volunteers for your precious donation of time and talent to the agency and those we serve. We thank donors for your many gifts—from financial donations to non-perishable goods for domestic abuse survivors and their children at the Safe Home. We thank the individuals, businesses and organizations who participate in sharing joy this season through the Christmas Families program. We thank the businesses and organizations that hold benefits on behalf of the center, as well as those who support these important benefits.

We are filled with joy and gratitude. We thank you for sharing the beauty of generosity, kindness and caring.

Best wishes to all for a safe, healthy and happy New Year!

Sincerely,
Janet M. Mancinelli
Executive Director, Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan

Thank you from the Joppa House

Editor:

What can we say? We stand in awe and wonder at the great project that is underway in our community called Joppa House Women's Transitional Home. We have so many people to thank for all the things they have done, great and small as well as those things that are going on behind the scenes.

We would like to give a huge thank-you to Manthei Development Corp. for the donation of the foundation that made the placement of the house a reality. Without that, we would still be in the planning stages. Many thanks to the following people, groups and contractors who have helped make our vision a reality: St. Mary's Cement, Landscape Logic, Performance Engineering, Dan Barron, The Catholic Diocese and St. Mary's Catholic Church, Sharrow Masonry, Dan Murray, Mike Louiselle, Greenwell Machine, Stevens Concrete, Swanson K & D, Dan Pardee, J & R House Movers, Doug Nitchman, Way Transportation, Sky Electric, Site Planning, Ferguson & Chamberlain, Clear Water Plumbing, Ron Vandenbrink and group, the Matthew 25 Project, Mike Smith, Wojan Window & Door, Jodi Alger, Georgeann Lindbergh, Charles Rehmann, Boy Scout Troop 11, our many volunteers and community service workers.

We still have a long way to go to complete this project, but we could not let this season go by without giving thanks to all of you and many more for all you have done.

The Scripture says in Matthew 5:16, "In the same way, let your light shine before men, that they may see your good deeds and praise your Father in heaven."

You all have let your light shine before men.

May God bless you!

Bridging our past with our future

LOOKING BACK…

During the late 1920s and early 1930s, Charlevoix hosted a winter sports carnival in the Mount McSauba area that attracted athletes and those who just wanted to have fun from all over. Trees on the southern slope of the hill were removed to form a combination ski slope, ski jump, and toboggan run, a trace of which can still be seen today. Near the base of the hill was a hockey rink. Hundreds of people gathered to watch the events, which included a hilarious parade along Bridge Street with many participants in costume. The first Winter Sports Queen, Angie Scott Supernaw who still resides on the north side of town, was crowned in 1930, the precursor to today's Venetian Queen. But the continuing Great Depression, than World War II brought a halt to the festivities. It wasn't until the mid 1950s that a determined group brought about the development of the northeast slope into the winter sports complex Charlevoix enjoys today. The Mount McSauba ski hill opened in 1956, Charlevoix's answer to Vail and St. Moritz, at least as far as the view is concerned.

Three writers join News-Review staff

MORGAN SHERBURNE
Northern Michigan Review

The Petoskey News-Review recently welcomed three new reporters into its fold.

Jamie Baumann has joined the staff as a part-time education reporter. Baumann, 60, graduated from Illinois State University with degrees in French and English and a minor in sociology. During college, she studied for a year in France.

Baumann

Baumann brings a background in public relations — she worked as the public relations director for Boyne Mountain and Boyne Highlands in the mid 1970s — as well as studies in journalism and ample experience as a freelancer to the News-Review. She was also the editor of the "Fun and Sun" section of the Charlevoix County Press in Boyne City during the mid 1970s.

A career in education has prepared Baumann well for her new beats, which include overall education, North Central Michigan College, the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District and Petoskey school features.

"I've basically spent my adult life working in schools," she said.

Previously, Baumann has taught English, French and journalism at the middle and high school levels in Michigan, Illinois and California and has served as a school administrator for several schools in Michigan, including East Jordan Public Schools and Boyne City Middle School. At those institutions, she served as the community education director and student success advisor, respectively.

But having freelanced for News-Review niche editor Sheri McWhirter-O'Donnell brought Baumann back into the news world.

"I'm returning to my writing roots," she said. "I'm looking forward to meeting people in the community and covering the good things that schools do every day."

Baumann is married to Jim Baumann, Boyne Area Chamber of Commerce chief executive officer, and she is originally from Illinois. She and her husband now live in Boyne City. The Baumanns have two children: Jeff Baumann, who teaches special education on the island of Oahu in Hawaii and daughter, Chelsea, who works as a bartender in California.

A Northern Periodontics employee by day and Petoskey News-Review writer by night, Mallory VanHorn has recently added to her duties at the News-Review.

Originally hired to update the calendar for the Web, the News-Review and in The Graphic, VanHorn has also begun writing for arts, food and entertainment.

"I've always had a knack with the written word; writing comes naturally to me," said VanHorn, who graduated from Lake Superior State University with a degree in history and a minor in English. She is originally from Sterling Heights.

VanHorn

At Lake Superior State University, she worked as a writing and grammar tutor. While in school, she interned at United Way of the Eastern Upper Peninsula, where she updated the organization's calendar, website, social networking and newsletters. After graduating, she worked at the Michigan Humane Society in Rochester Hills for six months, then moved to Petoskey in the summer of 2012.

"I didn't necessarily plan on entering the journalism field, but after working a few different jobs, I decided I missed writing," she said. "All my beats are fun and interesting, both to research and write. I also enjoy meeting the people behind my stories."

She and her husband, Kory, are newly married and live in Petoskey.

Finally, the sports department has gained a full-time reporter in Drew Kochanny.

Kochanny, 25, cut his sports reporting teeth at Northern Michigan University after an instructor suggested he write for the school newspaper.

"I didn't always know what I wanted to do, but I knew I wanted it to be something involved with sports," he said. "A college professor convinced me to write for the NMU paper my sophomore year because everything I wrote about in her class was about sports in some form. I really enjoyed getting closer to the game once I started. So I ran with it."

And run he did. After Kochanny graduated in 2010 with a degree in electronic journalism and a minor in journalism, he started a blog about sports called Inside the Locker Room, which is primarily about college football. The blog quickly drew a following, he said, and led to an opinion piece in the New York Times called "Don't Punish the Players," which examined whether the football players affected by the Penn State child abuse scandal should be punished.

Originally from Midland, Kochanny, was married in September to Heather Kochanny, formerly Godmar, who is from the area. He will be covering high school sports.

"I've always been a fan of high school sports and I've done a lot of college and some pro, but there are a lot of great stories and energy in high school sports," said Kochanny. "There are also some great offbeat sports opportunities in the area with all the different lakes and hills, something we didn't have where I grew up."

Kochanny

Kochanny hopes to start a weekly column and to become involved with online work as well.

"I'm someone who thinks the Internet is a great tool and can be a great thing for journalism," he said. "But I still like to have a tangible paper and get some ink on my hands."

Allan Potter named December Veteran of the Month

The Veteran of the Month for December 2012 is Allan Potter.

He was born April 4, 1920, in Barnard, Charlevoix County and attended the Warner Road School completing the eighth grade and his formal education in 1933 at the age of 14. He went to work full time on the family farm, to help support his family during the Great Depression, and on Sept. 26, 1942, Potter was inducted into the U.S. Army entering into active service on Oct. 10, 1942, in Kalamazoo and was assigned to Headquarters & Service Company, 87th Engineer, Heavy Pontoon Battalion, Camp Claiborne, La. Following basic training, Potter received specialty training in building and deploying heavy-duty pontoon bridges, to move vehicles and equipment across rivers, and operating storm boats to move infantry across rivers. Potter received a furlough on Jan. 4, 1944, to come home before his unit shipped overseas, and reported for duty on Jan. 16, 1944. On Feb. 11, 1944 he departed the U.S., from New York City, arriving in The European Theater of Operations on Feb. 24, 1944 and, following additional training in England, crossed the English Channel into France, in July of 1944, where he participated in battles and campaigns in Central Europe, Normandy, Northern France, the Ardennes and the Rhineland. Potter's unit built one of the pontoon bridges, across the Rhine River, to move General Patton's Army from France into Germany and they did it in 13 hours and under the cover of darkness. With the end of the war on May 8, 1945, Potter took a furlough from Oct. 16-22, 1945, and was authorized to visit, through a self conducted tour, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg reporting for duty on Oct. 23, 1945. On Nov. 22, 1945, Potter departed The European Theater of Operations arriving in the U.S. on Nov. 27, 1945, and on Dec. 2, 1945, at The Separation Center, Camp Atterbury, Ind., he was awarded an Honorable Discharge having attained the rank of Private First Class and received the following decorations and citations: The Good Conduct Medal; The Victory Medal of World War II; The American Theater Medal; The European, Asian, Middle Eastern Theater Medal with five Bronze Battle Stars and three Service Bars (each representing six months foreign service). Potter returned to the family farm and on March 20, 1948, he married Hellen Mae Brown on Brown Road, Norwood Township, Charlevoix County, and they bought a farm, and made their home in Banks Township, Antrim County. Potter was a farmer all his life and he enjoyed farming so much that it was also his hobby and he never really retired. On Jan. 28, 2012, Allan Potter answered the final call and is being honored by the Potter Family.

EMS funding solutions sought

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

EAST JORDAN — A subcommittee of six city and township leaders met recently to come up with ideas to solve the funding woes of the East Jordan Emergency Medical Service.

East Jordan EMS currently provides services for the city of East Jordan as well as six surrounding townships including Eveline, South Arm, Wilson, Banks, Echo and Jordan.

The cost of providing those services has risen in recent years and revenue has fallen. The gap between revenue and expenses for the department in 2011 was about $70,000 and in the last decade, contributions from the townships have more than doubled.

The budget problems stem from a reduction in Medicare and Medicaid reimbursements and less than successful collection efforts of past due bills, according to East Jordan City Manager Chris Yonker. Also, rising costs for equipment and fuel.

As budget shortfalls have grown the past few years and the city has asked for increasingly higher contributions from the townships to which it offers EMS services, the townships expressed interest in having more say in how the service is run and ownership in the effort.

"Instead of just paying out," said Yonker.

And so, the effort began to come up with a solution.

On Dec. 3, the EMS subcommittee met with Brian Graham, a prominent Charlevoix County attorney, to discuss options for ways to maintain the service, and also make it financially viable.

Creating an ambulance authority is one possibility for East Jordan.

An ambulance authority could lease the existing EMS building from the city and provide services or contract them through a private company.

An authority is a separate legal entity that could levy its own millage, or function on contributions from the various represented entities. In order for an authority to be formed, there would have to be a vote with pubic approval in the coverage area.

A second option the subcommittee explored would be to create an EMS department with its own budget and board members from all represented municipalities in the coverage area. The city would use general fund money to pay for its share of the agreement, or it could levy a specific millage for EMS to pay for it.

One reason he believes it is important to change the way the service is run, said Yonker, is because as the equipment and emergency vehicles begin to age, the need to replace them is critical, and funding for that is not currently in place.

He wants the service to "Get into a better way of doing business," he said, so that money can be set aside for future needs.

The city owns a fleet of seven vehicles ranging in age from a 6-year-old Ford F-450 Superduty 4x4 Box Ambulance to a 19-year-old Ford F-350 EMS Rescue.

The city currently does not have money set aside to replace the vehicles, said Yonker.

OBITUARY

Robert C. Pew II, 89

The chairman didn't much like having his picture taken, but he understood that the ad he'd approved required it. However, when the photographer arrived attired in a sweat shirt, khakis and a two-day stubble, the ad people despaired. And then the chairman demonstrated anew why he was such an effective leader. He got up, gave the photographer a hearty handshake and a big smile, and teased him about his outfit. The tensions evaporated, and the photographer was able to take a picture that captured the essential character of a remarkable human being.

On Dec. 22, the chairman, Robert C. Pew II, breathed his last, at Hospice of Palm Beach County, Florida, in the company of his sons John and Rob Pew, his daughter Kate Wolters, and his dear friend and stalwart partner, Patty Stichnoth. He was 89 years young.

The family he and his wife Mary (who died in 2007) created and nurtured also includes five grandchildren – Travis, Cary, John, Chris and Dylan Pew – and one great grand child – Alistair Pew.

Bob Pew was born in Syracuse, New York, graduated from Wesleyan University, and served in the U.S. Army Air Corps in World War Two and in the Korean Conflict. He signed on with Grand Rapids, Michigan-based Steelcase in 1952 as a manufacturing expediter, and led the company for 33 years. He became President and General Manager in 1966 and chaired the firm's Board of Directors from 1974 to 1999. In March of 1999, he was named Chairman Emeritus.

Under Bob Pew's leadership, Steelcase became the world's largest producer and distributor of office furniture and furnishings. As important as far as Bob Pew was concerned, Steelcase became one of the world's most admired and respected companies.

Bob Pew was a private man who supported many public activities – behind the scenes – in Michigan, in Florida and, indeed, across the United States. He was especially proud of the Robert and Mary Pew Public Education Fund, which he and his wife started and sustained.

If one could choose only one word to describe the way Bob Pew lived, it would be "understated." If one had but a single word to illustrate what he valued most, it would be "integrity."

He once remarked in an off-handed way that "the spouting whale gets harpooned." In short order, Steelcase's grapevine had spread the boss's casual remark across the company, and every Steelcase employee and dealer took it to heart. For his part, the boss was amazed – mostly because they'd misunderstood what he meant, which was simply "don't spout unless you have something to spout about."

Robert C. Pew II never ever spouted unless he had something to spout about.

In lieu of flowers the family requests contributions to the charity of your choice or the Charlevoix Community Foundation, 507 Water Street, P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727.

Chicago Club member, business man, philanthropist Robert Pew dies

Robert C. Pew II, former head of the Steelcase Company, philanthropist and longtime seasonal resident of Charlevoix's Chicago Club, died at Hospice of Palm Beach County, Florida, on Saturday, Dec. 22. He was 89.

Pew was well-known for his work at the head of the Grand Rapids-based Steelcase office furnishings company. According to biographical information on the company's website, Pew was named the company's board of directors chairman emeritus in March of 1999 after serving as the board's chairman for 25 years.

Pew's career with Steelcase Inc. spanned more than 47 years.

"Bob has played an integral role in the company's growth. Sales were $15 million in 1952 when he joined the company. Fiscal 1998 worldwide consolidated sales, including those of joint ventures, were $3.3 billion. In March 1989, he retired as chief executive officer, a position he held since 1966," The company's website reads.

Pew and his wife Mary, who preceded him in death in 2007, supported many community activities in Michigan, in Florida and, indeed, across the United States. He was especially proud of the Robert and Mary Pew Public Education Fund, which he and his wife started and sustained, according to his obituary.

The Pews also supported many efforts in Charlevoix.

Perhaps one of their most well-know contributions came in June of 1992 when they donated the Charlevoix Railroad Station to the Charlevoix Historical Society on the 100th anniversary of the first train arriving in Charlevoix.

The Depot building, which sits at the entrance to the city's Depot Beach park, has been restored and preserved with the help of money raised through several fundraisers and donations from local community and summer residents. Today the Depot building is used as a meeting place for history programs and other activities sponsored by the society.

The leadership of the Charlevoix Historical Society issued the following statement commenting on Pew's memory, "The Charlevoix Historical Society is deeply saddened to learn of the recent passing of patron Robert Pew, one of the Society's most loyal and longtime supporters. Mr. Pew quietly benefited not only this organization, but also many other groups in the Charlevoix area. His generosity helped these organizations thrive, and his interest in and love for the town and its surroundings were expressed by the support he gave to them."

Charlevoix County Community Foundation President Chip Hansen also remembered Pew as a "kind and generous man who had many charitable interests."

"His desire to help others was reflected in his actions, and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation will be ever grateful for his longtime help and support," Hansen said.

See above for Pew's complete obituary.

Storm leaves thousands without power

AEBRA COE
Northern Michigan Review

Just under a foot of snow fell across much of Northern Michigan on Thursday, Dec. 20 and Friday, Dec. 21.

While 10 inches was typical in most areas, Gaylord saw the heaviest snowfall in the region with a foot and a half.

Despite relatively moderate accumulation, several thousand households in Charlevoix and Emmet counties lost power at some point over the course of the weekend. Quite a few were without electricity from Thursday when the storm began until Sunday evening. As of Monday morning, all but 230 residents were back on the grid.

A power outage that affected several blocks of downtown Charlevoix on Friday, forced the Charlevoix County Building and businesses in the Oleson's Plaza to close.

Those are fairly typical amounts of snow for a winter storm, according to Keith Berger, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Gaylord, but what made this storm more hazardous than usual was the wetness and heaviness of the snow.

"That's something we're not used to here," Berger said of the high moisture content.

The heavy snow led to more power outages as it weighed down power lines and cracked branches and trees causing them to tumble onto lines.

"Usually we have lake effect snow up here which is a little

The bureau's board is now hoping to double-down on this year's success by more than doubling their investment next year.

The board not only plans to continue with the program (for which the minimum buy-in increases to 25,000 for 2013, but also plans to pursue two campaigns in the coming year — one for the summer months and one targeting would-be fall visitors — for a total investment of $50,000.

Camp Sea-Gull

Hayes Township officials appear to be a couple of votes and a few pen strokes a way from landing a multi-million dollar state grant that will provide the lions share of funds to purchase a former girls summer camp on the shores of Lake Charlevoix and turn it into a township park.

At its annual meeting Dec. 5, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Trust Fund Board voted unanimously to recommend approval for a $3.375 million grant application from the township to purchase the former Camp Sea-Gull property on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road.

The owners closed the camp in 2010 and put the 20-acre parcel, which includes 1,700 feet of Lake Charlevoix shoreline, up for sale.

Golovich said the township has already secured $650,000 in matching funds in the form of $500,000 in township funds set aside over the years for a park purchase, and contributions and pledges from private donors.

The proposal to the township to buy the camp property for a park has not been without opposition. A group of property owners came forward as the proposal and grant application have been discussed opposing the effort saying the park is not needed — given its proximity to Young State Park, and that the township should be spending its money on other things. Township officials supporting the purchase have called the purchase a "once in a lifetime opportunity" for the township.

Golovich said the opposition to the project did not come up in the trust fund board's deliberations of the project's merits.

The money in the trust fund comes from the proceeds from mineral rights leases on state-owned land and may only be used for the purchase or improvement of public recreational facilities. The recommendation will now go to the state legislature for its consideration. If approved, it will then go to the governor for his signature or veto.

If eventually approved and purchased, the township will have to find additional funds for the amenities it envisions for the park. Those amenities include:

— Township officials envision a launch for small boats, such as fishing and small recreational boats.

— The township wishes to preserve as many of the existing cabins and buildings to be rented out for overnight and short term visitors. At some time in the future rustic camping may be discussed.

— The township plans to use the year-round residence on the property to house an individual who will be present to manage the property. This is practiced in many other parks. The use of the residence would be a substantial part of the resident manager's compensation. This would be implemened as soon as possible after acquisition of the land.

Football coaching changes

The Charlevoix High School football program has been on a coaching merry-go-round over the past year. The procession of personnel started last December when Don Jess stepped down from the head varsity coaching position he had held for nine seasons.

Following Jess' departure from the post, the district convened a committee charged with finding a top-notch replacement.

After a search that drew more than 20 applicants — several from out of state — the committee settled on Jason Katt, the longtime defensive coordinator for Lowell High School's football program. Katt's pedigree at Lowell, which included several league, district, regional and state championships, held promise for the program.

In April, the school board approved hiring Katt as both its head varsity football coach and as a high school English teacher.

Katt had begun preparations for taking over the position and making the move to Charlevoix, however, in early June, Katt notified district officials that he would not be taking the position. Katt cited concerns over job security, linked to the district's ongoing budget struggles and sliding enrollment numbers.

Left without a head coach just prior to summer camps and less than two months before the start of pre-season practices, the district found itself scrambling to find a replacement.

In stepped Joe Pruchnicki.

Pruchnicki, 65, retired from coaching and teaching at Flat Rock High School in June. He had a 40-year career in coaching and teaching at various schools around the state. Pruchnicki, who owns a cabin on Starvation Lake near Mancelona threw his hat into the ring when he heard of the unexpected vacancy in June.

Pruchnicki who inherited a Charlevoix program that had posted a 41-44 record under Jess, including a 4-5 mark in 2011. Under Pruchnicki in 2012, the Rayders posted a 1-8 record.

Earlier this month Pruchnicki, citing nothing more than "personal reasons" tendered his resignation from the position.

School officials are again on the hunt for new coach. The position has been posted and the deadline for applications is Jan. 4.

School embezzlement

A year's long legal battle between the Diocese of Gaylord and the former principal of St. Mary School in in Charlevoix came to an end in April, when a judge sentenced Keisha Veryser, 37, of Hayes Township to serve a year in jail and pay $37,500 in restitution on two counts of embezzlement, $1,000-$20,000.

The charges stem from Veryser's employment as principal at St. Mary School from Aug. 1, 2006-March 17, 2010.

According to police and court documents, in March of 2010 Diocese of Gaylord officials asked Veryser to resign after they said they had discovered that she had been misappropriating funds for her own use.

Veryser resigned, but in October of that year, she filed a lawsuit against the diocese claiming she had been wrongfully discharged from her position. Veryser claimed that she was being made the scapegoat for shoddy bookkeeping practices that existed long before she took the principal's job. The diocese not only denied Veryser's claims in its answer, but also counter-sued her for repayment of the money.

Around the same time, the Michigan State Police began a criminal investigation into the matter.

After an 18-month investigation, the criminal charges against Veryser were issued on Oct. 31, 2011. In all, in court documents, police say Veryser embezzled more than $100,000 from the school.

Veryser pleaded guilty to the charges in March as part of a plea agreement with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office. In exchange for her pleas, three more identical charges and two counts of perjury in a non-court proceeding were dismissed. Veryser's suit against the diocese had been thrown out by a judge prior to the plea agreement.

Another part of the plea agreement with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office was that Veryser agreed a restitution amount of $75,000, with $37,500 to be paid at the time of sentencing.

Recently a judge granted Veryser early release from jail for good behavior. Neither the sheriff or the prosecutor's office opposed the early release.

REPEAL

are expected to be 100 percent, if local assessments are passed by voters.

Reimbursement to local units of governments for all other needs will be 80 percent of what those governments take in now from personal property taxes.

A portion of the state use tax currently going to the general fund will be dedicated to reimburse impacted local units. The change in the use tax will require statewide voter approval in August 2014 before taking effect.

"While most of us agree that we would prefer to not have the personal property tax in place, we must also agree that we need the replacement revenue," wrote Yonker. He believes that the tax should not be cut until Michigan voters approve the additional use tax, which is supposed to replace it.

"The two must be tie-barred," he said.

The city of Petoskey does not currently receive as large a percentage of its revenue from personal property taxes as East Jordan, but this legislation will still negatively impact the city, said Dan Ralley, city manager.

The tax on business equipment makes up about 3.5 percent of Petoskey's tax receipts and the anticipated loss for the city because of the repeal from 2012 to 2013 is $53,000. That includes reimbursements from a special assessment.

"The problem is, over the last three years, we have had to make a series of cuts," said Ralley, "It would be difficult for us to make additional cuts without impacting services to the community."

Also, the special assessment process to recover funding for police, fire and emergency services is murky, he said. "We're wading through the details to see what our options are."

STORM

dner," said Berger.

The relatively warm air temperature, close to freezing during the first two days of the storm, and the high moisture content from air flowing into the area from the Gulf of Mexico created the slushy mix.

Additionally, the sloppy snow froze as temperatures dropped into the mid-20s on Saturday creating a "perfect storm" for power outages, said Jeff Holifield, a spokesman for Consumers Energy.

"It was a major storm with very difficult restoration conditions," he said. "The true heroes here are the folks out in the field in those big, white and blue trucks."

During a storm, utility crews work in dangerous conditions for anywhere from 12 to 16 hours a day, he said. "They are true professionals."

Great Lakes Energy's north area lineworker crews were assisted by more than 20 extra line crews on Saturday and Sunday as they strived to restore power to those still without it.

The additional line crews include extra GLE crews from the electric cooperative's central and south areas who headed north after completing power restoration work in their areas. Electric cooperative and municipal electric crews from Michigan and Ohio were also called in along with other contracted crews. In addition, 25 contracted tree-trimming crews assisted the line crews.

BRIDGE DROP

Organizers said the Charlevoix Elks Club will be open to the public noon-close Dec. 29-31 and serve as a center of events for the weekend where wristbands can be purchased. Bracelets will also be available at: Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, Randall Chiropractic, Ace Hardware, Charlevoix State Bank, Staffords Weathervane Restaurant, Fox Motors, Clothing Company, and Elements.

Like the ball drop in Times Square, the event will culminate at 11:59 p.m. on Dec. 31 when the drawbridge will be raised and then lowered to coincide with the arrival of the new year at midnight. Starting at about 11:30 p.m., the deck at the Weathervane will have DJ Nikki Lee and serve as the center of the ceremonies leading up to midnight, Wilkin said.

Once the bridge is back down, organizers are planning a short, but noisy parade across the bridge. The parade will include emergency vehicles with lights and sirens going and a float carrying members of the Charlevoix schools class of 2013. Parade participants will carry sparklers and plans are in the works for some kind military-style ceremonial firearms salute. The organizers have also asked that the city's emergency siren atop city hall be activated at midnight.

Wilkin said the whole idea of the event is to draw people to the downtown and create excitement about the event and the community. She said that she and Randall are hopeful that this year's event serves as a catalyst to bigger and better events in coming years that eventually an organization might be willing to take on.

For more information on the event, including a complete listing of events and participating businesses visit www.bridgedrop.com, or call Wilkin at (231) 547-2101.

After a successful fall broadcasting a number of Charlevoix Rayder sporting events via the internet, the school's School Broadcast Program is planning a full slate of coverage for winter sports events in the coming weeks.

Sparky Nitchman, who is heading up the program in Northern Michigan, said students in Karen Peterson's Yearbook class produced four football games and three volleyball games this fall, with at least five boys and five girls basketball games to be produced this winter. He said the program has been very well-received so far.

"We are also planning on incorporating student play-by-play into all of our basketball broadcasts," Nitchman said.

"Cassie McCraney, a Charlevoix High School sophomore, provided the play-by-play for the girls varsity basketball game against Harbor Springs on Dec. 7 and did a phenomenal job," Nitchman said.

Nitchman, 25, a 2005 graduate of Charlevoix High School who brought the program to 10 Northern Michigan schools, including Charlevoix and Ellsworth earlier this year.

Nitchman recently received his master's degree in sports management from Central Michigan University, and wanted to expand on a student-led, sports broadcast program that has been successful in the southern parts of the state. The program, which works in conjunction with local school districts, the Michigan Interscholastic Connection and the Michigan High School Athletic Association, provides schools with professional video production equipment, such as an HD camera, a laptop, tripod and video editing software. Students receive training on the equipment, then are able to produce shows throughout the year, such as athletic events, graduations and school performances.

The program has already produced several games for the early part of the basketball season and also produced a broadcast of the Charlevoix High School/Charlevoix Middle School band concert on Dec. 12 and National Honor Society Induction on Dec. 13.

Right now the program is scheduled to produce at least 16 Rayder sports events during January and February.

Events are posted to the program's website for viewing for free shortly after each game's completion.

Charlevoix program is available at Charlevoix's website is located at www.MHSAA.tv/Charlevoix. Ellsworth's program is available online at www.MHSAA.tv/Ellsworth.

Currently, 12 Northern Michigan school districts are involved in the program — Alcona, Au Gres-Sims, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Elk Rapids, Ellsworth, Hillman, Inland Lakes, Onaway, Oscoda Petoskey and Rogers City. Cheboygan and Oscoda just signed on earlier this month. Nitchman hopes to have 20 schools on board by the end of the calendar year.

A community collaboration of local agencies and organizations is working to bring Joe Ehrmann to North Central Michigan College for an evening lecture, as well as a coaching workshop in March. Pictured around a promotional banner at North Central's Student and Community Resource Center are (from left) Wendy Fought, director of student activities, North Central Michigan College; Ron Goodman, executive director, Beyond the Scoreboard; Mishelle Shooka, scholarship and youth advisory committee program associate, Charlevoix County Community Foundation; Sara Ward, program officer, Petoskey-Harbor Springs Community Foundation; and Jan Mancinelli, executive director, Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan.

A collaborative effort between Beyond the Scoreboard, North Central Michigan College and the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan has been granted funds through the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Youth and Community Endowment Funds of the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation. The funds will be used to help bring Joe Ehrmann, a former NFL defensive lineman, author, coach and speaker to North Central Michigan College for two free events in March 2013: a community lecture and a coaching workshop.

The lecture is a part of North Central's ongoing lecture series during which Ehrmann will share his vision for transforming the culture of sports. His message clarifies the purpose of sports and education as a means by which the essential qualities of empathy, kindness, respect, compassion and appreciation can be developed in young men and women. The lecture will take place at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 21, in the Student and Community Resource Center on the campus of North Central Michigan College in Petoskey. The lecture is free; however a ticket will be required for entry. Tickets will be available after Feb. 1, at the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan administrative office, Gold Mine Resale Shops and all North Central Michigan College locations.

The half-day coaching workshop is open to coaches, athletes, sports boosters, parents and both youth and community leaders. During Ehrmann's workshop attendees learn how they can make positive, life-changing impact on players and students, as well as how to help them be their personal best now and throughout their lives. The workshop will take place from 8:30 a.m.-noon Friday, March 22, in the Library Conference Rooms at North Central Michigan College. Those interested in attending the free workshop may register online at wrcnm.org, or by calling the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan administrative office at (231) 347-0067 or Beyond the Scoreboard at (231) 622-2223.

Joe Ehrmann, the featured presenter for both events, has been called "The Most Important Coach in America" by PARADE magazine and was also named one of "The 100 Most Influential Sports Educators in America" by the Institute for International Sport. Ehrmann, who was the subject of the New York Times Bestseller, Seasons of Life, is recognized as an inspirational and dynamic speaker who works with corporate, civic and community organizations and associations to promote growth, teamwork, effectiveness and individual responsibility. His approach to his work is grounded in the lessons and experiences of his own life and the impact he has had on others.

This collaborative project is also supported by the 100 Men Campaign and Violence Prevention Team. For more information, contact Ron Goodman, executive director of Beyond the Scoreboard at (231) 622-2223 or the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan administrative office at (231) 347-0067.

The bureau's board is now hoping to double-down on this year's success by more than doubling their investment next year.

The board not only plans to continue with the program (for which the minimum buy-in increases to 25,000 for 2013, but also plans to pursue two campaigns in the coming year — one for the summer months and one targeting would be fall visitors — for a total investment of $50,000.

Camp Sea-Gull

Hayes Township officials appear to be a couple of votes and a few pen strokes away from landing a multi-million dollar state grant that will provide the lions share of funds to purchase a former girls summer camp on the shores of Lake Charlevoix and turn it into a township park.

At its annual meeting Dec. 5, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Trust Fund Board voted unanimously to recommend approval for a $3.375 million grant application from the township to purchase the former Camp Sea-Gull property on Boyne City Charlevoix Road.

The owners closed the camp in 2010 and put the 20 acre parcel, which includes 1,700 feet of Lake Charlevoix shoreline, up for sale.

Golovich said the township has already secured $650,000 in matching funds in the form of $500,000 in township funds set aside over the years for a park purchase, and contributions and pledges from private donors.

The proposal to the township to buy the camp property for a park has not been without opposition. A group of property owners came forward as the proposal and grant application have been discussed opposing the effort saying the park is not needed — given its proximity to Young State Park, and that the township should be spending its money on other things. Township officials supporting the purchase have called the purchase a "once in a lifetime opportunity" for the township.

Golovich said the opposition to the project did not come up in the trust fund board's deliberations of the project's merits.

The money in the trust fund comes from the proceeds from mineral rights leases on state-owned land and may only be used for the purchase or improvement of public recreational facilities. The recommendation will now go to the state legislature for its consideration. If approved, it will then go to the governor for his signature or veto.

If eventually approved and purchased, the township will have to find additional funds for the amenities it envisions for the park. Those amenities include:

Township officials envision a launch for small boats, such as fishing and small recreational boats.

The township wishes to preserve as many of the existing cabins and buildings to be rented out for overnight and short term visitors. At some time in the future rustic camping may be discussed.

The township plans to use the year-round residence on the property to house an individual who will be present to manage the property. This is practiced in many other parks. The use of the residence would be a substantial part of the resident manager's compensation. This would be implemented as soon as possible, after acquisition of the land.

Football coaching changes

The Charlevoix High School football program has been on a coaching merry go-round over the past year. The procession of personnel started last December when Don Jess stepped down from the head varsity coaching position he had held for nine seasons.

Following Jess' departure from the post, the district convened a committee charged with finding a top notch replacement.

After a search that drew more than 20 applicants — several from out of state — the committee settled on Jason Katt, the longtime defensive coordinator for Lowell High School's football program. Katt's pedigree at Lowell, which included several league, district, regional and state championships, held promise for the program.

In April, the school board approved hiring Katt as both its head varsity football coach and as a high school English teacher.

Katt had begun preparations for taking over the position and making the move to Charlevoix, however, in early June, Katt notified district officials that he would not be taking the position. Katt cited concerns over job security, linked to the district's ongoing budget struggles and sliding enrollment numbers.

Left without a head coach just prior to summer camps and less than two months before the start of pre-season practices, the district found itself scrambling to find a replacement.

In stepped Joe Pruchnicki.

Pruchnicki, 65, retired from coaching and teaching at Flat Rock High School in June. He had a 40-year career in coaching and teaching at various schools around the state. Pruchnicki, who owns a cabin on Starvation Lake near Mancelona threw his hat into the ring when he heard of the unexpected vacancy in June.

Pruchnicki who inherited a Charlevoix program that had posted a 41-44 record under Jess, including a 4-5 mark in 2011. Under Pruchnicki in 2012, the Rayders posted a 1-8 record.

Earlier this month Pruchnicki, citing nothing more than "personal reasons" tendered his resignation from the position.

School officials are again on the hunt for new coach. The position has been posted and the deadline for applications is Jan 4.

School embezzlement

A year's long legal battle between the Diocese of Gaylord, and the former principal of St. Mary School in in Charlevoix came to an end in April when a judge sentenced Keisha Veryser, 37, of Hayes Township to serve a year in jail and pay $37,500 in restitution on two counts of embezzlement, $1,000-$20,000.

The charges stem from Veryser's employment as principal at St. Mary School from Aug. 1, 2006-March 17, 2010.

According to police and court documents, in March of 2010 Diocese of Gaylord officials asked Veryser to resign after they said they had discovered that she had been misappropriating funds for her own use.

Veryser resigned, but in October of that year, she filed a lawsuit against the diocese claiming she had been wrongfully discharged from her position. Veryser claimed that she was being made the scapegoat for shoddy bookkeeping practices that existed long before she took the principal's job. The diocese not only denied Veryser's claims in its answer, but also counter-sued her for repayment of the money.

Around the same time, the Michigan State Police began a criminal investigation into the matter.

After an 18-month investigation, the criminal charges against Veryser were issued on Oct. 31, 2011. In all, in court documents, police say Veryser embezzled more than $100,000 from the school.

Veryser pleaded guilty to the charges in March as part of a plea agreement with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office. In exchange for her pleas, three more identical charges and two counts of perjury in a non-court proceeding were dismissed. Veryser's suit against the diocese had been thrown out by a judge prior to the plea agreement.

Another part of the plea agreement with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office was that Veryser agreed a restitution amount of $75,000, with $37,500 to be paid at the time of sentencing.

Recently a judge granted Veryser early release from jail for good behavior. Neither the sheriff or the prosecutor's office opposed the early release.

BRIDGE DROP

Organizers said the Charlevoix Elks Club will be open to the public noon-close Dec. 29-31 and serve as a center of events for the weekend where wristbands can be purchased. Bracelets will also be available at: Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, Randall Chiropractic, Ace Hardware, Charlevoix State Bank, Staffords Weathervane Restaurant, Fox Motors, Clothing Company, and Elements.

Like the ball drop in Times Square, the event will culminate at 11:59 p.m. on Dec. 31 when the drawbridge will be raised and then lowered to coincide with the arrival of the new year at midnight. Starting at about 11:30 p.m., the deck at the Weathervane will have DJ Nikki Lee and serve as the center of the ceremonies leading up to midnight, Wilkin said.

Once the bridge is back down, organizers are planning a short, but noisy parade across the bridge. The parade will include emergency vehicles with lights and sirens going and a float carrying members of the Charlevoix schools class of 2013. Parade participants will carry sparklers and plans are in the works for some kind military-style ceremonial firearms salute. The organizers have also asked that the city's emergency siren atop city hall be activated at midnight.

Wilkin said the whole idea of the event is to draw people to the downtown and create excitement about the event and the community. She said that she and Randall are hopeful that this year's event serves as a catalyst to bigger and better events in coming years, that eventually an organization might be willing to take on.

For more information on the event, including a complete listing of events and participating businesses visit www.bridgedrop.com, or call Wilkin at (231) 547-2101.

are expected to be 100 percent, if local assessments are passed by voters.

Reimbursement to local units of governments for all other needs will be 80 percent of what those governments take in now from personal property taxes.

A portion of the state use tax currently going to the general fund will be dedicated to reimburse impacted local units. The change in the use tax will require statewide voter approval in August 2014 before taking effect.

"While most of us agree that we would prefer to not have the personal property tax in place, we must also agree that we need the replacement revenue," wrote Yonker. He believes that the tax should not be cut until Michigan voters approve the additional use tax, which is supposed to replace it.

"The two must be tie-barred," he said.

The city of Petoskey does not currently receive as large a percentage of its revenue from personal property taxes as East Jordan, but this legislation will still negatively impact the city, said Dan Ralley, city manager.

The tax on business equipment makes up about 3.5 percent of Petoskey's tax receipts and the anticipated loss for the city because of the repeal from 2012 to 2013 is $53,000. That includes reimbursements from a special assessment.

"The problem is, over the last three years, we have had to make a series of cuts," said Ralley. "It would be difficult for us to make additional cuts without impacting services to the community."

Also, the special assessment process to recover funding for police, fire and emergency services is murky, he said. "We're wading through the details to see what our options are."

duer," said Berger.

The relatively warm air temperature, close to freezing during the first two days of the storm, and the high moisture content from air flowing into the area from the Gulf of Mexico created the slushy mix.

Additionally, the sloppy snow froze as temperatures dropped into the mid 20s on Saturday creating a "perfect storm" for power outages, said Jeff Holtfeld, a spokesman for Consumers Energy.

"It was a major storm with very difficult restoration conditions," he said. "The true heroes here are the folks out in the field in those big, white and blue trucks."

During a storm, utility crews work in dangerous conditions for anywhere from 12 to 16 hours a day, he said. "They are true professionals."

Great Lakes Energy's north area lineworker crews were assisted by more than 20 extra line crews on Saturday and Sunday as they strived to restore power to those still without it.

The additional line crews include extra GLE crews from the electric cooperative's central and south areas who headed north after completing power restoration work in their areas. Electric cooperative and municipal electric crews from Michigan and Ohio were also called in along with other contracted crews. In addition, 25 contracted tree-trimming crews assisted the line crews.
